Generally brāhmaṇas and sannyāsīs are very proud of their spiritual positions. Therefore, to cut down their false pride, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu preached Kṛṣṇa consciousness through Rāmānanda Rāya, who was neither a member of the renounced order nor a born brāhmaṇa. indeed, Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya was a gr̥hastha belonging to the śūdra class, yet Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu arranged for him to be the master who taught Pradyumna Miśra, a highly qualified brāhmaṇa born in a brāhmaṇa family. Even Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself, although belonging to the renounced order, took instruction from Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya. In this way Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu exhibited His opulence through Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya. That is the special significance of this incident.

According to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's philosophy, yei kṛṣṇa-tattva-vettā, sei 'guru' haya: anyone who knows the science of Kṛṣṇa can become a spiritual master, without reference to whether or not he is a brāhmaṇa or sannyāsī.

Ordinary people cannot understand the essence of śāstra, nor can they understand the pure character, behavior and abilities of strict followers of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's principles. The Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is creating pure, exalted Vaiṣṇavas even from those born in families considered lower than those of śūdras. This is proof that a Vaiṣṇava may appear in any family, as confirmed in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam:

kirāta-hūṇāndhra-pulinda-pulkaśā

ābhīra-śumbhā yavanāḥ khasādayaḥ ye 'nye ca pāpā yad-apāśrayāśrayāḥ

śudhyanti tasmai prabhaviṣṇave namaḥ

"Kirāta, Hūṇa, Āndhra, Pulinda, Pulkaśa, Ābhīra, Śumbha, Yavana and the Khasa races, and even others addicted to sinful acts, can be purified by taking shelter of the devotees of the Lord, for He is the supreme power. I beg to offer my respectful obeisances unto Him." (Bhāg. 2.4.18) By the grace of the Supreme Lord Viṣṇu, one can be completely purified, become a preacher of Kṛṣṇa consciousness, and become the spiritual master of the entire world. This principle is accepted in all Vedic literature. Evidence can be quoted from authoritative śāstras showing how a lowborn person can become the spiritual master of the entire world. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is to be considered the most munificent personality, for He distributes the real essence of Vedic śāstras to anyone who becomes qualified by becoming His sincere servant.

'bhakti', 'prema', 'tattva' kahe rāye kari' 'vaktā'

āpani pradyumna-miśra-saha haya 'śrotā' //CC Antya, 5.85//

SYNONYMS

bhakti—devotional service; prema—ecstatic love; tattva—truth; kahe—He says; rāye—Rāmānanda Rāya; kari'-by making; vaktā—the speaker; āpani—Himself; pradyumna-miśra—Pradyumna Miśra; saha—with; haya śrotā—becomes the listener.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu preached about devotional service, ecstatic love and the Absolute Truth by making Rāmānanda Rāya, a gr̥hastha born in a low family, the speaker. Then Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Himself, the exalted brāhmaṇa-sannyāsī, and Pradyumna Miśra, the purified brāhmaṇa, both became the hearers of Rāmānanda Rāya.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura says in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya that sannyāsīs in the line of Śaṅkarācārya always think that they have performed all the duties of brāhmaṇas and that, furthermore, having understood the essence of Vedānta-sūtra and become sannyāsīs, they are the natural spiritual masters of all society. Similarly, persons born in brāhmaṇa families think that because they execute the ritualistic ceremonies recommended in the Vedas and follow the principles of smṛti, they alone can become spiritual masters of society. These highly exalted brāhmaṇas think that unless one is born in a brāhmaṇa family, one cannot become a spiritual master and teach the Absolute Truth. To cut down the pride of these birthright brāhmaṇas and Māyāvādī sannyāsīs, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu proved that a person like Rāmānanda Rāya, although born in a śūdra family and situated in the gr̥hastha-āśrama, can become the spiritual master of such exalted personalities as Himself and Pradyumna Miśra. This is the principle of the Vaiṣṇava cult, as evinced in the teachings of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. A person who knows what is spiritual and what is material and who is firmly fixed in the spiritual position can be jagad-guru, the spiritual master of the entire world. One cannot become jagad-guru simply by advertising oneself as jagad-guru without knowing the essential principles for becoming jagad-guru. Even people who never see what a jagad-guru is and never talk with other people become puffed-up sannyāsīs and declare themselves jagad-gurus. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not like this. Any person who knows the science of Kṛṣṇa and who is fully qualified in spiritual life can become jagad-guru. Thus Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu personally took lessons from Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya and also sent Pradyumna Miśra, an exalted brāhmaṇa, to take lessons from him.

śrī-caitanya-līlā—transcendental activities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ei—these; amṛtera sindhu—the ocean of nectar; tri-jagat—the three worlds; bhāsāite—to inundate; pāre—is able; yāra—of which; eka bindu—one drop.

TRANSLATION

The activities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are just like an ocean of nectar. Even a drop of this ocean can inundate all the three worlds.

PURPORT

To inundate the three worlds with nectar is the purpose of the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. How this could be possible was exhibited by Śrīla Raghunātha Gosvāmī and later by Ṭhākura Narottama dāsa and Śyāmānanda Gosvāmī, who all represented the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Now that same mercy is overflowing the entire world through the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. The present Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement is nondifferent from the pastimes performed by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu when He was personally present, for the same principles are being followed and the same actions performed without fail.

TRANSLATION

If there were a hint that transcendental mellows overlapped in a manner contrary to the principles of the bhakti cult, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would not tolerate it and would become very angry.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura quotes the following definition of rasābhāsa from the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (Uttara-vibhāga, Ninth Wave, 1-3,20,22,24):

pūrvam evānuśiṣṭena

rasābhāsāś ca kecana

A mellow temporarily appearing transcendental but contradicting mellows previously stated and lacking some of a mellow's necessities is called rasābhāsa, an overlapping mellow, by advanced devotees who know how to taste transcendental mellows. Such mellows are called uparasa (submellows), anurasa (imitation transcendental mellows) and aparasa (opposing transcendental mellows). Thus the overlapping of transcendental mellows is described as being first grade, second grade or third grade. When the twelve mellows-such as neutrality, servitorship and friendship-are characterized by adverse sthāyi-bhāva, vibhāva and anubhāva ecstasies, they are known as uparasa, submellows. When the seven indirect transcendental mellows and the dried up mellow of neutrality are produced by devotees and moods not directly related to Kṛṣṇa and devotional service in ecstatic love, they are described as anurasa, imitation mellows. If Kṛṣṇa and the enemies who harbor feelings of opposition toward Him are respectively the object and abodes of the mellow of laughter, the resulting feelings are called aparasa, opposing mellows. Experts in distinguishing one mellow from another sometimes accept some overlapping transcendental mellows (rasābhāsa) as rasas due to their being pleasurable and tasteful. Śrīla Viśvanātha Cakravartī Ṭhākura says, paraspara-vairayor yadi yogas tadā rasābhāsaḥ: "When two opposing transcendental mellows overlap, they produce rasābhāsa, or an overlapping of transcendental mellows."

ullāsa—joy.

TRANSLATION

"In the writings of so-called poets there is generally a possibility of overlapping transcendental mellows. When the mellows thus go against the conclusive understanding, no one likes to hear such poetry.

PURPORT

Yadvā-tadvā kavi refers to anyone who writes poetry without knowledge of how to do so. Writing poetry, especially poetry concerning the Vaiṣṇava conclusion, is very difficult. If one writes poetry without proper knowledge, there is every possibility that the mellows will overlap. When this occurs, no learned or advanced Vaiṣṇava will like to hear it.

TRANSLATION

"Hearing the poetry of a person who has no transcendental knowledge and who writes about the relationships between man and woman simply causes unhappiness, whereas hearing the words of a devotee fully absorbed in ecstatic love causes great happiness.

PURPORT

Grāmya-kavi refers to a poet or writer such as the authors of novels and other fiction who write only about the relationships between man and woman. Vidagdha-ātmīya-vākya, however, refers to words written by a devotee who fully understands pure devotional service. Such devotees, who follow the paramparā system, are sometimes described as sajātīyāśaya-snigdha, or "pleasing to the same class of people." Only the poetry and other writings of such devotees are accepted with great happiness by devotees.

When everyone present heard the verse, they all commended the poet, but Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī requested him, "Kindly explain this verse."

kavi kahe,--'jagannātha--sundara-śarīra caitanya-gosāñi--śarīrī mahā-dhīra //CC Antya, 5.114//

SYNONYMS

kavi kahe—the poet said; jagannātha—Lord Jagannātha; sundara-śarīra—very beautiful body; caitanya-gosāñi—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; śarīrī—possessor of the body; mahā-dhīra—very grave.

TRANSLATION

The poet said, "Lord Jagannātha is a most beautiful body, and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who is exceptionally grave, is the owner of that body.

PURPORT

Śarīrī refers to a person who owns the śarīra, or body. As stated in Bhagavad-gītā:

dehino 'smin yathā dehe

kaumāraṁ yauvanaṁ jarā

tathā dehāntara-prāptir

dhīras tatra na muhyati

"As the embodied soul continually passes, in this body, from boyhood to youth to old age, the soul similarly passes into another body at death. The self-realized soul is not bewildered by such a change." (Bg. 2.13) For the ordinary living being in material existence there is a division or distinction between the body and the owner of the body. In spiritual existence, however, there is no such distinction, for the body is the owner himself and the owner is the body itself. In spiritual existence, everything must be spiritual. Therefore there is no distinction between the body and its owner.

tānre kaili jaḍa-naśvara-prākṛta-kāya!! //CC Antya, 5.118//

SYNONYMS

pūrṇa-ānanda—complete transcendental bliss; cit-svarūpa—the spiritual identity; jagannātha-rāya—Lord Jagannātha; tānre—Him; kaili—you have made; jaḍa—inert; naśvara—perishable; prākṛta—material; kāya—possessing a body.

TRANSLATION

"Lord Jagannātha is completely spiritual and full of transcendental bliss, but you have compared Him to a dull, destructible body composed of the inert, external energy of the Lord.

PURPORT

If one thinks that the form of Lord Jagannātha is an idol made of wood, he immediately brings ill fortune into his life. According to the direction of the Padma Purāṇa: arcye viṣṇau śilā-dhīḥ. ..yasya vā nārakī saḥ. Thus one who thinks that the body of Lord Jagannātha is made of matter and who distinguishes between Lord Jagannātha's body and soul is condemned, for he is an offender. A pure devotee who knows the science of Kṛṣṇa consciousness makes no distinction between Lord Jagannātha and His body. He knows that they are identical, just as Lord Kṛṣṇa and His soul are one and the same. When one's eyes are purified by devotional service performed on the spiritual platform, one can actually envision Lord Jagannātha and His body as being completely spiritual.

The advanced devotee, therefore, does not see the worshipable Deity to have a soul within a body like an ordinary human being. There is no distinction between the body and soul of Lord Jagannātha, for Lord Jagannātha is sac-cid-ānanda-vigraha, just as the body of Kṛṣṇa is sac-cid-ānanda-vigraha. There is actually no difference between Lord Jagannātha and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, but the ignorant poet from Bengal applied a material distinction to the body of Lord Śrī Jagannātha.

pūrṇa-ṣaḍ-aiśvarya caitanya--svayaṁ bhagavān

tāñre kaili kṣudra jīva sphuliṅga-samāna!! //CC Antya, 5.119//

SYNONYMS

pūrṇa—complete; ṣaḍ-aiśvarya—possessing six opulences; caitanya—Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; svayaṁ—Himself; bhagavān—the Supreme Personality of Godhead; tāñre—Him; kaili—you have made; kṣudra jīva—an ordinary living entity; sphuliṅga-samāna—exactly equal to the spark.

TRANSLATION

"You have calculated Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, full in six opulences, to be on the level of an ordinary living being. Instead of knowing Him as the supreme fire, you have accepted Him as a spark."

PURPORT

In the Upaniṣads it is said, yathāgner visphuliṅgā vyuccaranti: the living entities are like sparks of fire, and His Lordship the Supreme Personality of Godhead is considered the original great fire. When we hear this śruti-vākya, or message from the Vedas, we should understand the distinction between the Supreme Lord Kṛṣṇa and the living entities. A person under the control of the external energy, however, cannot understand that distinction. Such a person cannot understand that the Supreme Person is the original great fire, whereas the living entities are simply small fragmental parts of that Supreme Personality of Godhead. As Kṛṣṇa says in Bhagavad-gītā (15.7):

mamaivāṁśo jīva-loke

jīva-bhūtaḥ sanātanaḥ

manah ṣaṣṭhānīndriyāṇi

prakṛti-sthāni karṣati

"The living entities in this conditioned world are My eternal, fragmental parts. Due to conditioned life, they are struggling very hard with the six senses, which include the mind."

There is a distinction between the body and soul of the materially existing living being, but because Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Lord Jagannātha do not possess material bodies, there is no distinction between Their bodies and souls. On the spiritual platform, body and soul are identical; there is no distinction between them. As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam:

etad īśanam īśasya

prakṛti-stho 'pi tad-guṇaiḥ

na yujyate sadātma-sthair

yathā buddhis tad-āśrayā

"This is the divinity of the Personality of Godhead. He is not affected by the qualities of material nature, even though He is in contact with them. Similarly, the devotees who have taken shelter of the Lord cannot be influenced by the material qualities." (Bhāg. 1.11.38) His Lordship the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, is unaffected by the influence of the three modes of material nature. Indeed, His devotees are also unpolluted by the influence of the external energy because they engage in the service of His Lordship. Even the very body of a devotee becomes spiritualized, just as an iron rod put into fire becomes as qualified as fire because it becomes red hot and will immediately burn anything it touches. Therefore the poet from Bengal committed a great offense by treating Lord Jagannātha's body and Lord Jagannātha, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, as two different entities, material and spiritual, as if the Lord were an ordinary living being. The Lord is always the master of the material energy; therefore He is not doomed to be covered by the material energy like an ordinary living entity.

SYNONYMS

dui-ṭhāñi—unto both; aparādhe—by offense; pāibi—you will get; durgati—hellish destination; a-tattva-jña—one who has no knowledge of the Absolute Truth; tattva varṇe—describes the Absolute Truth; tāra—his; ei—this; rīti—course.

TRANSLATION

Svarūpa Dāmodara continued, "Because you have committed an offense to Lord Jagannātha and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, you will attain a hellish destination. You do not know how to describe the Absolute Truth, but nevertheless you have tried to do so. Therefore you must be condemned.

PURPORT

The brāhmaṇa poet from Bengal was an offender in the estimation of Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī, for although the poet had no knowledge of the Absolute Truth, he had nevertheless tried to describe it. The Bengali poet was an offender to both Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Lord Jagannātha. Because he had made a distinction between Lord Jagannātha's body and soul and because he had indicated that Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was different from Lord Jagannātha, he had committed offenses to Them both. A-tattva-jña refers to one who has no knowledge of the Absolute Truth or who worships his own body as the Supreme personality of Godhead. If an ahaṅgrahopāsaka-māyāvādī, a person engaged in fruitive activities or a person interested only in sense gratification, describes the Absolute Truth, he immediately becomes an offender.

Antya TEXT 5.121

āra eka kariyācha parama 'pramāda'!

deha-dehi-bheda īśvare kaile 'aparādha'! //CC Antya, 5.121//

SYNONYMS

āra eka—another one; kariyācha—you have done; parama—the supreme; pramāda—illusion; deha-dehi-bheda—the distinction between the body and soul; īśvare—in His Lordship; kaile—you have done; aparādha—an offense.

TRANSLATION

"You are in complete illusion, for you have distinguished between the body and soul of His Lordship [Lord Jagannātha or Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu]. That is a great offense.

PURPORT

When one differentiates between the body and soul of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he immediately becomes an offender. Because the living entities in the material world are generally covered by material bodies, the body and soul of an ordinary human being cannot be identical. The Supreme Lord bestows the fruits of one's activities, for He is the Lord of the results of fruitive action. He is also the cause of all causes, and He is the master of the material energy. Therefore He is supreme. An ordinary living being, however, in his material condition, enjoys the results of his own fruitive activities and therefore falls under their influence. Even in the liberated stage of brahma-bhūta identification, he engages in rendering service to His Lordship. Thus there are distinctions between an ordinary human being and the Supreme Lord. Karmīs and jñānīs who ignore these distinctions are offenders against the lotus feet of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

An ordinary human being is prone to be subjugated by the material energy, whereas His Lordship the Supreme Personality of Godhead-Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Lord Kṛṣṇa or Lord Jagannātha-is always the master of the material energy and is therefore never subject to its influence. His Lordship the Supreme Personality of Godhead has an unlimited spiritual identity, never to be broken, whereas the consciousness of the living entity is limited and fragmented. The living entities are fragmental portions of the Supreme Personality of Godhead eternally (mamaivāṁśo jīva-loke jīva-bhūtaḥ sanātanaḥ). It is not that they are covered by the material energy in conditioned life but become one with the Supreme Personality of Godhead when freed from the influence of material energy. Such an idea is offensive.

According to the considerations of Māyāvādī fools, the Supreme Personality of Godhead accepts a material body when He appears in the material world. A Vaiṣṇava, however, knows perfectly well that for Kṛṣṇa, Lord Jagannātha or Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu-unlike ordinary human beings-there is no distinction between the body and the soul. Even in the material world His Lordship retains His spiritual identity; therefore Lord Kṛṣṇa exhibited all opulences even in His childhood body. There is no distinction between the body and soul of Kṛṣṇa; whether He is in His childhood body or His youthful body, He is always identical with His body. Even though Kṛṣṇa appears like an ordinary human being, He is never subjected to the rules and regulations of the material world. He is svarāṭ, or fully independent. He can appear in the material world, but contrary to the offensive conclusion of the Māyāvāda school, He has no material body. In this connection one may again refer to the above-mentioned verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.11.38):

etad īśanam īśasya

prakṛti-stho 'pi tad-guṇaiḥ

na yujyate sadātma-sthair

yathā buddhis tad-āśrayā

The Supreme Person has an eternal spiritual body. If one tries to distinguish between the body and soul of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he commits a great offense.

TRANSLATION

"At no time is there a distinction between the body and soul of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. His personal identity and His body are made of blissful spiritual energy. There is no distinction between them.

PURPORT

Lord Kṛṣṇa, the son of Nanda Mahārāja, is advaya-jñāna; in other words, there is no distinction between His body and soul, for His existence is completely spiritual. According to the verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam beginning with the words vadanti tat tattva-vidas tattvam (1.2.11), the Absolute Truth is always to be understood from three angles of vision as Brahman, Paramātmā and Bhagavān. Unlike the objects of the material world, however, the Absolute Truth is always one and always the same. Thus there is no distinction between His body and soul. His form, name, attributes and pastimes, therefore, are completely distinct from those of the material world. One should know perfectly well that there is no difference between the body and soul of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. When one conceives of a distinction between His body and soul, one is immediately conditioned by material nature. Because a person in the material world makes such distinctions, he is called baddha-jīva, a conditioned soul.

TRANSLATION

"Whereas Kṛṣṇa, the Absolute Truth, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is full of transcendental bliss, possesses all six spiritual opulences in full, and is the master of the material energy, the small conditioned soul, who is always unhappy, is the servant of the material energy.

PURPORT

The living entity is an ever-conditioned servant of the material energy, whereas Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is master of the material energy. How, then, could they be on an equal level? There can be no comparison between them. His Lordship is always in a happy condition of transcendental bliss, whereas the conditioned soul is always unhappy because of his contact with the material energy. The Supreme Lord controls the material energy, and the material energy controls the conditioned souls. There is therefore no comparison between the Supreme Personality of Godhead and the ordinary living entities.

"If you want to understand Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam," he said, "you must approach a self-realized Vaiṣṇava and hear from him. You can do this when you have completely taken shelter of the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu."

PURPORT

Herein Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī instructs the poet from Bengal to hear Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam from a pure Vaiṣṇava and learn from him. In India especially, there is now a class of professional Bhāgavatam readers whose means of livelihood is to go from village to village, town to town, reading Bhāgavatam and collecting dakṣiṇa, or rewards, in the form of money or goods, like umbrellas, cloth and fruit. Thus there is now a system of Bhāgavata business, with recitations called Bhāgavata-saptāha that continue for one week, although this is not mentioned in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Nowhere does Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam say that the Bhāgavatam should be heard for one week from professionals. Rather, Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (1.2.17) says: śṛṇvatām sva-kathāḥ kṛṣṇaḥ puṇya-śravaṇa-kīrtanaḥ. One should regularly hear Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam from a self-realized Vaiṣṇava. By such hearing, one becomes pious. Hṛdy antaḥstho hy abhadrāṇi vidhunoti suhṛt-satām. As one thus hears the Bhāgavatam regularly and sincerely, his heart is purified of all material contamination.

naṣṭa-prāyeṣv abhadreṣu

nityam bhāgavata-sevayā

bhagavaty uttama-śloke

bhaktir bhavati naiṣṭhikī

"As one regularly hears the Bhāgavatam or renders service unto the pure devotee, all that is troublesome to the heart is practically destroyed, and loving service unto the glorious Lord, who is praised with transcendental songs, is established as an irrevocable fact." (Bhāg. 1.2.18)

This is the proper process, but people are accustomed to being misled by professional Bhāgavatam reciters. Therefore Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī herein advises that one should not hear Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam from professional reciters. Instead, one must hear and learn the Bhāgavatam from a self-realized Vaiṣṇava. Sometimes it is seen that when a Māyāvādī sannyāsī reads the Bhāgavatam, flocks of men go to hear jugglery of words that cannot awaken their dormant love for Kṛṣṇa. Sometimes people go to see professional dramas and offer food and money to the players, who are expert at collecting these offerings very nicely. The result is that the members of the audience remain in the same position of gṛham andha-kūpam, family affection, and do not awaken their love for Kṛṣṇa.

In the Bhāgavatam (7.5.30), it is said, matir na kṛṣṇe parataḥ svato vā mitho 'bhipadyeta gṛha-vratānām: the gṛhavrataś, those who are determined to continue following the materialistic way of life, will never awaken their dormant love of Kṛṣṇa, for they hear the Bhāgavatam only to solidify their position in household life and to be happy in family affairs and sex. Condemning this process of hearing the Bhāgavatam from professionals, Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī says, yāha, bhāgavata paḍa vaiṣṇavera sthāne: "To understand the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, you must approach a self-realized Vaiṣṇava." One should rigidly avoid hearing the Bhāgavatam from a Māyāvādī or other nondevotee who simply performs a grammatical jugglery of words to twist some meaning from the text, collect money from the innocent public, and thus keep people in darkness.

Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī strictly prohibits the behavior of the materialistic so-called hearers of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Instead of awakening real love for Kṛṣṇa, such hearers of the Bhāgavatam become more and more attached to household affairs and sex life (yan maithunādi-gṛhamedhi-sukhaṁ hi tuccham). One should hear Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam from a person who has no connection with material activities, or, in other words, from a paramahansa Vaiṣṇava, one who has achieved the highest stage of sannyāsa. This, of course, is not possible unless one takes shelter of the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam is understandable only for one who can follow in the footsteps of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

Svarūpa Dāmodara continued, "Associate regularly with the devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, for then only will you understand the waves of the ocean of devotional service.

PURPORT

It is clearly to be understood in this connection that the followers of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's way of devotional service are eternally associates of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and perfect knowers of the Absolute Truth. If one immediately follows the principles of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu by associating with His devotees, lusty desires for material enjoyment will vanish from one's heart. Then one will be able to understand the meaning of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and the purpose of listening to it. Otherwise such understanding is impossible.

tabeta—then only; pāṇḍitya—learning; tomāra—your; ha-ibe—will become; saphala—successful; kṛṣṇera—of Lord Kṛṣṇa; svarūpa-līlā—the transcendental pastimes; varṇibā—you will describe; nirmala—without material contamination.

TRANSLATION

"Only if you follow the principles of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His devotees will your learning be successful. Then you will be able to write about the transcendental pastimes of Kṛṣṇa without material contamination.

Antya TEXT 5.134

ei śloka kariyācha pāñā santoṣa tomāra hṛdayera arthe duñhāya lāge 'doṣa' //CC Antya, 5.134//

SYNONYMS

ei śloka—this verse; kariyācha—you have composed; pāñā santoṣa—getting satisfaction; tomāra hṛdayera—of your heart; arthe—by the meaning; duñhāya—to both; lāge doṣa—there is an offense.

TRANSLATION

"You have composed this introductory verse to your great satisfaction, but the meaning you have expressed is contaminated by offenses to both Lord Jagannātha and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Antya TEXT 5.135

tumi yaiche-taiche kaha, nā jāniyā rīti sarasvatī sei-śabde kariyāche stuti //CC Antya, 5.135//

SYNONYMS

tumi—you; yaiche-taiche—somehow or other; kaha—speak; nā jāniyā rīti—not knowing the regulative principles; sarasvatī—the goddess of learning; sei-śabde—in those words; kariyāche stuti—has made prayers.

TRANSLATION

"You have written something irregular, not knowing the regulative principles, but the goddess of learning, Sarasvatī, has used your words to offer her prayers to the Supreme Lord.

PURPORT

Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī informed the Bengali poet, "Because of your ignorance and your leaning toward Māyāvāda philosophy, you cannot distinguish the difference between the Māyāvāda and Vaiṣṇava philosophies. Therefore the process you have adopted to praise Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Lord Jagannātha does not follow the proper system; indeed, it is irregular and offensive. Fortunately, however, through your words, the goddess of learning, mother Sarasvatī, has tactfully offered her prayers to her master, Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu."

Antya TEXT 5.136

yaiche indra, daityādi kare kṛṣṇera bhartsana sei-śabde sarasvatī karena stavana //CC Antya, 5.136//

SYNONYMS

yaiche—just like; indra—Lord Indra, the King of heaven; daitya—demons; ādi—and others; kare—do; kṛṣṇera bhartsana—chastisement to Kṛṣṇa; sei-śabde—by those words; sarasvatī—the goddess of learning; karena stavana—offers prayers.

TRANSLATION

"Sometimes demons, and even Lord Indra, the King of heaven, chastised Kṛṣṇa, but mother Sarasvatī, taking advantage of their words, offered prayers to the Lord.

Antya TEXT 5.137

vācālaṁ bālīśaṁ stabdhaṁ ajñāṁ paṇḍita-māninam

kṛṣṇaṁ martyam upāśritya

gopā me cakrur apriyam //CC Antya, 5.137//

SYNONYMS

vācālam—talkative; bālīśam—childish; stabdham—impudent; ajñam—foolish; paṇḍita-māninam—thinking Himself a very learned scholar; kṛṣṇam—Kṛṣṇa; martyam—an ordinary mortal human being; upāśritya—taking shelter of; gopāḥ—the cowherd men; me—unto me; cakruḥ—committed; apriyam—that which is not very much appreciated.

TRANSLATION

"[Lord Indra said:] 'This Kṛṣṇa, who is an ordinary human being, is talkative, childish, impudent and ignorant, although He thinks Himself very learned. The cowherd men in Vṛndāvana have offended me by accepting Him. This has not been greatly appreciated by me.'

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.25.5).

Antya TEXT 5.138

aiśvarya-made matta indra,--yena mātoyāla

buddhi-nāśa haila, kevala nāhika sām̐bhāla //CC Antya, 5.138//

SYNONYMS

aiśvarya-made—being proud of his opulence; matta—maddened; indra—the King of heaven; yena—as if; mātoyāla—a mad person; buddhi-nāśa—bereft of intelligence; haila—became; kevala—only; nāhika—there is not; sām̐bhāla—caution.

TRANSLATION

"Indra, the King of heaven, being too proud of his heavenly opulences, became like a madman. Thus bereft of his intelligence, he could not restrain himself from speaking nonsensically about Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 5.139

indra bale,--"muñi kṛṣṇera kariyāchi nindana"

tāra-i mukhe sarasvatī karena stavana //CC Antya, 5.139//

SYNONYMS

indra bale—Indra says; muñi—I; kṛṣṇera—of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kariyāchi—have done; nindana—chastisement and defamation; tāra-i mukhe—from his mouth; sarasvatī—mother Sarasvatī, the goddess of learning; karena stavana—offers prayers.

TRANSLATION

"Thus Indra thought, 'I have properly chastised Kṛṣṇa and defamed Him.' But Sarasvatī, the goddess of learning, took this opportunity to offer prayers to Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 5.140

'vācāla kahiye--'veda-pravartaka' dhanya

'bālīśa'--tathāpi 'śiśu-prāya' garva-śūnya //CC Antya, 5.140//

SYNONYMS

vācāla—talkative; kahiye—I say; veda-pravartaka—one who can speak with the authority of the Vedas; dhanya—glorious; bālīśa—childish; tathāpi—still; śīśu-prāya—like a child; garva-sūnya—without pride.

TRANSLATION

"The word 'vācāla' is used to refer to a person who can speak according to Vedic authority, and the word 'bālīśa' means 'innocent.' Kṛṣṇa spoke the Vedic knowledge, yet He always presents Himself as a prideless, innocent boy.

Antya TEXT 5.141

vandyābhāve 'anamra'--'stabdha'-śabde kaya yāhā haite anya 'vijña' nāhi--se 'ajña' haya //CC Antya, 5.141//

SYNONYMS

vandya-abhāve—because there is no one else to be offered obeisances; anamra—the one who does not offer obeisances; stabdha-śadbe—by the word stabdha ("impudent"); kaya—says; yāhā haite—than whom; anya—other; vijña—learned scholar; nāhi—is not; se—He; ajña—one by whom nothing is unknown; haya—is.

TRANSLATION

"When there is no one else to receive obeisances, one may be called 'anamra,' or one who offers obeisances to no one. This is the meaning of the word 'stabdha.' And because no one is found to be more learned than Kṛṣṇa, He may be called 'ajña,' indicating that nothing is unknown to Him.

Antya TEXT 5.142

'paṇḍitera mānya-pātra--haya 'paṇḍita-mānī'

tathāpi bhakta-vātsalye 'manuṣya' abhimānī //CC Antya, 5.142//

SYNONYMS

paṇḍitera—of learned scholars; mānya-pātra—worshipable object; haya—is; paṇḍita-mānī—a person honored by the learned scholars; tathāpi—still; bhakta-vātsalye—because of being very affectionate to the devotees; manuṣya abhimānī

—presents Himself as an ordinary human being.

TRANSLATION

"The word 'paṇḍita-mānī' can be used to indicate that Kṛṣṇa is honored even by learned scholars. Nevertheless, because of affection for His devotees, Kṛṣṇa appears like an ordinary human being and may therefore be called 'martya.'

Antya TEXT 5.143

jarāsandha kahe,--"kṛṣṇa--puruṣa-adhama

tora saṅge nā yujhimu, "yāhi bandhu-han" //CC Antya, 5.143//

SYNONYMS

jarāsandha kahe—Jarāsandha says; kṛṣṇa—Kṛṣṇa; puruṣa-adhama—the lowest of human beings; tora saṅge—with You; nā yujhimu—I shall not fight; yāhi—because; bandhu-han—killer of Your own relatives.

TRANSLATION

"The demon Jarāsandha chastised Kṛṣṇa, saying, 'You are the lowest of human beings. I shall not fight with You, for You killed Your own relatives.'

PURPORT

In this verse also, mother Sarasvatī offers prayers to Kṛṣṇa. The word puruṣa-adhama refers to the Personality of Godhead, under whom all other persons remain, or, in other words, puruṣa-uttama, the best of all living beings. Similarly, the word bandhu-han means "the killer of māyā." In the conditioned state of life, one is closely related with māyā as a friend, but when one comes in contact with Kṛṣṇa one is freed from that relationship.

Antya TEXT 5.144

yāhā haite anya puruṣa-sakala--'adhama' sei haya 'puruṣādhama'--sarasvatīra mana //CC Antya, 5.144//

SYNONYMS

yāhā haite—from whom; anya—other; puruṣa—persons; sakala—all; adhama—subordinate; sei—he; haya—is; puruṣa-adhama—the person under whom all others remain; sarasvatīra mana—the explanation of mother Sarasvatī.

TRANSLATION

"Mother Sarasvatī takes 'puruṣādhama' to mean 'puruṣottama,' He to whom all men are subordinate.

Antya TEXT 5.145

'bāndhe sabāre'--tāte avidyā 'bandhu' haya

'avidyā-nāśaka'--'bandhu-han'-śabde kaya //CC Antya, 5.145//

SYNONYMS

bāndhe—binds; sabāre—everyone; tāte—therefore; avidyā—nescience, or māyā; bandhu—binder or relative; haya—is; avidyā-nāśaka—vanquisher of māyā; bandhu-han-śabde—by the word "bandhu-han"; kaya—mother Sarasvatī says.

TRANSLATION

"Nescience, or māyā, may be called 'bandhu' because she entangles everyone in the material world. Therefore by using the word 'bandhu-han,' mother Sarasvatī says that Lord Kṛṣṇa is the vanquisher of māyā.

PURPORT

Everyone is entangled in the illusory energy, but as stated in Bhagavad-gītā, mām eva ye prapadyante māyām etāṁ taranti te: as soon as one surrenders to Kṛṣṇa, he is freed from māyā. Therefore Kṛṣṇa may be called bandhu-han, the killer of māyā.

Antya TEXT 5.146

ei-mata śīśupāla karila nindana

sei-vākye sarasvatī karena stavana //CC Antya, 5.146//

SYNONYMS

ei-mata—in this way; śīśu-pāla—of the name Śīśupāla; karila nindana—blasphemed; sei-vākye—by those words; sarasvatī—the goddess of learning; karena stavana—offers prayers.

TRANSLATION

"Śiśupāla also blasphemed Kṛṣṇa in this way, but the goddess of learning, Sarasvatī, offered her prayers to Kṛṣṇa even by his words.

Antya TEXT 5.147

taiche ei śloke tomāra arthe 'nindā' āise sarasvatīra artha śuna, yāte 'stuti' bhāse //CC Antya, 5.147//

SYNONYMS

taiche—in that way; ei śloke—in this verse; tomāra—your; arthe—by the meaning; nindā—blasphemy; āise—comes; sarasvatīra artha—the meaning of mother Sarasvatī; śuna—hear; yāte—by which; stuti—prayers; bhāse—appear.

TRANSLATION

"In that way, although your verse is blasphemous according to your meaning, mother Sarasvatī has taken advantage of it to offer prayers to the Lord.

Antya TEXT 5.148

jagannātha hana kṛṣṇera 'ātma-svarupa'

kintu ihān dāru-brahma--sthāvara-svarūpa //CC Antya, 5.148//

SYNONYMS

jagannātha—Lord Jagannātha; hana—is; kṛṣṇera ātma-svarūpa—identical with Kṛṣṇa; kintu—but; ihān—here, at Jagannātha Purī; dāru-brahma—the Absolute appearing as wood; sthāvara-svarūpa—nonmoving identity.

TRANSLATION

"There is no difference between Lord Jagannātha and Kṛṣṇa, but here Lord Jagannātha is fixed as the Absolute Person appearing in wood. Therefore He does not move.

Antya TEXT 5.149

tānhā-saha ātmatā eka-rūpa hañā

kṛṣṇa eka-tattva-rūpa--dui rūpa hañā //CC Antya, 5.149//

SYNONYMS

tānhā-saha—with Him; ātmatā—the quality of being the self; eka-rūpa hañā—being one form; kṛṣṇa—Lord Kṛṣṇa; eka-tattva-rūpa—one principle; dui—two; rūpa—forms; hañā—becoming.

TRANSLATION

"Thus Lord Jagannātha and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, although appearing as two, are one because They are both Kṛṣṇa, who is one alone.

Antya TEXT 5.150

SYNONYMS

saṁsāra-tāraṇa-hetu—for delivering the entire world; yei—that; icchā-śakti—the potency of will; tāhāra—of that will; milana kari'-by the meeting; ekatā—oneness; yaiche—so that; prāpti—obtainment.

TRANSLATION

"The supreme desire to deliver the entire world meets in both of Them, and for that reason also They are one and the same.

Antya TEXT 5.151

sakala saṁsārī lokera karite uddhāra

gaura-jaṅgama-rūpe kailā avatāra //CC Antya, 5.151//

SYNONYMS

sakala—all; saṁsārī—materially contaminated; lokera—persons; karite uddhāra—to deliver; gaura—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jaṅgama—moving; rūpe—in the form; kailā avatāra—has descended.

TRANSLATION

"To deliver all the materially contaminated people of the world, that same Kṛṣṇa has descended, moving as Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Antya TEXT 5.152

saba-deśera saba-loka nāre āsibāra //CC Antya, 5.152//

SYNONYMS

jagannāthera—of Lord Jagannātha; darśane—by visiting; khaṇḍāya saṁsāra—one is freed from material existence; saba-deśera—of all countries; saba-loka—all men; nāre āsibāra—cannot come.

TRANSLATION

"By visiting Lord Jagannātha one is freed from material existence, but not all men of all countries can come or be admitted here in Jagannātha Purī.

Antya TEXT 5.153

saba-loke nistārilā jaṅgama-brahma hañā //CC Antya, 5.153//

SYNONYMS

śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya-prabhu—Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; deśe deśe yāñā—moving from one country to another; saba-loke nistārilā—delivered all conditioned souls; jaṅgama-brahma—moving Brahman; hañā—being.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, however, moves from one country to another, personally or by His representative. Thus He, as the moving Brahman, delivers all the people of the world.

Antya TEXT 5.154

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Fifth Chapter, describing how Pradyumna Miśra received instructions from Rāmānanda Rāya.

Chapter 6 The Meeting of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī

A summary of this chapter is given by Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya as follows. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went into transcendental fits of ecstatic love, Rāmānanda Rāya and Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī attended to Him and satisfied Him as He desired. Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī had been attempting to come to the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu for a long time, and finally he left his home and met the Lord. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu had gone to Śāntipura on His way to Vṛndāvana, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī had offered to dedicate his life at the Lord's lotus feet. in the meantime, however, a Mohammedan official became envious of Hiraṇya dāsa, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī's uncle, and induced some big official court minister to have him arrested. Thus Hiraṇya dāsa left his home, but by the intelligence of Raghunātha dāsa the misunderstanding was mitigated. Then Raghunātha dāsa went to Pānihāṭi, and, following the order of Nityānanda Prabhu, he observed a festival (ciḍā-dadhi-mahotsava) by distributing chipped rice mixed with yogurt. The day after the festival, Nityānanda Prabhu gave Raghunātha dāsa the blessing that he would very soon attain the shelter of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. After this incident, Raghunātha dāsa, with the help of his priest, whose name was Yadunandana Ācārya, got out of his house by trickery and thus ran away. Not touching the general path, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī secretly went to Jagannātha Purī. After twelve days, he arrived in Jagannātha Purī at the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu entrusted Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī to Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī. Therefore another name for Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī is Svarūpera Raghu, or the Raghunātha of Svarūpa Dāmodara. For five days Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī took prasāda at the temple, but later he would stand at the Simha-dvāra gate and eat only whatever he could gather by alms. Later he lived by taking alms from various chatras, or food distributing centers. When Raghunātha's father received news of this, he sent some men and money, but Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī refused to accept the money. Understanding that Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī was living by begging from the chatras, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu presented him with His own guñjā-mālā and a stone from Govardhana Hill. Thereafter, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī used to eat rejected food that he had collected and washed. This renounced life greatly pleased both Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. One day Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu took by force some of the same food, thus blessing Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī for his renunciation.

TRANSLATION

With the ropes of His causeless mercy, Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu employed a trick to deliver Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī from the blind well of contemptible family life. He made Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī one of His personal associates, placing him under the charge of Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī. I offer my obeisances unto Him.

TRANSLATION

The caudhurī wanted to beat him, but as soon as he saw Raghunātha's face, his mind changed, and he could not beat him.

Antya TEXT 6.23

viśeṣe kāyastha-buddhye antare kare ḍara

mukhe tarje garje, mārīte sabhaya antara //CC Antya, 6.23//

SYNONYMS

viśeṣe—specifically; kāyastha-buddhye—considering a kāyastha; antare—within his heart; kare ḍara—is afraid; mukhe—with his mouth; tarje garje—threatens; mārīte—to beat; sa-bhaya—afraid; antara—at heart.

TRANSLATION

Indeed, the caudhurī was afraid of Raghunātha dāsa because Raghunātha dāsa belong to the kāyastha community. Although the caudhurī would chastise him with oral vibrations, he was afraid to beat him.

PURPORT

Raghunātha dāsa belonged to a very aristocratic family of the kāyastha community. He had substantial influence with the local people, and therefore the caudhurī, or minister, was afraid to beat him. Superficially he would chastise Raghunātha dāsa with threatening vibrations, but he did not beat him. The members of the kāyastha community in India are generally very intelligent and expert in business management. Formerly they were mostly government officers. They were mentioned even by Yājñavalkya, as quoted by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya:

cāta-taṣkara-durvṛttair

mahā-sāhasikādibhiḥ

pīḍyamānā prajā rakṣet

kāyasthaiś ca viśeṣṭaḥ

From this verse it appears that the governmental officials of the kāyastha community would sometimes chastise the citizens, and thus it was the duty of the king to protect the people in general from the atrocities of the kāyasthas. In Bengal the kāyastha community is honored almost as much as the brāhmaṇa community, but in the up-country of India the kāyasthas are considered śūdras because they generally eat meat and drink wine. In any case, from history the kāyasthas appear very intelligent. Thus the Mohammedan caudhurī was afraid of Raghunātha dāsa because he belonged to the kāyastha community.

Antya TEXT 6.24

TRANSLATION

Yadunandana Ācārya was the priest and spiritual master of Raghunātha dāsa. Although born in a brāhmaṇa family, he had accepted the mercy of Vāsudeva Datta.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments that although the atheists who have deviated from the order of Śrī Advaita Ācārya introduce themselves as followers of Advaita Ācārya, they do not accept Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa. Yadunandana Ācārya, one of the most confidential followers of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, was the initiated disciple of Advaita Ācārya. He was not polluted by sentimental distinctions classifying Vaiṣṇavas according to birth. Therefore although Vāsudeva Datta had not been born in a brāhmaṇa family, Yadunandana Ācārya accepted Vāsudeva Datta as his spiritual master.

Antya TEXT 6.162

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe—Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; kṛṣṇa-kṛpā—the mercy of Lord Kṛṣṇa; baliṣṭha—more powerful; sabā haite—than anything; tomāre—you; kāḍila—He has delivered; viṣaya—of material enjoyment; viṣṭhā—of stool; garta—the ditch; haite—from.

TRANSLATION

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "The mercy of Lord Kṛṣṇa is stronger than anything else. Therefore the Lord has delivered you from the ditch of materialistic life, which is like a hole into which people pass stool."

PURPORT

According to the law of karma, everyone is destined to suffer or enjoy according to a certain material standard, but the mercy of Lord Kṛṣṇa is so powerful that the Lord can change all the reactions of one's past karma, or fruitive activities. Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu specifically drew attention to the mercy of Lord Kṛṣṇa. That mercy is more powerful than anything else, for it had saved Raghunātha dāsa from the strong bondage of materialistic life, which the Lord compared to a hole where people pass stool. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu gave His verdict that those addicted to the materialistic way of life are like worms that are living in stool but cannot give it up. A gṛhavrata, one who has decided to live in a comfortable home although it is actually miserable, is in a condemned position. Only the mercy of Kṛṣṇa can save one from such misery. Without Kṛṣṇa's mercy, one cannot get out of the filthy entanglement of materialistic life. The poor living entity cannot give up his materialistic position on his own; only when granted the special mercy of Kṛṣṇa can he give it up. Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu knew very well that Raghunātha dāsa was already liberated. Nevertheless He emphasized that Raghunātha dāsa's life of material comfort as a very rich man's son with a very beautiful wife and many servants to attend him was like a ditch of stool. The Lord thus specifically indicated that ordinary men who are very happy with material comforts and family life are in no better position than worms in stool.

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahena—Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; tomāra—your; pitā-jyēṭhā—father and his elder brother; dui jane—both of them; cakravarti-sambandhe—be cause of a relationship with Nīlāmbara Cakravartī; hāma—I; ājā kari'-as My grandfathers; māne—consider.

TRANSLATION

The Lord continued, "Your father and his elder brother are both related as brothers to My grandfather, Nīlāmbara Cakravartī. Therefore I consider them My grandfathers.

PURPORT

Nīlāmbara Cakravartī, the grandfather of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, was very intimately related to Raghunātha dāsa's father and uncle. Nīlāmbara Cakravartī used to call them his younger brothers because both of them were very devoted to the brāhmaṇas and were very respectable gentlemen. Similarly, they used to call him Dādā Cakravartī, addressing him as an elder brother brāhmaṇa. Raghunātha dāsa, however, was almost the same age as Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Generally a grandchild may joke about his grandfather. Therefore Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu took advantage of the relationship between His grandfather and Raghunātha dāsa's father and uncle to speak in a joking way.

tomāra—your; bāpa—father; jyeṭhā—his elder brother; viṣaya—of material enjoyment; viṣṭhā—stool; gartera—of the ditch; kīḍā—worms; sukha kari'-as happiness; māne—they consider; viṣaya—of material enjoyment; viṣera—of the poison; mahā-pīḍā—the great disease.

TRANSLATION

"My dear Raghunātha dāsa, your father and his elder brother are just like worms in stool in the ditch of material enjoyment, for the great disease of the poison of material enjoyment is what they consider happiness.

PURPORT

When a man is attached to material enjoyment, he is attached to many miserable conditions, but nevertheless he accepts his condemned position as one of happiness. Sense enjoyment is so strong for such a person that he cannot give it up, exactly as a worm in stool cannot give up the stool. From the spiritual point of view, when a person is too absorbed in material enjoyment, he is exactly like a worm in stool. Although such a position is utterly miserable to the eyes of liberated souls, the materialistic enjoyer is greatly attached to it.

SYNONYMS

yadyapi—although; brahmaṇya kare—give charity to the brāhmaṇas; brāhmaṇera sahāya—great helpers to the brāhmaṇas; śuddha-vaiṣṇava—pure Vaiṣṇavas; nahe—not; haye—they are; vaiṣṇavera prāya—almost like Vaiṣṇavas.

TRANSLATION

"Although your father and uncle are charitable to brāhmaṇas and greatly help them, they are nevertheless not pure Vaiṣṇavas. However, they are almost like Vaiṣṇavas.

PURPORT

As stated by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya, some people, usually very rich men, dress like Vaiṣṇavas and give charity to brāhmaṇas. They are also attached to Deity worship, but because of their attachment to material enjoyment, they cannot be pure Vaiṣṇavas. Anyābhilāṣitā-śūnyaṁ jñāna-karmādy-anāvṛtam. The pure Vaiṣṇava has no desire for material enjoyment. That is the basic qualification of a pure Vaiṣṇava. There are men, especially rich men, who regularly worship the Deity, give charity to brāhmaṇas and are pious in every respect, but they cannot be pure Vaiṣṇavas. Despite their outward show of Vaiṣṇavism and charity, their inner desire is to enjoy a higher standard of material life. Raghunātha dāsa's father, Govardhana, and uncle, Hiraṇya dāsa, were both very charitable to brāhmaṇas. Indeed, the brāhmaṇas from the Gauḍīya district were practically dependent upon them. Thus they were accepted as very pious gentlemen. However, they presented themselves as Vaiṣṇavas to the eyes of people in general, although from a purely spiritual point of view they were ordinary human beings, not pure Vaiṣṇavas. Actual Vaiṣṇavas considered them almost Vaiṣṇavas, not pure Vaiṣṇavas. In other words, they were kaniṣṭha-adhikārīs, for they were ignorant of higher Vaiṣṇava regulative principles. Nevertheless, they could not be called viṣayīs, or blind materialistic enjoyers.

tathāpi—still; viṣayera svabhāva—the potency of material enjoyment; kare mahā-andha—makes one completely blind; sei karma karāya—causes one to act in that way; yāte—by which; haya—there is; bhava-bandha—the bondage of birth and death.

TRANSLATION

"Those who are attached to materialistic life and are blind to spiritual life must act in such a way that they are bound to repeated birth and death by the actions and reactions of their activities.

PURPORT

As clearly stated in Bhagavad-gītā (3.9), yajñārthāt karmaṇo 'nyatra loko 'yam-karma-bandhanaḥ: if one does not act as a pure devotee, whatever acts he performs will produce reactions of fruitive bondage (karma-bandhanaḥ). In Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam it is said:

nūnam pramattaḥ kurute vikarma yad-indriya-prīta ya āpṛnoti na sādhu manye yata ātmano 'yam

asann api kleśada āsa dehaḥ

"A materialistic person, madly engaged in activities for sense enjoyment, does not know that he is entangling himself in repeated birth and death and that his body, although temporary, is full of miseries." (Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam 5.5.4) A viṣayī, a person blindly caught in a web of materialistic life, remains in the cycle of birth and death perpetually. Such a person cannot understand how to execute pure devotional service, and therefore he acts as a karmī, jñānī, yogī or something else, according to his desire, but he does not know that the activities of karma, jñāna and yoga simply bind one to the cycle of birth and death.

TRANSLATION

"By His own free will, Lord Kṛṣṇa has delivered you from such a condemned materialistic life. Therefore the glories of Lord Kṛṣṇa's causeless mercy cannot be expressed."

PURPORT

in the Brahma-saṁhitā (5.54) it is said, karmāṇi nirdahati kintu ca bhakti-bhājām. Lord Kṛṣṇa is so merciful that He can stop the reaction of karma for His devotee. Everyone—from a small insect called indra-gopa up to Indra, the King of heaven—is bound by the reactions of fruitive activities.

TRANSLATION

Renunciation is the basic principle sustaining the lives of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's devotees. Seeing this renunciation, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, is extremely satisfied.

PURPORT

Anyone, whether an ordinary materialistic person or a pure devotee, can understand the behavior of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's devotees if he studies it minutely. One will thus find that the devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are not at all attached to any kind of material enjoyment. They have completely given up sense enjoyment to engage fully in the service of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa and dedicate their lives and souls to serving Kṛṣṇa without material desires. Because their devotional service is free from material desires, it is unimpeded by material circumstances. Although ordinary men have great difficulty understanding this attitude of the devotees, it is greatly appreciated by the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Antya TEXT 6.221

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu heard this, He was greatly satisfied. "Raghunātha dāsa has done well," He said. "He has acted suitably for a person in the renounced order.

Antya TEXT 6.223

vairāgī karibe sadā nāma-saṅkīrtana

māgiyā khāñā kare jīvana rakṣaṇa //CC Antya, 6.223//

SYNONYMS

vairāgī—a person in the renounced order; karibe—will do; sadā—always; nāma-saṅkīrtana—chanting of the holy name of the Lord; māgiyā—by begging; khāñā—eating; kare jīvana rakṣaṇa—he sustains his life.

TRANSLATION

"A person in the renounced order should always chant the holy name of the Lord. He should beg some alms to eat, and he should sustain his life in this way.

PURPORT

As stated in the Hari-bhakti-vilāsa at the end of the Twentieth Vilāsa (366, 379, 382):

kṛtyānyetāni tu prāyo

gṛhiṇām dhaninām satām

likhitāni na tu tyakta-parigraha-mahātmanām prabhāte cārdha-rātre ca madhyāhne divasa-kṣaye kīrtayanti hariṁ ye vai te taranti bhavārṇavam evam ekāntinām prāyaḥ kīrtanaṁ smaraṇaṁ prabhoh kurvatām parama-prītyā kṛtyam anyan na rocate

A well-to-do householder Vaiṣṇava cannot live like a person in the renounced order who completely takes shelter of the holy name. Such a householder should chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa in the morning, at midday and in the evening. Then he will be able to cross beyond nescience. Pure devotees in the renounced order, however, who fully surrender to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, should chant the holy name of the Lord with great love and faith, always thinking of Kṛṣṇa's lotus feet. They should have no other occupation than chanting the holy name of the Lord. In the Bhakti-sandarbha, Śrīla Jīva Gosvāmī says:

yadyapi śrī-bhāgavata-mate pañca-rātrādivad-arcana-mārgasyāvaśyakatvaṁ nāsti, tad vināpi śaraṇāpattiyādīnām ekatareṇāpi puruṣārtha-siddher abhihitatvāt.

SYNONYMS

vairāgī hañā—being in the renounced order; yebā—anyone who; kare—does; parāpekṣā—dependence on others; kārya-siddhi nahe—he does not become successful; kṛṣṇa—Lord Kṛṣṇa; karena upekṣā—neglects.

TRANSLATION

"A vairāgī [a person in the renounced order] should not depend on others. 'If he does so, he will be unsuccessful, and he will be neglected by Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 6.225

vairāgī hañā kare jihvāra lālasa

paramārtha yāya, āra haya rasera vaśa //CC Antya, 6.225//

SYNONYMS

vairāgī hañā—being in the renounced order; kare—does; jihvāra—of the tongue; lālasa—lust; parama-artha—the goal of life; yāya—goes; āra—and; haya—becomes; rasera vaśa—dependent on taste.

TRANSLATION

"If a renunciant is eager for his tongue to taste different foods, his spiritual life will be lost, and he will be subservient to the tastes of his tongue.

Antya TEXT 6.226

SYNONYMS

vairāgīra—of a person in the renounced order; kṛtya—duty; sadā—always; nāma-saṅkīrtana—chanting the holy name of the Lord; śāka—vegetables; patra—leaves; phala—fruit; mūle—by roots; udara-bharaṇa—filling the belly.

TRANSLATION

"The duty of a person in the renounced order is to chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra always. He should satisfy his belly with whatever vegetables, leaves, fruits and roots are available.

Antya TEXT 6.227

jihvāra lālase yei iti-uti dhāya śiśnodara-parāyaṇa kṛṣṇa nāhi pāya" //CC Antya, 6.227//

SYNONYMS

jihvāra—of the tongue; lālase—because of greed; yei—anyone who; iti-uti—here and there; dhāya—goes; śísna—genitals; udara—belly; parāyaṇa—devoted to; kṛṣṇa—Lord Kṛṣṇa; nāhi pāya—does not get.

TRANSLATION

"One who is subservient to the tongue and who thus goes here and there, devoted to the genitals and the belly, cannot attain Kṛṣṇa."

Antya TEXT 6.228

grāmya-kathā nā śunibe, grāmya-vārtā nā kahibe

bhāla nā khāibe āra bhāla nā paribe //CC Antya, 6.236//

SYNONYMS

grāmya-kathā—ordinary talks of common men; nā śunibe—never hear; grāmya-vārtā—ordinary news; nā kahibe—do not speak; bhāla—well; nā khāibe—do not eat; āra—and; bhāla—nicely; nā paribe—do not dress.

TRANSLATION

"Do not talk like people in general or hear what they say. You should not eat very palatable food, nor should you dress very nicely.

Antya TEXT 6.237

amānī mānada hañā kṛṣṇa-nāma sadā la'be

vraje rādhā-kṛṣṇa-sevā mānase karibe //CC Antya, 6.237//

SYNONYMS

amānī—not expecting any respect; māna-da—offering respect to others; hañā—becoming; kṛṣṇa-nāma—the holy name of the Lord; sadā—always; la'be—you should chant; vraje—in Vṛndāvana; rādhā-kṛṣṇa-sevā—service to Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa; mānase—within the mind; karibe—you should do.

TRANSLATION

"Do not expect honor, but offer all respect to others. Always chant the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa, and within your mind render service to Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa in Vṛndāvana.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura says in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya that when a man and woman are married, they beget children and are thus entangled in family life. Talk concerning such family life is called grāmya-kathā. A person in the renounced order never indulges in either hearing or talking about such subjects. He should not eat palatable dishes, since that is unfit for a person in the renounced order. He should show all respect to others, but should not expect respect for himself. In this way, one should chant the holy name of the Lord and think of how to serve Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa in Vṛndāvana.

Antya TEXT 6.238

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu again entrusted him to Svarūpa Dāmodara. Thus Raghunātha dāsa rendered very confidential service with Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī.

PURPORT

Antaraṅga-sevā refers to service performed in one's spiritual body. Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī was formerly Lalitādevī. Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, who was among his assistants, now also began to serve Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa within his mind.

TRANSLATION

"Raghunātha dāsa is a disciple of Yadunandana Ācārya, who is very gentle and is extremely dear to Vāsudeva Datta, a resident of Kāñcanapallī. Because of Raghunātha dāsa's transcendental qualities, he is always more dear than life for all of us devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Since he has been favored by the abundant mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, he is always pleasing. Vividly providing a superior example for the renounced order, this very dear follower of Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī is the ocean of renunciation. Who among the residents of Nīlācala [Jagannātha Purī] does not know him very well?

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrī Caitanya-candrodaya-nāṭaka (10.3) of Kavi-karṇapūra.

TRANSLATION

"Because he is very pleasing to all the devotees, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī easily became like the fertile earth of good fortune in which it was suitable for the seed of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu to be sown. At the same time that the seed was sown, it grew into a matchless tree of the love of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and produced fruit."

PURPORT

This is the next verse from Śrī Caitanya-candrodaya-nāṭaka (10.4).

SYNONYMS

mora citta—my consciousness; dravya la-ite—to accept the goods; nā haya—is not; nirmala—pure; ei nimantraṇe—by this invitation; dekhi—I see; pratiṣṭhā—reputation; mātra—only; phala—the result.

TRANSLATION

" 'My consciousness is impure because I accept all these goods from people who are interested only in pounds, shillings and pence. Therefore by this kind of invitation I only get some material reputation.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura remarks that people who are under the bodily conception of life are called materialists. If we accept the offerings of such people, place them before the Lord and invite Vaiṣṇavas to partake of the prasāda, that attempt will gain us only a material reputation, not the actual benefit of service to a pure Vaiṣṇava. One should therefore try to serve the Supreme Personality of Godhead by fully surrendering at His lotus feet. If one engages for the service of the Lord whatever money one has honestly earned, that is spiritual service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, the spiritual master and the Vaiṣṇavas.

Antya TEXT 6.276

nā mānile duḥkhī ha-ibeka mūrkhā jana //CC Antya, 6.276//

SYNONYMS

uparodhe—by my request; prabhu—Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; mora—my; mānena—accepts; nimantraṇa—invitation; nā mānile—if He does not accept; duḥkhī—unhappy; ha-ibeka—will become; mūrkhā jana—foolish person.

TRANSLATION

" 'At my request Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepts the invitations because He knows that a foolish person like me would be unhappy if He did not accept them.'

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that people who are advanced in learning but attached to material enjoyment, who are puffed up by material possessions, by birth in an elevated aristocratic family or by education, may offer showbottle devotional service to the Deity and also offer prasāda to Vaiṣṇavas. Because of their ignorance, however, they cannot understand that since their minds are materially polluted, neither the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Lord Kṛṣṇa, nor the Vaiṣṇavas accept their offerings. If one accepts money from such materialistic persons to offer food to the Deity and Vaiṣṇavas, a pure Vaiṣṇava does not accept it. This causes unhappiness for the materialists because they are fully absorbed in the bodily conception of life. Therefore they sometimes turn against the Vaiṣṇavas.

TRANSLATION

"Considering all these points," Svarūpa Dāmodara concluded, "he has stopped inviting You." Hearing this, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu smiled and spoke as follows.

Antya TEXT 6.278

"viṣayāra anna khāile malina haya mana malina mana haile nahe kṛṣṇera smaraṇa //CC Antya, 6.278//

SYNONYMS

viṣayāra—of materialistic persons; anna—food; khāile—if one eats; malina—contaminated; haya mana—the mind becomes; malina—contaminated; mana haile—when the mind becomes; nahe—is not; kṛṣṇera—of Lord Kṛṣṇa; smaraṇa—remembrance.

TRANSLATION

"When one eats food offered by a materialistic man, one's mind becomes contaminated, and when the mind is contaminated, one is unable to think of Kṛṣṇa properly.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura suggests that people who are materialistically inclined and sahajiyās, or so-called Vaiṣṇavas who take everything very casually, are both viṣayi materialists. Eating food offered by them causes contamination, and as a result of such contamination, even a serious devotee becomes like a materialistic man. There are six kinds of association-giving charity, accepting charity, accepting food, offering food, talking confidentially and inquiring confidentially. One should very carefully avoid associating with both the sahajiyās, who are sometimes known as Vaiṣṇavas, and the non-Vaiṣṇavas, or avaiṣṇavas. Their association changes the transcendental devotional service of Lord Kṛṣṇa into sense gratification, and when sense gratification enters the mind of a devotee, he is contaminated. The materialistic person who aspires after sense gratification cannot properly think of Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 6.279

viṣayīra anna haya 'rājasa' nimantraṇa

dātā, bhoktā--duṁhāra malina haya mana //CC Antya, 6.279//

SYNONYMS

viṣayīra—offered by materialistic men; anna—food; haya—is; rājasa—in the mode of passion; nimantraṇa—invitation; dātā—the person who offers; bhoktā—the person who accepts such an offering; duṁhāra—of both of them; malina—contaminated; haya mana—the mind becomes.

TRANSLATION

"When one accepts an invitation from a person contaminated by the material mode of passion, the person who offers the food and the person who accepts it are both mentally contaminated.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura says that there are three varieties of invitations—those in the mode of goodness, those in passion and those in ignorance. An invitation accepted from a pure devotee is in the mode of goodness, an invitation accepted from a person who is pious but materially attached is in the mode of passion, and an invitation accepted from a person who is materially very sinful is in the mode of ignorance.

SYNONYMS

svarūpa kahe—Svarūpa Dāmodara replied; simha-dvāre—at the Simha-dvāra gate; duḥkha anubhaviyā—feeling unhappy; chatre—at the charity booth; māgi'-begging; khāya—he eats; madhyāhna-kāle—at midday; giyā—going.

TRANSLATION

Svarūpa Dāmodara replied, "Raghunātha dāsa felt unhappy standing at the Simha-dvāra. Therefore he is now going at midday to beg alms from the charity booth."

Antya TEXT 6.284

prabhu kahe,--"bhāla kaila, chāḍila simha-dvāra simha-dvāre bhikṣā-ṛtti--veśyāra ācāra //CC Antya, 6.284//

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; bhāla kaila—he has done well; chāḍila simha-dvāra—he has given up standing at the Simha-dvāra; simha-dvāre bhikṣā-ṛtti—to beg alms standing at the Simha-dvāra; veśyāra ācāra—the behavior of a prostitute.

TRANSLATION

Hearing this news, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "He has done very well by no longer standing at the Simha-dvāra gate. Such begging of alms resembles the behavior of a prostitute.

Antya TEXT 6.285

ayam dāsyati, anenāpi na dattam anyāḥ sameṣyati, sa dāsyati ity ādi. //CC Antya, 6.285//

SYNONYMS

kim artham—why; ayam—this person; āgacchati—is coming; ayam—this person; dāsyati—will give; anena—by this person; dattam—given; ayam—this;
aparāḥ—other; sameti—comes near; ayam—this person; dāsyati—will give;
anena—by this person; api—also; na—not; dattam—given; anyāḥ—another; sameṣyati—will come near; saḥ—he; dāsyati—will give; iti—thus; ādi—and so on.

TRANSLATION

"Here is a person coming near. He will give me something. This person gave me something last night. Now another person is coming near. He may give me something. The person who just passed did not give me anything, but another person will come, and he will give me something.' Thus a person in the renounced order gives up his neutrality and depends on the charity of this person or that. Thinking in this way, he adopts the occupation of a prostitute.

Antya TEXT 6.286

Mahāprabhu; hṛdaye—on the heart; netre—on the eyes; dhare—puts; kabhu—sometimes; nāsāya—with the nose; ghrāṇa laya—smells; kabhu—sometimes; śire kare—He puts on His head.

TRANSLATION

The Lord would put the stone to His heart or sometimes to His eyes. Sometimes He would smell it with His nose and sometimes place it on His head.

Antya TEXT 6.292

netra-jale sei śilā bhije nirantara

śilāre kahena prabhu--'kṛṣṇa-kalevara' //CC Antya, 6.292//

SYNONYMS

netra-jale—by the tears of His eyes; sei—that; śilā—stone; bhije—remains wet; nirantara—always; śilāre—the stone; kahena—says; prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kṛṣṇa-kalevara—the body of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

The stone from Govardhana was always moist with tears from His eyes. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would say, "This stone is directly the body of Lord Kṛṣṇa."

Antya TEXT 6.293

ei-mata tina-vatsara śilā-mālā dharilā

SYNONYMS

ei-mata—in this way; tina-vatsara—for three years; śilā-mālā—the stone and the garland of conchshells; dharilā—He kept; tuṣṭa hañā—when He became very happy; śilā-mālā—the stone and the garland; raghunāthe—to Raghunātha dāsa; dilā—He delivered.

TRANSLATION

For three years He kept the stone and garland. Then, greatly satisfied by the behavior of Raghunātha dāsa, the Lord delivered both of them to him.

prabhu kahe,--"ei śilā kṛṣṇera vigraha inhāra sevā kara tumi kariyā āgraha //CC Antya, 6.294//

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; ei śilā—this stone; kṛṣṇera vigraha—the form of Lord Kṛṣṇa; inhāra—of this; sevā—worship; kara—do; tumi—you; kariyā āgraha—with great eagerness.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu instructed Raghunātha dāsa, "This stone is the transcendental form of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Worship the stone with great eagerness."

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura writes in his Anubhāṣya that in the opinion of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the govardhana-śilā, the stone from Govardhana Hill, was directly the form of Kṛṣṇa, the son of Mahārāja Nanda. The Lord used the stone for three years, and then in the heart of Raghunātha dāsa the Lord awakened devotional service to the stone. The Lord then gave the stone to Raghunātha dāsa, accepting him as one of His most confidential servants. However, some envious people conclude that because Raghunātha dāsa had not taken birth in the family of a brāhmaṇa, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not give him the right to worship the Deity directly, but instead gave him a stone from Govardhana. This kind of thought is nārakī, or hellish. As stated in the Padma Purāṇa, arcye viṣṇau śilādhīr guruṣu nara-matir vaiṣṇave jāti-buddhiḥ. ..yasya vā nārakī saḥ: "One who considers the arcā-mūrti (the worshipable Deity of Lord Viṣṇu) to be stone, the spiritual master to be an ordinary human being, or a Vaiṣṇava to belong to a particular creed is possessed of hellish intelligence." If one thinks that the worshipable śālagrāma-śilā is a mere stone, that the spiritual master is an ordinary human being or that a pure Vaiṣṇava preaching the bhakti cult all over the world is a member of a particular caste or material division of society, he is considered a nārakī, a candidate for hellish life. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu instructed that the govardhana-śilā, the stone taken from Govardhana, is nondifferent from the body of Śrī Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, He indirectly advised such foolish persons that one should not be envious of a Vaiṣṇava who belongs to a different caste or sect. One should accept a Vaiṣṇava as transcendental. in this way one can be saved; otherwise, one is surely awaiting a hellish life.

Antya TEXT 6.295

ei śilāre kara tumi sāttvika pūjana

acirāt pābe tumi kṛṣṇa-prema-dhana //CC Antya, 6.295//

SYNONYMS

ei śilāra—of this stone; kara—do; tumi—you; sāttvika pūjana—worshiping like a perfect brāhmaṇa, or in the mode of goodness; acirāt—very soon; pābe tumi—you will get; kṛṣṇa-prema—ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa; dhana—wealth.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued, "Worship this stone in the mode of goodness like a perfect brāhmaṇa, for by such worship you will surely attain ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa without delay.

Antya TEXT 6.296

eka kuñjā jala āra tulasī-mañjarī

sāttvika-sevā ei--śuddha-bhāve kari //CC Antya, 6.296//

SYNONYMS

eka—one; kuñjā—jug; jala—water; āra—and; tulasī-mañjarī—flowers of the tulasī tree; sāttvika-sevā—worship in goodness; ei—this; śuddha-bhāve—in complete purity; kari—performing.

TRANSLATION

"For such worship, one needs a jug of water and a few flowers from a tulasī tree. This is worship in complete goodness when performed in complete purity.

Antya TEXT 6.297

dui-dike dui-patra madhye komala mañjarī ei-mata aṣṭa-mañjarī dibe śraddhā kari" ' //CC Antya, 6.297//

SYNONYMS

dui-dike—on two sides; dui-patra—two tulasī leaves; madhye—within; komala mañjarī—very soft tulasī flower; ei-mata—in this way; aṣṭa-mañjarī—eight tulasī flowers; dibe—you should offer; śraddhā kari'-with faith and love.

TRANSLATION

"With faith and love, you should offer eight soft tulasī flowers, each with two tulasī leaves, one on each side of each flower."

Antya TEXT 6.298

śrī-haste śilā diyā ei ājñā dilā

ānande raghunātha sevā karite lāgilā //CC Antya, 6.298//

SYNONYMS

śrī-haste—by His own transcendental hand; śilā—the stone from Govardhana Hill; diyā—delivering; ei ājñā—this order; dilā—He gave; ānande—in great happiness; raghunātha—Raghunātha dāsa; sevā karite lāgilā—began to worship.

TRANSLATION

After thus advising him how to worship, Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu personally offered Raghunātha dāsa the govardhana-śilā with His transcendental hand. As advised by the Lord, Raghunātha dāsa worshiped the śilā in great transcendental jubilation.

Antya TEXT 6.299

eka-vitasti dui-vastra, piṇḍā eka-khāni svarūpa dilena kuñjā ānibāre pāni //CC Antya, 6.299//

SYNONYMS

eka-vitasti—about six inches long; dui-vastra—two cloths; piṇḍā eka-khāni—one wooden platform; svarūpa dilena—Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī delivered; kuñjā—a jug; ānibāre pāni—for bringing water.

TRANSLATION

Svarūpa Dāmodara gave Raghunātha dāsa two cloths, each about six inches long, a wooden platform and a jug in which to keep water.

Antya TEXT 6.300

ei-mata raghunātha karena pūjana

pūjā-kāle dekhe śilāya 'vrajendra-nandana' //CC Antya, 6.300//

SYNONYMS

ei-mata—in this way; raghunātha—Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī; karena pūjana—worships; pūjā-kāle—while worshiping; dekhe—he sees; śilāya—in the stone from Govardhana; vrajendra-nandana—the son of Nanda Mahārāja.

TRANSLATION

Thus Raghunātha dāsa began worshiping the stone from Govardhana, and as he worshiped he saw the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, the son of Nanda Mahārāja, directly in the stone.

Antya TEXT 6.301

'prabhura svahasta-datta govardhana-śilā

ei cinti' raghunātha preme bhāsi' gelā //CC Antya, 6.301//

SYNONYMS

prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; sva-hasta—own hand; datta—handed over by; govardhana-śilā—the stone from Govardhana Hill; ei cinti'-thinking this; raghunātha—Raghunātha dāsa; preme—in ecstatic love; bhāsi' gelā—became overflowed.

TRANSLATION

Thinking of how he had received the govardhana-śilā directly from the hands of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Raghunātha dāsa was always overflowed with ecstatic love.

Antya TEXT 6.302

jala-tulasīra sevāya tānra yata sukhodaya

ṣoḍaśopacāra-pūjāya tata sukha naya //CC Antya, 6.302//

SYNONYMS

jala-tulasīra sevāya—by worshiping with water and tulasī; tāñra—his; yata—as much as; sukha-udaya—rise of transcendental happiness; ṣoḍaśa-upacāra-pūjāya—by worshiping with sixteen kinds of paraphernalia; tata—so much; sukha—happiness; naya—is not.

TRANSLATION

The amount of transcendental bliss that Raghunātha dāsa enjoyed simply by offering water and tulasī is impossible to achieve even if one worships the Deity with sixteen kinds of paraphernalia.

Antya TEXT 6.303

ei-mata kata dina karena pūjana

tabe svarūpa-gosāñi tāñre kahilā vacana //CC Antya, 6.303//

SYNONYMS

ei-mata—in this way; kata dina—for some days; karena pūjana—he worshiped; tabe—at that time; svarūpa-gosāñi—Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī; tāñre—to him; kahilā vacana—said some words.

TRANSLATION

After Raghunātha dāsa had thus worshiped the govardhana-śilā for some time, Svarūpa Dāmodara one day spoke to him as follows.

Antya TEXT 6.304

"aṣṭa-kaudira khājā-sandeśa kara samarpaṇa

śraddhā kari' dile, sei amṛtera sama //CC Antya, 6.304//

SYNONYMS

aṣṭa-kaudira—costing eight kauḍis; khājā-sandeśa—khājā and sandeśa sweetmeats; kara samarpaṇa—offer; śraddhā kari'-with love and faith; dile—if you offer; sei—that; amṛtera sama—just like nectar.

TRANSLATION

"Offer the Govardhana stone eight kauḍis worth of the first-class sweetmeats known as khājā and sandeśa. If you offer them with faith and love, they will be just like nectar."

Antya TEXT 6.305

tabe aṣṭa-kauḍira khājā kare samarpaṇa

svarūpa-ājñāya govinda tāhā kare samādhāna //CC Antya, 6.305//

SYNONYMS

tabe—then; aṣṭa-kauḍira—costing eight kauḍis; khājā—the sweetmeat named khājā; kare samarpaṇa—offers; svarūpa-ājñāya—by the order of Svarūpa Dāmodara; govinda—the personal servant of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāhā—that; kare samādhāna—arranges.

TRANSLATION

Raghunātha dāsa then began offering the costly sweetmeats known as khājā, which Govinda, following the order of Svarūpa Dāmodara, would supply.

Antya TEXT 6.306

raghunātha sei śilā-mālā yabe pāilā

gosāñira abhiprāya ei bhāvanā karilā //CC Antya, 6.306//

SYNONYMS

raghunātha—Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī; sei śilā—that stone; mālā—garland; yabe—when; pāilā—he got; gosāñira—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; abhiprāya—intention; ei—this; bhāvanā karilā—he thought.

TRANSLATION

When Raghunātha dāsa received from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu the stone and the garland of conchshells, he could understand the Lord's intention. Thus he thought as follows.

Antya TEXT 6.307

"śilā diyā gosāñi samarpilā 'govardhane'

guñjā-mālā diyā dilā 'rādhikā-carāṇe' //CC Antya, 6.307//

SYNONYMS

śilā diyā—by offering this stone; gosāñi—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; samarpilā—offered; govardhane—a place near Govardhana Hill; guñjā-mālā diyā—by offering the garland of small conchshells; dilā—offered; rādhikā-carāṇe—shelter at the lotus feet of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī.

TRANSLATION

"By offering me the govardhana-śilā, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has offered me a place near Govardhana Hill, and by offering me the garland of conch shells, He has offered me shelter at the lotus feet of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī."

Antya TEXT 6.308

ānande raghunāthera bāhya vismaraṇa

kāya-mane sevilena gaurāṅga-carāṇa //CC Antya, 6.308//

SYNONYMS

ānande—in transcendental bliss; raghunāthera—of Raghunātha dāsa; bāhya vismaraṇa—forgetting everything external; kāya-mane—by mind and body; sevilena—served; gaurāṅga-carāṇa—the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

Raghunātha dāsa's transcendental bliss was boundless. Forgetting everything external, he served the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu with his body and mind.

Antya TEXT 6.309

ananta guṇa raghunāthera ke karibe lekhā?

raghunāthera niyama,--yena pāṣāṇera rekhā //CC Antya, 6.309//

SYNONYMS

ananta guṇa—unlimited transcendental attributes; raghunāthera—of Raghunātha dāsa; ke—who; karibe lekhā—can write; raghunāthera—of Raghunātha dāsa; niyama—the strict regulative principles; yena—like; pāṣāṇera rekhā—lines on a stone.

TRANSLATION

Who could list the unlimited transcendental attributes of Raghunātha dāsa? His strict regulative principles were exactly like lines on a stone.

PURPORT

The words pāṣāṇera rekhā are very significant. Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī followed the regulative principles so strictly and rigidly that they were compared to the lines on a stone. As such lines cannot be erased at any time, so the regulative principles observed by Śrī Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī could not be changed under any circumstances.

Antya TEXT 6.310

sāḍe sāta prahara yāya kīrtana-smaraṇe

āhāra-nidrā cāri daṇḍa seha nahe kona dine //CC Antya, 6.310//

SYNONYMS

sāḍe sāta prahara—7.5 praharas (one prahara equals three hours); yāya—is spent; kīrtana-smaraṇe—in chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra and remembering the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa; āhāra-nidrā—eating and sleeping; cāri daṇḍa—four daṇḍas (one daṇḍa equals twenty-four minutes); seha—that; nahe—is not; kona dine—some days.

TRANSLATION

Raghunātha dāsa spent more than twenty-two hours out of every twenty-four chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra and remembering the lotus feet of the Lord. He ate and slept for less than an hour and a half, and on some days that also was impossible.

Antya TEXT 6.311

vairāgyera kathā tāñra adbhuta-kathana ājanma nā dila jihvāya rasera sparśana //CC Antya, 6.311//

SYNONYMS

vairāgyera—of the renunciation; kathā—talks; tāñra—of him; adbhuta-kathana—wonderful topics; ā-janma—from birth; nā dila—did not allow; jihvāya—to the tongue; rasera sparśana—tasting.

TRANSLATION

Topics concerning his renunciation are wonderful. Throughout his life he never allowed his tongue sense gratification.

Antya TEXT 6.312

chiṇḍā kāni kāñthā vinā nā pare vasana

sāvadhāne prabhura kailā ājñāra pālana //CC Antya, 6.312//

SYNONYMS

chiṇḍā kāni—a small torn cloth; kāñthā—a patchwork cotton wrapper; vinā—except; nā pare—does not wear; vasana—clothing; sāvadhāne—with great care; prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kailā—performed; ājñāra pālana - execution of the order.

TRANSLATION

He never touched anything to wear except a small torn cloth and a patchwork wrapper. Thus he very rigidly executed the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

The principle of very rigidly carrying out the order of the spiritual master must be observed. The spiritual master gives different orders to different people. For example, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu ordered Jīva Gosvāmī, Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī to preach, and He ordered Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī to strictly follow the rules and regulations of the renounced order. All six Gosvāmīs strictly followed the instructions of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. This is the principle for progress in devotional service. After receiving an order from the spiritual master, one must strictly try to execute the order. That is the way of success.

Antya TEXT 6.313

prāṇa-rakṣā lāgi' yebā karena bhakṣaṇa

tāhā khāñā āpanāke kahe nirveda-vacana //CC Antya, 6.313//

SYNONYMS

prāṇa-rakṣā lāgi'-to maintain life; yebā—whatever; karena bhakṣaṇa—he ate; tāhā khāñā—eating that; āpanāke—to himself; kahe—said; nirveda-vacana—words of reproach.

TRANSLATION

Whatever he ate was only to keep his body and soul together, and when he ate he would reproach himself thus.

Antya TEXT 6.314

ātmānam ced vijānīyāt

param jñāna-dhūtāśayaḥ

kim icchan kasya vā hetor

deham puṣṇāti lampāṭaḥ //CC Antya, 6.314//

SYNONYMS

ātmānam—the soul; cet—if; vijānīyāt—one understands; param—supreme; jñāna—by knowledge; dhūta—thrown off; āśayaḥ—material desires; kim—what; icchan—desiring; kasya—what; vā—or; hetor—for reason; deham—the material body; puṣṇāti—maintains; lampāṭaḥ—debauchee.

TRANSLATION

"If one's heart has been cleansed by perfect knowledge and one has understood Kṛṣṇa, the Supreme Brahman, he then gains everything. Why should such a person act like a debauchee by trying very carefully to maintain his material body?"

PURPORT

This verse (Bhāg. 7.15.40) was spoken by Nārada to Yudhiṣṭhira Mahārāja regarding a householder's liberation from material bondage. On the spiritual platform, one does not unnecessarily care for the body. Śrīla Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura has said, deha-smṛti nāhi yāra, saṁsāra bandhana kāhān tāra. One who is spiritually situated does not think that he is the body. Therefore he can transcendently execute severe penances in the renounced order of life. The best example of such renunciation is Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī.

Antya TEXT 6.315

prasādānna pasārira yata nā vikāya

dui-tina dina haile bhāta saḍi' yāya //CC Antya, 6.315//

SYNONYMS

prasāda-anna—food of Jagannātha; pasārira—of the shopkeepers; yata—as much as; nā vikāya—is not sold; dui-tina dina—two and three days; haile—after; bhāta—the rice; saḍi' yāya—becomes decomposed.

TRANSLATION

Lord Jagannātha's prasāda is sold by shopkeepers, and that which is not sold decomposes after two or three days.

Antya TEXT 6.316

Mahāprabhu); svīye—His personal associate; ku-janam—low person; api—although; mām—me; nyasya—having delivered; muditaḥ—pleased; uraḥ—of the chest; guñjā-hāram—the garland of conchshells; priyam—dear; api—although; ca—and; govardhana-śilām—a stone from Govardhana Hill; dadau—delivered; me—to me; gaurāṅgaḥ—Lord Gaurāṅga; hṛdaye—in my heart; udayan—by manifesting; mām—me; madayati—maddens.

TRANSLATION

"Although I am a fallen soul, the lowest of men, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu delivered me from the blazing forest fire of great material opulence by His mercy. He handed me over in great pleasure to Svarūpa Dāmodara, His personal associate. The Lord also gave me the garland of small conchshells that He wore on His chest and a stone from Govardhana Hill, although they were very dear to Him. That same Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu awakens within my heart and makes me mad after Him."

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrī Gaurāṅga-stava-kalpavṛkṣa (11), written by Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Sixth Chapter, describing Lord Caitanya's meeting with Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī.

Chapter 7 The Meeting of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Vallabha Bhaṭṭa

The following summary of Chapter Seven is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. In this chapter, Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's meeting with Vallabha Bhaṭṭa is described. There was some joking behavior between these two personalities, and finally Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu corrected Vallabha Bhaṭṭa and sympathetically accepted an invitation from him. Before this, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu saw that Vallabha Bhaṭṭa was greatly attached to Gadādhara Paṇḍita. Therefore He acted as if displeased with Gadādhara Paṇḍita. Later, when Vallabha Bhaṭṭa became intimately connected with the Lord, the Lord advised him to take instructions from Gadādhara Paṇḍita. Thus the Lord expressed His feelings of love for Gadādhara Paṇḍita.

Antya TEXT 7.1

TRANSLATION

"You have spread the saṅkīrtana movement of Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Therefore it is evident that You have been empowered by Lord Kṛṣṇa. There is no question about it.

PURPORT

Śrī Madhvācārya has brought our attention to this quotation from the Nārāyaṇa-saṁhitā:

dvāparīyair janair viṣṇuḥ pañcarātrais tu kevalaiḥ

kalau tu nāma-mātreṇa

pūjyate bhagavān hariḥ

"in the Dvāpara-yuga one could satisfy Kṛṣṇa or Viṣṇu only by worshipping opulently according to the pañcarātrikī system, but in the age of Kali one can satisfy and worship the Supreme Personality of Godhead Hari simply by chanting His holy name." Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura explains that unless one is directly empowered by the causeless mercy of Kṛṣṇa, one cannot become the spiritual master of the entire world (jagad-guru). One cannot become an ācārya simply by mental speculation. The true ācārya presents Kṛṣṇa to everyone by preaching the holy name of the Lord throughout the world. Thus the conditioned souls, purified by chanting the holy name, are liberated from the blazing fire of material existence. In this way, spiritual benefit grows increasingly full, like the waxing moon in the sky. The true ācārya, the spiritual master of the entire world, must be considered an incarnation of Kṛṣṇa's mercy. indeed, he is personally embracing Kṛṣṇa. He is therefore the spiritual master of all the varṇas (brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya, vaiśya and śūdra) and all the āśramas (brahmacarya, gr̥hastha, vānaprastha and sanniyāsa). Since he is understood to be the most advanced devotee, he is called paramahansa-ṭhākura. Ṭhākura is a title of honor offered to the paramahansa. Therefore one who acts as an ācārya, directly presenting Lord Kṛṣṇa by spreading His name and fame, is also to be called paramahansa-ṭhākura.

Antya TEXT 7.13

rāmānanda-rāya kṛṣṇa-rasera 'nidhāna' teṇha jñānilā--kṛṣṇa--svayaṁ bhagavān //CC Antya, 7.23//

SYNONYMS

rāmānanda-rāya—Śrīla Rāmānanda Rāya; kṛṣṇa-rasera—of the transcendental mellow of Kṛṣṇa's devotional service; nidhāna—the mine; teṇha—he; jñānilā—has given instruction; kṛṣṇa—Lord Kṛṣṇa; svayaṁ—Himself; bhagavān—the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

"Śrīla Rāmānanda Rāya is the ultimate knower of the transcendental mellows of Lord Kṛṣṇa's devotional service. He has instructed Me that Lord Kṛṣṇa is the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

Antya TEXT 7.24

tāte prema-bhakti--'puruṣārtha-śiromaṇi'

rāga-mārga prema-bhakti 'sarvādhika' jāni //CC Antya, 7.24//

SYNONYMS

tāte—therefore; prema-bhakti—devotional service in ecstatic love; puruṣārtha—of all goals of human life; śiromaṇi—the crown jewel; rāga-mārga—on the path of spontaneous love; prema-bhakti—love of Kṛṣṇa; sarva-adhika—the highest of all; jāni—I can understand.

TRANSLATION

"Through the mercy of Rāmānanda Rāya, I have understood that ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa is the highest goal of life and that spontaneous love of Kṛṣṇa is the highest perfection.

PURPORT

Puruṣārtha ("the goal of life") generally refers to religion, economic development, satisfaction of the senses and, finally, liberation. However, above these four kinds of puruṣārthas, love of Godhead stands supreme. It is called parama-puruṣārtha (the supreme goal of life) or puruṣārtha-śiromaṇi (the most exalted of all puruṣārthas). Lord Kṛṣṇa is worshiped by regulative devotional service, but the highest perfection of devotional service is spontaneous love of Godhead.

dāsyā, sakhyā, vātsalyā, āra ye śṛṅgāra

dāsa, sakhā, guru, kāntā,--'āśraya' yāhāra //CC Antya, 7.25//

SYNONYMS

dāsyā—servitude; sakhyā—friendship; vātsalyā—paternal love; āra—and; ye—that; śṛṅgāra—conjugal love; dāsa—the servant; sakhā—friend; guru—superior; kāntā—lover; āśraya—the shelter; yāhāra—of which.

TRANSLATION

"The servant, friend, superior and conjugal lover are the shelters of the transcendental mellows called dāsyā, sakhyā, vātsalyā and śṛṅgāra.

Antya TEXT 7.26

'aiśvarya-jñāna-yukta', 'kevala'-bhāva āra

aiśvarya-jñāne nā pāi vrajendra-kumāra //CC Antya, 7.26//

SYNONYMS

aiśvarya-jñāna-yukta—with understanding of the opulences; kevala—pure; bhāva—emotion; āra—also; aiśvarya-jñāne—by understanding of the opulences; nā pāi—one does not get; vrajendra-kumāra—the son of Nanda Mahārāja.

TRANSLATION

"There are two kinds of emotion [bhāva]. Emotion with an understanding of the Lord's full opulences is called aiśvarya-jñāna-yukta, and pure, uncontaminated emotion is called kevala. One cannot achieve shelter at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, the son of Mahārāja Nanda, simply by knowing His opulences.

nāyaṁ sukhāpo bhagavān

dehinām gopikā-sutaḥ

jñāninām cātma-bhūtānām

yathā bhakti-matām iha //CC Antya, 7.27//

SYNONYMS

na—not; ayam—this Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa; sukha-āpaḥ—easily available; bhagavān—the Supreme Personality of Godhead; dehinām—for materialistic persons who have accepted the body as the self; gopikā-sutaḥ—the son of mother Yaśodā; jñāninām—for persons addicted to mental speculation; ca—and; ātma-bhūtānām—for persons performing severe austerities and penances or for personal associates; yathā—as; bhakti-matām—for persons engaged in spontaneous devotional service; iha—in this world.

TRANSLATION

"The Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, the son of mother Yaśodā, is accessible to those devotees engaged in spontaneous loving service, but He is not as easily accessible to mental speculators, to those striving for self-realization by severe austerities and penances, or to those who consider the body the same as the self."

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.9.21).

'ātma-bhūta'-śabde kahe 'pāriṣada-gaṇa' aiśvarya-jñāne lakṣmī nā pāilā vrajendra-nandana //CC Antya, 7.28//

SYNONYMS

ātma-bhūta-śabde—the word ātma-bhūta; kahe—means; pāriṣada-gaṇa—personal associates; aiśvarya-jñāne—in the understanding of opulence; lakṣmī—the goddess of fortune; nā pāilā—could not get; vrajendra-nandana—the shelter of Kṛṣṇa, the son of Nanda Mahārāja.

TRANSLATION

"The word 'ātma-bhūta' means 'personal associates.' Through the understanding of opulence, the goddess of fortune could not receive the shelter of Kṛṣṇa; the son of Nanda Mahārāja.

PURPORT

Lakṣmī, the goddess of fortune, has complete knowledge of Kṛṣṇa's opulences, but she could not achieve the association of Kṛṣṇa by dint of such knowledge. The devotees in Vṛndāvana, however, actually enjoy the association of Kṛṣṇa.

labdhāśiṣām ya udagād vraja-sundarīṇām //CC Antya, 7.29//

na—not; ayam—this; śriyaḥ—of the goddess of fortune; aṅge—on the chest; u—alas; nitānta-rateḥ—who is very intimately related; prasādaḥ—the favor; svaḥ—of the heavenly planets; yoṣitām—of women; nalina—of the lotus flower;

gandha—having the aroma; rucām—and bodily luster; kutaḥ—much less; anyāḥ—others; rāsa-utsava—in the festival of the rāsa dance; asya—of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa; bhuja-daṇḍa—by the arms; grhīta—embraced; kaṇṭha—their necks; labdha-āśiṣām—who achieved such a blessing; yaḥ—which; udagāt—became manifest; vraja-sundarīṇām—of the beautiful gopīs, the transcendental girls of Vrajabhūmi.

TRANSLATION

"When Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa was dancing with the gopīs in the rāsa-līlā, the gopīs were embraced by the arms of the Lord. This transcendental favor was never bestowed upon the goddess of fortune or the other consorts in the spiritual world. Indeed, never was such a favor even imagined by the most beautiful girls in the heavenly planets, whose bodily luster and aroma resemble those of lotus flowers. And what to speak of worldly women who are very beautiful according to the material estimation?"

PURPORT

This is a verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.47.60).

Antya TEXT 7.30

śuddha-bhāve sakhā kare skandhe ārohaṇa

śuddha-bhāve vrajeśvarī karena bandhana //CC Antya, 7.30//

SYNONYMS

śuddha-bhāve—in pure consciousness; sakhā—friend; kare—does; skandhe—on the shoulder; ārohaṇa—rising; śuddha-bhāve—in pure consciousness; vraja-īśvarī—the Queen of Vraja; karena bandhana—binds.

TRANSLATION

"In pure Kṛṣṇa consciousness, a friend mounts the shoulder of Kṛṣṇa, and mother Yaśodā binds the Lord.

PURPORT

Śuddha-bhāva, pure consciousness, is not dependent on an understanding of the Lord's opulences. Even without such opulences, the devotee in śuddha-bhāva is inclined to love Kṛṣṇa as a friend or son.

Antya TEXT 7.31

'mora sakhā,' 'mora putra,'--ei 'śuddha' mana ataeva śuka-vyāsa kare praśaṁsana //CC Antya, 7.31//

SYNONYMS

mora sakhā—my friend; mora putra—my son; ei—this; śuddha—pure; mana—consciousness; ataeva—therefore; śuka-vyāsa—Śukadeva Gosvāmī and Vyāsadeva; kare praśaṁsana—praise.

TRANSLATION

"In pure Kṛṣṇa consciousness, without knowledge of the Lord's opulences, a devotee considers Kṛṣṇa his friend or son. Therefore this devotional attitude is praised even by Śukadeva Gosvāmī and Vyāsadeva, the supreme authority.

dāsyam gatānām para-daivatena

māyāśritānām nara-dārakeṇa

sākam vijahruḥ kṛta-puṇya-puñjāḥ //CC Antya, 7.32//

SYNONYMS

ittham—in this way; satām—of persons who prefer the impersonal feature of the Lord; brahma—of the impersonal effulgence; sukha—by the happiness; anubhūtyā—who is realized; dāsyam—the mode of servitude; gatānām—of those who have accepted; para-daivatena—who is the supreme worshipable Deity; māyā-āśritānām—for ordinary persons under the clutches of external energy; nara-dārakeṇa—with He who is like a boy of this material world; sākam—in friendship; vijahruḥ—played; kṛta-puṇya-puñjāḥ—those who have accumulated volumes of pious activities.

TRANSLATION

"Those who are engaged in self-realization, appreciating the Brahman effulgence of the Lord, and those engaged in devotional service, accepting the Supreme Personality of Godhead as master, as well as those who are under the clutches of māyā, thinking the Lord an ordinary person, cannot understand that certain exalted personalities—after accumulating volumes of pious activities—are now playing with the Lord in friendship as cowherd boys.'

SYNONYMS

trayyā—by followers of the three Vedas who perform great sacrifices like Indra and other demigods; ca—also; upaniṣadbhiḥ—by the followers of the Upaniṣads, the topmost portion of Vedic knowledge; ca—also; sāṅkhya—by the philosophers who analytically study the universe; yogaiḥ—by mystic yogīs; ca—and; sātvataiḥ—by devotees who follow the method of worship mentioned in the Pañcarātra and other Vedic literatures; upagīyamāna—being sung; māhātmyam—whose glories; harim—unto the Supreme Personality of Godhead; sā—she, mother Yaśodā; amanyata—considered; ātma-jam—her own son, born out of her body.

TRANSLATION

"When mother Yaśodā saw all the universes within the mouth of Kṛṣṇa, she was certainly astonished for the time being. Nevertheless, she still considered the Lord her own son, although He is worshiped by great personalities who offer him sacrifices, great saints who understand the greatness of the Lord by studying the Upaniṣads, great philosophers who analytically study the universe, great yogīs who know him as the all-pervading Supersoul, and even devotees who accept the Lord as the Supreme Personality of Godhead.'

SYNONYMS

nandaḥ—Nanda Mahārāja; kim—what; akarot—has performed; brahman—O brāhmaṇa; śreyaḥ—auspicious activities; evam—thus; mahā-udayam—rising to such an exalted position as the father of Kṛṣṇa; yaśodā—mother Yaśodā; vā—or; mahā-bhāgā—most fortunate; papau—drank; yasyāḥ—of whom; stanam—the breasts; hariḥ—the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

"O brāhmaṇa, what pious activities did Nanda Mahārāja perform to receive the Supreme Personality of Godhead Kṛṣṇa as his son? And what pious activities did mother Yaśodā perform that made the Absolute Supreme Personality of Godhead Kṛṣṇa call her "mother" and suck her breasts?"

SYNONYMS

āsām—of the gopīs; aho—oh; caraṇa-reṇu—the dust of the lotus feet; juṣām—devoted to; aham syām—let me become; vṛndāvane—in Vṛndāvana; kim api—anyone; gulma-latā-auṣadhīnām—among bushes, creepers and herbs; yā—they who; dustyajam—very difficult to give up; sva-janam—family members; ārya-patham—the path of chastity; ca—and; hitvā—giving up; bhejuḥ—worshiped; mukunda-padavīm—the lotus feet of Mukunda, Kṛṣṇa; śrutibhiḥ—by the Vedas; vimṛgyām—to be searched for.

TRANSLATION

"The gopīs of Vṛndāvana have given up the association of their husbands, sons and other family members, who are very difficult to give up, and they have forsaken the path of chastity to take shelter of the lotus feet of Mukunda, Kṛṣṇa, which one should search for by Vedic knowledge. Oh, let me be fortunate enough to be one of the bushes, creepers or herbs in Vṛndāvana because the gopīs trample them and bless them with the dust of their lotus feet.'

PURPORT

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.47.61) was spoken by Uddhava. When Uddhava was sent by Kṛṣṇa to see the condition of the gopīs in Vṛndāvana, he stayed there for a few months in their association and always talked with them about Kṛṣṇa. Although this greatly pleased the gopīs and other residents of Vrajabhūmi, Vṛndāvana, Uddhava saw that the gopīs were severely afflicted by their separation from Kṛṣṇa. Their hearts were so disturbed that their minds were sometimes deranged. Observing the unalloyed devotion and love of the gopīs for Kṛṣṇa, Uddhava desired to become a creeper, a blade of grass or an herb in Vṛndāvana so that sometimes the gopīs would trample him and he would receive the dust of their lotus feet on his head.

bhaṅgī kari' mahāprabhu kahe eta vāṇī //CC Antya, 7.53//

SYNONYMS

bhaṭṭera hṛdaye—in the heart of Vallabha Bhaṭṭa; dṛḍha—fixed; abhimāna—pride; jāni'-understanding; bhaṅgī kari'-making a hint; mahāprabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kahe—spoke; eta vāṇī—these words.

TRANSLATION

Knowing that Vallabha Bhaṭṭa's heart was full of pride, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu spoke these words, hinting at how one can learn about devotional service.

PURPORT

Vallabha Bhaṭṭa was greatly proud of his knowledge in devotional service, and therefore he wanted to speak about Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu without understanding the Lord's position. The Lord therefore hinted in many ways that if Vallabha Bhaṭṭa wanted to know what devotional service actually is, he would have to learn from all the devotees He mentioned, beginning with Advaita Ācārya, Lord Nityānanda, Sārvabhauma Bhaṭṭācārya and Rāmānanda Rāya. As Svarūpa Dāmodara has said, if one wants to learn the meaning of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, one must take lessons from a realized soul. One should not proudly think that one can understand the transcendental loving service of the Lord simply by reading books. One must become a servant of a Vaiṣṇava. As Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura has confirmed, chāḍiyā vaiṣṇava-sevā nistāra pāyeche kebā: one cannot be in a transcendental position unless one very faithfully serves a pure Vaiṣṇava. One must accept a Vaiṣṇava guru (āḍau gurv-āśrayam), and then by questions and answers one should gradually learn what pure devotional service to Kṛṣṇa is. That is called the paramparā system.

tabe mora lajjā-paṅka haya prakṣālana" //CC Antya, 7.94//

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-nāma—of the name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; vyākhyā—explanation; yadi—if; karaha śravaṇa—you hear; tabe—then; mora—my; lajjā-paṅka—the mud of shame; haya—there is; prakṣālana—washing.

TRANSLATION

"Please hear my explanation of the meaning of Lord Kṛṣṇa's name. In that way the mud of the shame that has come upon me will be washed off."

Antya TEXT 7.95

saṅkaṭe paḍila paṇḍita, karaye saṁśaya ki karibena,--eko, karite nā pāre niścaya //CC Antya, 7.95//

SYNONYMS

saṅkaṭe—into a dilemma; paṇḍita paṇḍita—Paṇḍita Gosāñi fell; karaye saṁśaya—felt doubts; ki karibena—what he will do; eko—alone; karite nā pāre niścaya—cannot make a decision.

TRANSLATION

Thus Paṇḍita Gosāñi fell into a dilemma. He was in such doubt that he could not decide alone what to do.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu did not take Vallabha Bhaṭṭa very seriously. Therefore Paṇḍita Gosāñi, or Gadādhara Gosāñi, fell into perplexity. What would be his position if he heard Vallabha Bhaṭṭa's explanation of Śrī Kṛṣṇa's name? Certainly Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would be displeased. Therefore Gadādhara Paṇḍita Gosāñi could not make a decision.

Antya TEXT 7.96

yadyapi paṇḍita āra nā kailā aṅgikāra

bhaṭṭa yāi' tabu paḍe kari' balātkāra //CC Antya, 7.96//

SYNONYMS

yadyapi—although; paṇḍita—Gadādhara Paṇḍita; āra—also; nā kailā aṅgikāra—did not accept; bhaṭṭa—Vallabha Bhaṭṭa; yāi'-going; tabu—still; paḍe—reads; kari' balātkāra—forcibly.

TRANSLATION

Although Gadādhara Paṇḍita Gosāñi did not want to hear it, Vallabha Bhaṭṭa began to read his explanation with great force.

Antya TEXT 7.97

ābhijātye paṇḍita karite nāre niṣedhana

"e saṅkaṭe rākha, kṛṣṇa la-ilāṇa śaraṇa //CC Antya, 7.97//

SYNONYMS

ābhijātye—because of his aristocracy; paṇḍita—Gadādhara Paṇḍita; karite nāre niṣedhana—could not forbid; e saṅkaṭe—in this danger; rākha—please protect; kṛṣṇa—O Lord Kṛṣṇa; la-ilāṇa—I have taken; śaraṇa—shelter.

TRANSLATION

Because Vallabha Bhaṭṭa was a learned brāhmaṇa, Gadādhara Paṇḍita could not forbid him. Thus he began to think of Lord Kṛṣṇa. "My dear Lord Kṛṣṇa," he requested, "please protect me in this danger. I have taken shelter of You.

Antya TEXT 7.98

antaryāmī prabhu jānibena mora mana tānre bhaya nāhi kichu, 'viṣama' tānra gaṇa" //CC Antya, 7.98//

SYNONYMS

antaryāmī—existing in everyone's heart; prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jānibena—will know; mora mana—my mind; tānre—of Him; bhaya—fear; nāhi—there is not; kichu—any; viṣama—very critical; tānra gaṇa—his associates.

TRANSLATION

"Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is present in everyone's heart, and He will certainly know my mind. Therefore I do not fear Him. His associates, however, are extremely critical."

PURPORT

As the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu exists in everyone's heart. Therefore He would know the circumstances under which Paṇḍita Gosāṇi agreed to hear Vallabha Bhaṭṭa's explanations, and certainly He would not be angry. However, the Vaiṣṇavas who were always with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu might not understand Gadādhara Paṇḍita's inner consciousness, and they might accuse him of having compromised with Vallabha Bhaṭṭa, despite his having been neglected by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Gadādhara Paṇḍita Gosāṇi was seriously thinking in this way.

Antya TEXT 7.99

yadyapi vicāre paṇḍitera nāhi kichu doṣa tathāpi prabhura gaṇa tāṇre kare praṇaya-roṣa //CC Antya, 7.99//

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Hearing this, Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "My dear Vallabha Bhaṭṭa, you do not know religious principles. Actually, the first duty of a chaste woman is to carry out the order of her husband.

Antya TEXT 7.107

patira ājñā,--nirantara tāñra nāma la-ite

patira ājñā pati-vratā nā pāre lañghite //CC Antya, 7.107//

SYNONYMS

patira ājñā—the husband's order; nirantara—always; tāñra—His; nāma—name; la-ite—to chant; patira ājñā—the order of the husband; pati-vratā—a chaste, devoted wife; nā pāre lañghite—cannot deny.

TRANSLATION

"The order of Kṛṣṇa is to chant His name incessantly. Therefore one who is chaste and adherent to the husband Kṛṣṇa must chant the Lord's name, for she cannot deny the husband's order.

Antya TEXT 7.108

ataeva nāma laya, nāmera 'phala' pāya nāmera phale kṛṣṇa-pade 'prema' upajāya" //CC Antya, 7.108//

SYNONYMS

ataeva—therefore; nāma laya—chants the holy name; nāmera—of the name; phala—result; pāya—gets; nāmera phale—as a result of chanting the holy name; kṛṣṇa-pade—at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa; prema—ecstatic love; upajāya—develops.

TRANSLATION

"Following this religious principle, a pure devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa always chants the holy name. As a result of this, he gets the fruit of ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa."

Antya TEXT 7.109

śuniyā vallabha-bhaṭṭa haila nirvacana nā māne—does not accept; yei jana—anyone who; veśyāra bhitare—among the prostitutes; tāre—him; kariye gaṇana—I count.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu smilingly replied, "One who does not accept the svāmī [husband] as an authority I consider a prostitute."

Antya TEXT 7.116

incarnation of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; antarera abhimāna—internal pride; jānena—understands; tāhāra—his.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu descended as an incarnation for the benefit of the entire world. Thus He knew the mind of Vallabha Bhaṭṭa very well.

Antya TEXT 7.118

nānā avajñāne bhaṭṭe śodhena bhagavān

kṛṣṇa yaiche khaṇḍilena indrera abhimāna //CC Antya, 7.118//

SYNONYMS

nānā—various; avajñāne—by disrespect; bhaṭṭe—Vallabha Bhaṭṭa; śodhena—purifies; bhagavān—the Supreme Personality of Godhead; kṛṣṇa—Lord Kṛṣṇa; yaiche—as; khaṇḍilena—cuts down; indrera abhimāna—the pride of Indra.

TRANSLATION

By various hints and refutations, Lord Caitanya, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, corrected Vallabha Bhaṭṭa exactly as Kṛṣṇa had cut down the false pride of Indra.

PURPORT

Indra, the King of heaven, was very proud of his position. Therefore when the residents of Vṛndāvana decided not to perform the Indra-yajña but to perform the Govardhana-yajña in accordance with the instructions of Kṛṣṇa, Indra, because of his false pride, wanted to chastise the residents of Vṛndāvana. Thinking himself extremely powerful, Indra poured incessant rain upon Vṛndāvana, but Lord Kṛṣṇa immediately cut down his pride by lifting the Govardhana Hill as an umbrella to save the residents of Vṛndāvana. In this way Kṛṣṇa proved Indra's power most insignificant in the presence of His own omnipotence.

Antya TEXT 7.119

ajña jīva nija-'hite' 'ahita' kari' māne

garva cūrṇa haile, pāche ughāḍe nayane //CC Antya, 7.119//

SYNONYMS

ajña jīva—the ignorant living entity; nija-hite—his personal benefit; ahita kari' māne—considers a loss; garva cūrṇa haile—when pride is cut down; pāche—afterward; ughāḍe nayane—the eyes open.

TRANSLATION

An ignorant living being does not recognize his actual profit. Because of ignorance and material pride, he sometimes considers profit a loss, but when his pride is cut down he can actually see his true benefit.

Antya TEXT 7.120

TRANSLATION

"Whatever you might write due to false pride, trying to surpass Śrīdhara Svāmī, would carry a contrary purport. Therefore no one would pay attention to it.

PURPORT

Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam has many ṭīkāś, or commentaries, following the paramparā system, but Śrīdhara Svāmī's is first. The commentaries of all the other ācāryas follow his. The paramparā system does not allow one to deviate from the commentaries of the previous ācāryas. By depending upon the previous ācāryas, one can write beautiful commentaries. However, one cannot defy the previous ācāryas. The false pride that makes one think that he can write better than the previous ācāryas will make one's comments faulty. At the present moment it has become fashionable for everyone to write in his own way, but such writing is never accepted by serious devotees. Because of false pride, every scholar and philosopher wants to exhibit his learning by interpreting the śāstras, especially Bhagavad-gītā and Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, in his own way. This system of commenting in one's own way is fully condemned by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Therefore He says, 'artha-vyasta' likhana sei. Commentaries written according to one's own philosophical way are never accepted; no one will appreciate such commentaries on the revealed scriptures.

aiśvarya-jñāne tānra roṣa nāhi upajaya //CC Antya, 7.145//

tānra—his; praṇaya-roṣa—affectionate anger; dekhite—to see; prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; icchā haya—there is a desire; aiśvarya-jñāne—due to knowledge of opulences; tānra—his; roṣa—anger; nāhi—not; upajaya—is awakened.

TRANSLATION

Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu sometimes desired to see Gadādhara Paṇḍita's affectionate anger, but because of knowledge of the Lord's opulences, his anger was never invoked.

PURPORT

Joking with Rukmiṇīdevī in Dvārakā, Kṛṣṇa once advised her to accept another husband because He thought Himself unfit for her. Rukmiṇīdevī, however, unable to understand His joking words, took them very seriously and immediately fell to the ground in fear of separation from Him. In the pastimes of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Jagadānanda Paṇḍita was always in disagreement with the Lord like Satyabhāmā, whereas Gadādhara Paṇḍita was always awed by the Lord's opulence and was therefore submissive to the Lord under all circumstances.

Antya TEXT 7.146

TRANSLATION

The Lord purified Vallabha Bhaṭṭa by cleansing him of the mud of false pride. By such activities the Lord also instructed others.

Antya TEXT 7.168

antare 'anugraha,' bāhye 'upekṣāra prāya' bāhyārtha yei laya, sei nāśa yāya //CC Antya, 7.168//

SYNONYMS

antare—within the heart; anugraha—mercy; bāhye—externally; upekṣāra prāya—like neglect; bāhya-artha—the external meaning; yei—anyone who; laya—takes; sei—he; nāśa yāya—becomes vanquished.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was actually always merciful within His heart, but He was sometimes externally negligent of His devotees. We should not be preoccupied with His external feature, however, for if we do so we shall be vanquished.

Antya TEXT 7.169

SYNONYMS

nigūḍha—very deep; caitanya-līlā—the pastimes of Lord Caitanya; bujhite—to understand; kā'ra—of whom; śakti—the power; sei bujhe—he understands; gauracandre—unto Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; yāñra—whose; ṛḍha bhakti—fixed devotion.

TRANSLATION

The pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are very deep. Who can understand them? Only one who has firm, deep devotion to His lotus feet.

Antya TEXT 7.170

dināntare paṇḍita kaila prabhura nimantraṇa prabhu tāhān bhikṣā kaila lañā nija-gaṇa //CC Antya, 7.170//

SYNONYMS

dina-antare—another day; paṇḍita—Gadādhara Paṇḍita; kaila prabhura nimantraṇa—invited Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāhān—there; bhikṣā kaila—took prasāda; lañā nija-gaṇa—with His personal associates.

TRANSLATION

Another day, Gadādhara Paṇḍita invited Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to dinner. The Lord took prasāda at his home with His personal associates.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments that Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu acted as a very merciful well-wisher toward Vallabha Bhaṭṭa by externally neglecting him in many ways to purify him of his false pride in being a learned scholar. The Lord neglected Gadādhara Paṇḍita for a few days because of his associating with Vallabha Bhaṭṭa. Actually He was not at all displeased with Gadādhara Paṇḍita. Indeed, because Gadādhara Paṇḍita is the personal potency of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu, there is no chance of the Lord's being dissatisfied with him. However, a person who is too attracted to externals cannot understand the deep meaning of these dealings of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. If one therefore becomes disrespectful to Gadādhara Paṇḍita, he will surely be vanquished.

Antya TEXT 7.171

tāhāṇi vallabha-bhaṭṭa prabhura ājñā laila

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Seventh Chapter, describing the meeting of Vallabha Bhaṭṭa with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Chapter 8 Rāmacandra Purī Criticizes the Lord

The following summary of the Eighth Chapter is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. This chapter describes the history of the Lord's dealings with Rāmacandra Purī. Although Rāmacandra Purī was one of the disciples of Mādhavendra Purī, he was influenced by dry Māyāvādīs, and therefore he criticized Mādhavendra Purī. Therefore Mādhavendra Purī accused him of being an offender and rejected him. Because Rāmacandra Purī had been rejected by his spiritual master, he became concerned only with finding faults in others and advising them according to dry Māyāvāda philosophy. For this reason he was not very respectful to the Vaiṣṇavas, and later he became so fallen that he began criticizing Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu for His eating. Hearing his criticisms, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu reduced His eating, but after Rāmacandra Purī left Jagannātha Purī, the Lord resumed His usual behavior.

taṁ vande kṛṣṇa-caitanyam

rāmacandra-purī-bhayāt laukikāhārataḥ svam yo bhikṣānnaṁ samakocayat //CC Antya, 8.1// tam—to Him; vande—I offer my respectful obeisances; kṛṣṇa-caitanyam—Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; rāmacandra-purī-bhayāt—due to fear of Rāmacandra Purī; laukika—ordinary; āhārataḥ—from eating; svam—His own; yaḥ—who; bhikṣā-annaṁ—quantity of food; samakocayat—reduced.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Let me offer my respectful obeisances to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who reduced His eating due to fear of the criticism of Rāmacandra Purī.

Antya TEXT 8.2

jaya jaya śrī-caitanya karuṇā-sindhu-avatāra

brahmā-śivādika bhaje caraṇa yāñhāra //CC Antya, 8.2//

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya—all glories; śrī-caitanya—to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; karuṇā-sindhu-avatāra—the incarnation of the ocean of mercy; brahmā-śiva-ādika—demigods, beginning from Lord Brahmā and Śiva; bhaje—worship; caraṇa—lotus feet; yāñhāra—whose.

TRANSLATION

All glories to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the incarnation of the ocean of mercy. His lotus feet are worshiped by demigods like Lord Brahmā and Lord Śiva.

Antya TEXT 8.3

jaya jaya avadhūta-candra nityānanda

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya—all glories; avadhūta-candra—to the moon of mendicants; nityānanda

—Lord Nityānanda; jagat—the world; bāndhila—bound; yeñha—who; diyā—by; prema-phāṇḍa—the noose of ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

All glories to Nityānanda Prabhu, the greatest of mendicants, who bound the entire world with a knot of ecstatic love for God.

jaya jaya advaita īśvara avatāra

kṛṣṇa avatāri' kaila jagat-nistāra //CC Antya, 8.4//

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya—all glories; advaita—to Advaita Ācārya; īśvara—of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; avatāra—incarnation; kṛṣṇa avatāri'—inducing Kṛṣṇa to descend; kaila—did; jagat-nistāra—deliverance of the entire world.

TRANSLATION

All glories to Advaita Prabhu, the incarnation of the Supreme Personality of Godhead. He induced Kṛṣṇa to descend and thus delivered the entire world.

Antya TEXT 8.5

jaya jaya śrīvāsādi yata bhakta-gaṇa

śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu--yāñra prāṇa-dhana //CC Antya, 8.5//

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya—all glories; śrīvāsa-ādi—headed by Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; yata bhakta-gaṇa—to all the devotees; śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; yāñra—whose; prāṇa-dhana—life and soul.

TRANSLATION

All glories to all the devotees, headed by Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura. Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya Mahāprabhu is their life and soul.

Antya TEXT 8.6

ei-mata gauracandra nija-bhakta-saṅge nīlācale krīḍā kare kṛṣṇa-prema-taraṅge //CC Antya, 8.6//

SYNONYMS

ei-mata—in this way; gauracandra—Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; nija-bhakta-saṅge—with His own devotees; nīlācale—at Jagannātha Purī; krīḍā kare—executes different pastimes; kṛṣṇa-prema-taraṅge—in the waves of love of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

Thus Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, at Jagannātha Purī, performed His various pastimes with His own devotees in the waves of love for Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 8.7

hena-kāle rāmacandra-purī-gosāñi āilā

paramānanda-purīre āra prabhure mililā //CC Antya, 8.7//

SYNONYMS

hena-kāle—at this time; rāmacandra-purī-gosāñi—a sannyāsī named Rāmacandra Purī; āilā—came; paramānanda-purīre—Paramānanda Purī; āra—and; prabhure—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; mililā—met.

TRANSLATION

Then a sannyāsī named Rāmacandra Purī Gosāñi came to see Paramānanda Purī and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Antya TEXT 8.8

paramānanda-purī kaila caraṇa vandana

purī-gosāñi kaila tāṇre ḍṛḍha āliṅgana //CC Antya, 8.8//

SYNONYMS

paramānanda-purī—Paramānanda Purī; kaila—did; caraṇa—unto the feet; vandana—offering obeisances; purī-gosāñi—Rāmacandra Purī; kaila—did; tāṇre—unto him; ḍṛḍha—strong; āliṅgana—embracing.

TRANSLATION

Paramānanda Purī offered respects at the feet of Rāmacandra Purī, and Rāmacandra Purī strongly embraced him.

PURPORT

Because Rāmacandra Purī was a disciple of Mādhavendra Purī, both Paramānanda Purī and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu offered him respectful obeisances. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments that although Rāmacandra Purī was naturally very envious and although he was against the principles of Vaiṣṇavism-or, in other words, against the principles of the Supreme Personality of Godhead and His devotees-common people nevertheless addressed him as Gosvāmī or Gosāñi because he was superficially in the renounced order and dressed like a sannyāsī. In the modern age the title gosvāmī is used by a caste of gr̥hasthas, but formerly it was not. Rūpa Gosvāmī and Sanātana Gosvāmī, for example, were called gosvāmī because they were in the renounced order. Similarly, because Paramānanda Purī was a sannyāsī, he was called Purī Gosvāmī. By careful scrutiny, therefore, one will find that gosvāmī is not the title for a certain caste; rather, it is properly the title for a person in the renounced order.

Antya TEXT 8.9

mahāprabhu kailā tāñre daṇḍavat nati āliṅgana kari' teñho kaila kṛṣṇa-smṛti //CC Antya, 8.9//

SYNONYMS

mahāprabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kailā—did; tāñre—unto him; daṇḍavat nati—offering obeisances; āliṅgana kari'-embracing; teñho—Rāmacandra Purī; kaila—did; kṛṣṇa-smṛti—remembrance of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu also offered obeisances unto Rāmacandra Purī, who then embraced Him and thus remembered Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu offered obeisances to Rāmacandra Purī in consideration of his being a disciple of Śrīla Mādhavendra Purī, the spiritual master of His own spiritual master, Īśvara Purī. When a Vaiṣṇava sannyāsī meets another Vaiṣṇava sannyāsī, they both remember Kṛṣṇa. Even Māyāvādī sannyāsīs generally remember Nārāyaṇa, who is also Kṛṣṇa, by saying om̐ namo bhagavate nārāyaṇa or namo nārāyaṇa. Thus it is the duty of a sannyāsī to remember Kṛṣṇa. According to smṛti-śāstra, a sannyāsī does not offer obeisances or blessings to anyone. it is said, sannyāsī nirāśīr nirnamaṣkriyaḥ: a sannyāsī should not offer anyone blessings or obeisances.

Antya TEXT 8.10

tina-jane iṣṭha-goṣṭhī kailā kata-kṣaṇa jagadānanda-pañḍita tāñre kailā nimantraṇa //CC Antya, 8.10//

SYNONYMS

tina-jane—three persons; iṣṭha-goṣṭhī—discussion on Kṛṣṇa; kailā—performed; kata-kṣaṇa—for some time; jagadānanda-pañḍita—Jagadānanda Pañḍita; tāñre—Rāmacandra Purī; kailā nimantraṇa—invited.

TRANSLATION

The three of them talked about Kṛṣṇa for some time, and then Jagadānanda came and extended an invitation to Rāmacandra Purī.

Antya TEXT 8.11

jagannāthera prasāda ānilā bhikṣāra lāgiyā yatheṣṭa bhikṣā karilā tenho nindāra lāgiyā //CC Antya, 8.11//

SYNONYMS

jagannāthera prasāda—remnants of the food of Lord Jagannātha; ānilā—brought; bhikṣāra lāgiyā—for feeding; yatheṣṭa bhikṣā karilā—ate sumptuously; tenho—he; nindāra lāgiyā—to find some fault.

TRANSLATION

A large quantity of the remnants of food from Lord Jagannātha was brought in for distribution. Rāmacandra Purī ate sumptuously, and then he wanted to find faults in Jagadānanda Pañḍita.

Antya TEXT 8.12

bhikṣā kari' kahe purī,--"śuna, jagadānanda avaśeṣa prasāda tumi karaha bhakṣaṇa" //CC Antya, 8.12//

SYNONYMS

bhikṣā kari'-after finishing the lunch; kahe purī—Rāmacandra Purī began to speak; śuna, jagadānanda—my dear Jagadānanda, just hear; avaśeṣa prasāda—the remaining prasāda; tumi—you; karaha bhakṣaṇa—eat.

TRANSLATION

After finishing the meal, Rāmacandra Purī requested, "My dear Jagadānanda, please listen. You eat the food that is left."

Antya TEXT 8.13

āgraha kariyā tānre vasi' khāoyāila

āpane āgraha kari' pariveśana kaila //CC Antya, 8.13//

SYNONYMS

āgraha kariyā—with great eagerness; tānre vasi'-seating him; khāoyāila—he fed; āpane—personally; āgraha kari'-with great eagerness; pariveśana kaila - administered the prasāda.

TRANSLATION

With great eagerness Rāmacandra Purī seated Jagadānanda Paṇḍita and personally served him prasāda.

Antya TEXT 8.14

āgraha kariyā punaḥ punaḥ khāoyāila

ācamana kaile nindā karite lāgila //CC Antya, 8.14//

SYNONYMS

āgraha kariyā—with eagerness; punaḥ punaḥ—again and again; khāoyāila—fed; ācamana kaile—when he had washed his hands and mouth; nindā karite lāgila—began to criticize.

TRANSLATION

Encouraging him again and again, Rāmacandra Purī fed him sumptuously, but when Jagadānanda had washed his hands and mouth, Rāmacandra Purī began criticizing him.

Antya TEXT 8.15

"śuni, caitanya-gaṇa kare bahuta bhakṣaṇa

'satya' sei vākya,--sākṣāt dekhiluṇ ekhana //CC Antya, 8.15//

SYNONYMS

śuni—I have heard; caitanya-gaṇa—the followers of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kare bahuta bhakṣaṇa—eat more than necessary; satya—true; sei vākya—that statement; sākṣāt—directly; dekhiluṇ—I have seen; ekhana—now.

TRANSLATION

"I have heard," he said, "that the followers of Caitanya Mahāprabhu eat more than necessary. Now I have directly seen that this is true.

Antya TEXT 8.16

sannyāsīre eta khāoyāñā kare dharma nāśa vairāgī hañā eta khāya, vairāgyera nāhi 'bhāsa' " //CC Antya, 8.16//

SYNONYMS

sannyāsīre—unto a sannyāsī; eta—so much; khāoyāñā—feeding; kare dharma nāśa—destroys the regulative principles; vairāgī hañā—being in the renounced order; eta—so much; khāya—eats; vairāgyera nāhi bhāsa—there is no trace of renunciation.

TRANSLATION

"Feeding a sannyāsī too much breaks his regulative principles, for when a sannyāsī eats too much, his renunciation is destroyed."

Antya TEXT 8.17

ei ta' svabhāva tāñra āgraha kariyā piche nindā kare, āge bahuta khāoyāñā //CC Antya, 8.17//

SYNONYMS

ei—this; ta'-certainly; sva-bhāva—characteristic; tāñra—his; āgraha kariyā—with great eagerness; piche—afterward; nindā kare—criticizes; āge—at first; bahuta—much; khāoyāñā—feeding.

TRANSLATION

The characteristic of Rāmacandra Purī was that first he would induce someone to eat more than necessary and then he would criticize him.

Antya TEXT 8.18

pūrve yabe mādhavendra karena antardhāna rāmacandra-purī tabe āilā tāñra sthāna //CC Antya, 8.18//

SYNONYMS

pūrve—formerly; yabe—when; mādhavendra—Mādhavendra Purī; karena antardhāna—was about to die; rāmacandra-purī—Rāmacandra Purī; tabe—at that time; āilā—came; tāñra sthāna—to his place.

TRANSLATION

Formerly, when Mādhavendra Purī was at the last stage of his life, Rāmacandra Purī came to where he was staying.

Antya TEXT 8.19

purī-gosāñi kare kṛṣṇa-nāma-saṅkīrtana

'mathurā nā pāinu' bali' karena krandana //CC Antya, 8.19//

SYNONYMS

purī-gosāñi—Mādhavendra Purī; kare—was performing; kṛṣṇa-nāma-saṅkīrtana—the chanting of the holy name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; mathurā nā pāinu—I did not get shelter at Mathurā; bali'-saying; karena krandana—was crying.

TRANSLATION

Mādhavendra Purī was chanting the holy name of Kṛṣṇa, and sometimes he would cry, "O my Lord, I did not get shelter at Mathurā."

Antya TEXT 8.20

rāmacandra-purī tabe upadeśe tāñre

śiṣya hañā guruke kahe, bhaya nāhi kare //CC Antya, 8.20//

SYNONYMS

rāmacandra-purī—Rāmacandra Purī; tabe—then; upadeśe tāñre—instructed him; śiṣya hañā—being a disciple; guruke kahe—said to his spiritual master; bhaya nāhi kare—without fear.

TRANSLATION

Then Rāmacandra Purī was so foolish that he fearlessly dared to instruct his spiritual master.

Antya TEXT 8.21

"tumi--pūrṇa-brahmānanda, karaha smaraṇa brahmavit hañā kene karaha rodana?" //CC Antya, 8.21//

SYNONYMS

tumi—you; pūrṇa-brahma-ānanda—full in transcendental bliss; karaha smaraṇa—you should remember; brahma-vit hañā—being fully aware of Brahman; kene—why; karaha rodana—are you crying.

TRANSLATION

"If you are in full transcendental bliss," he said, "you should now remember only Brahman. Why are you crying?"

PURPORT

As stated in Bhagavad-gītā, brahma-bhūtaḥ prasannātmā: a Brahman realized person is always happy. Na śocati na kāṅkṣati: he neither laments nor aspires for anything. Not knowing why Mādhavendra Purī was crying, Rāmacandra Purī tried to become his advisor. Thus he committed a great offense, for a disciple should never try to instruct his spiritual master.

Antya TEXT 8.22

śuni' mādhavendra-mane krodha upajila

'dūra, dūra, pāpiṣṭha' bali' bhartsanā karila //CC Antya, 8.22//

SYNONYMS

śuni'-hearing; mādhavendra—of Mādhavendra Purī; mane—in the mind; krodha—anger; upajila—arose; dūra dūra—get out; pāpiṣṭha—you sinful rascal; bali'-saying; bhartsanā karila—he chastised.

TRANSLATION

Hearing this instruction, Mādhavendra Purī, greatly angry, rebuked him by saying, "Get out, you sinful rascal!

PURPORT

Rāmacandra Purī could not understand that his spiritual master, Mādhavendra Purī, was feeling transcendental separation. His lamentation was not material. Rather, it proceeded from the highest stage of ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa. When he was crying in separation, "I could not achieve Kṛṣṇa! I could not reach Mathurā!" this was not ordinary material lamentation. Rāmacandra Purī was not sufficiently expert to understand the feelings of Mādhavendra Purī, but nevertheless he thought himself very advanced. Therefore, regarding Mādhavendra Purī's expressions as ordinary material lamentation, he advised him to remember Brahman because he was latently an impersonalist. Mādhavendra Purī understood Rāmacandra Purī's position as a great fool and therefore immediately rebuked him. Such a reprimand from the spiritual master is certainly for the betterment of the disciple.

Antya TEXT 8.23

'kṛṣṇa nā pāinu, nā pāinu 'mathurā'

āpana-duḥkhe maroṇ--ei dite āila jvālā //CC Antya, 8.23//

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa—Lord Kṛṣṇa; nā pāinu—I did not get; nā pāinu—did not get; mathurā—Mathurā; āpana-duḥkhe—in my own unhappiness; maroṇ—i am dying; ei—this person; dite āila jvālā—has come to give more pain.

TRANSLATION

"O my Lord Kṛṣṇa, I could not reach You, nor could I reach Your abode, Mathurā. I am dying in my unhappiness, and now this rascal has come to give me more pain.

Antya TEXT 8.24

more mukha nā dekhābi tui, yāo yathi-tathi tore dekhi' maile mora habe asad-gati //CC Antya, 8.24//

SYNONYMS

more—to me; mukha—face; nā dekhābi—do not show; tui—you; yāo—go; yathi-tathi—anywhere else; tore—you; dekhi'-seeing; maile—if I die; mora habe asat-gati—I shall not get my destination.

TRANSLATION

"Don't show your face to me! Go anywhere else you like. If I die seeing your face, I shall not achieve the destination of my life.

Antya TEXT 8.25

kṛṣṇa nā pāinu muñi maroṇ āpanāra duḥkhe more 'brahma' upadeśe ei chāra mūrke" //CC Antya, 8.25//

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa—Kṛṣṇa; nā pāinu—could not get; muñi—I; maroṇ—I die; āpanāra duḥkhe—in my own unhappiness; more—to me; brahma—Brahman; upadeśe—instructs; ei—this; chāra—condemned; mūrke—fool.

TRANSLATION

"I am dying without achieving the shelter of Kṛṣṇa, and therefore I am greatly unhappy. Now this condemned foolish rascal has come to instruct me about Brahman."

Antya TEXT 8.26

ei ye śrī-mādhavendra śrī-pāda upekṣā karila sei aparādhe inhāra 'vāsanā, janmila //CC Antya, 8.26//

SYNONYMS

ei—this; ye—that; śrī-mādhavendra śrī-pāda—His Lordship Mādhavendra Purī; upekṣā karila—neglected or denounced; sei aparādhe—because of the offense; inhāra—of Rāmacandra Purī; vāsanā—material desire; janmila—arose.

TRANSLATION

Rāmacandra Purī was thus denounced by Mādhavendra Purī. Due to his offense, gradually material desire appeared within him.

PURPORT

The word vāsanā ("material desires") refers to dry speculative knowledge. Such speculative knowledge is only material. As confirmed in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.14.4), a person without devotional service who simply wants to know things (kevala-bodha-labdhave) gains only dry speculative knowledge but no spiritual profit. This is also confirmed in the Bhakti-sandarbhā (111), wherein it is said:

jīvan-muktā api punar

yānti saṁsāra-vāsanām

yady acintya-mahā-śaktau

bhagavatya aparādhinaḥ

"Even though one is liberated in this life, if one offends the Supreme Personality of Godhead he falls down in the midst of material desires, of which dry speculation about spiritual realization is one."

In his Laghu-toṣaṇī commentary on Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.2.32), Jīva Gosvāmī says;

jīvan-muktā api punar

bandhanam yānti karmabhiḥ

yady acintya-mahā-śaktau

bhagavatya aparādhinaḥ

"Even if one is liberated in this life, he becomes addicted to material desires because of offenses to the Supreme Personality of Godhead."

A similar quotation from one of the Purāṇas also appears in the Viṣṇu-bhakti-candrodaya:

jīvan-muktāḥ prapadyante

kvacit saṁsāra-vāsanām

yogino na vilipyante

karmabhir bhagavat-parāḥ

"Even liberated souls sometimes fall down to material desires, but those who fully engaged in devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead are not affected by such desires."

These are references from authoritative revealed scriptures. If one becomes an offender to his spiritual master or the Supreme Personality of Godhead, he falls down to the material platform to merely speculate.

Antya TEXT 8.27

śuṣka-brahma-jñānī, nāhi kṛṣṇera 'sambandha'

sarva loka nindā kare, nindāte nirbandha //CC Antya, 8.27//

SYNONYMS

śuṣka—dry; brahma-jñānī—impersonalist philosopher; nāhi—there is not; kṛṣṇera—with Lord Kṛṣṇa; sambandha—relationship; sarva—all; loka—persons; nindā kare—criticizes; nindāte nirbandha—fixed in blaspheming.

TRANSLATION

One who is attached to dry speculative knowledge has no relationship with Kṛṣṇa. His occupation is criticizing Vaiṣṇavas. Thus he is situated in criticism.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura has explained in his Anubhāṣya that the word nirbandha indicates that Rāmacandra Purī had a steady desire to criticize others. Impersonalist Māyāvādīs who have no relationship with Kṛṣṇa, who cannot take to devotional service and who simply engage in material arguments to understand Brahman regard devotional service to Kṛṣṇa as karma-kāṇḍa, or fruitive activities. According to them, devotional service to Kṛṣṇa is but another means for attaining dharma, artha, kāma and mokṣa. Therefore they criticize the devotees for engaging in material activities. They think that devotional service is māyā and that Kṛṣṇa or Viṣṇu is also māyā. Therefore they are called Māyāvādīs. Such a mentality awakens in a person who is an offender to Kṛṣṇa and His devotees.

Antya TEXT 8.28

Īśvara-purī gosāñi kare śrī-pāda-sevana

svahaste karena mala-mūtrādi mārjana //CC Antya, 8.28//

SYNONYMS

Īśvara-purī—Īśvara Purī; gosāñi—Gosvāmī; kare—performs; śrī-pāda-sevana—service to Mādhavendra Purī; sva-haste—with his own hand; karena—performs; mala-mūtra-ādi—stool, urine, and so on; mārjana—cleaning.

TRANSLATION

Īśvara Purī, the spiritual master of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, performed service to Mādhavendra Purī, cleaning up his stool and urine with his own hand.

Antya TEXT 8.29

nirantara kṛṣṇa-nāma karāya smaraṇa

kṛṣṇa-nāma, kṛṣṇa-līlā śunāya anukṣaṇa //CC Antya, 8.29//

SYNONYMS

nirantara—always; kṛṣṇa-nāma—the name of Lord Kṛṣṇa; karāya smaraṇa—was reminding; kṛṣṇa-nāma—the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; kṛṣṇa-līlā—pastimes of Kṛṣṇa; śunāya anukṣaṇa—was always causing to hear.

TRANSLATION

Īśvara Purī was always chanting the holy name and pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa for Mādhavendra Purī to hear. In this way he helped Mādhavendra Purī remember the holy name and pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa at the time of death.

Antya TEXT 8.30

tuṣṭa hañā purī tāñre kailā āliṅgana

vara dilā--'kṛṣṇe tomāra ha-uka prema-dhana' //CC Antya, 8.30//

SYNONYMS

tuṣṭa hañā—being pleased; purī—Mādhavendra Purī; tāñre—him; kailā āliṅgana—embraced; vara dilā—gave the benediction; kṛṣṇe—unto Kṛṣṇa; tomāra—your; ha-uka—let there be; prema-dhana—the wealth of love.

TRANSLATION

Pleased with Īśvara Purī, Mādhavendra Purī embraced him and gave him the benediction that he would be a great devotee and lover of Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 8.31

sei haite īśvara-purī--'premera sāgara' rāmacandra-purī haila sarva-nindākara //CC Antya, 8.31//

SYNONYMS

sei haite—from that; īśvara-purī—Īśvara Purī; premera sāgara—the ocean of ecstatic love; rāmacandra-purī—Rāmacandra Purī; haila—became; sarva-nindākara—critic of all others.

TRANSLATION

Thus Īśvara Purī became like an ocean of ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa, whereas Rāmacandra Purī became a dry speculator and a critic of everyone else.

Antya TEXT 8.32

mahad-anugraha-nigrahera 'sākṣī' dui-jane ei dui-dvāre śikhāilā jaga-jane //CC Antya, 8.32//

SYNONYMS

mahat—of an exalted personality; anugraha—of the blessing; nigrahera—of chastisement; sākṣī—giving evidence; dui-jane—two persons; ei dui-dvāre—by these two; śikhāilā—instructed; jaga-jane—the people of the world.

TRANSLATION

Īśvara Purī received the blessing of Mādhavendra Purī, whereas Rāmacandra

Purī received a rebuke from him. Therefore these two persons, Īśvara Purī and Rāmacandra Purī, are examples of the objects of a great personality's benediction and punishment. Mādhavendra Purī instructed the entire world by presenting these two examples.

Antya TEXT 8.33

jagad-guru mādhavendra kari' prema dāna ei śloka paḍi' teṅho kaila antardhāna //CC Antya, 8.33//

SYNONYMS

jagat-guru—the spiritual master of the entire world; mādhavendra—Mādhavendra Purī; kari' prema dāna—giving ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa as charity; ei śloka paḍi'-reciting this verse; teṅho—he; kaila antardhāna—passed away from this material world.

TRANSLATION

His Divine Grace Mādhavendra Purī, the spiritual master of the entire world, thus distributed ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa. While passing away from the material world, he chanted the following verse.

Antya TEXT 8.34

ayi dīna-dayārdra nātha he mathurā-nātha kadāvalokyase hṛdayam tvad-aloka-kātaram dayita bhrāmyati kim karomy aham //CC Antya, 8.34//

SYNONYMS

ayi—O my Lord; dīna—on the poor; dayā-ārdra—compassionate; nātha—O master; he—O; mathurā-nātha—the master of Mathurā; kadā—when; avalokyase—I shall see you; hṛdayam—my heart; tvat—of You; aloka—without seeing; kātaram—very much aggrieved; dayita—O most beloved; bhrāmyati—becomes overwhelmed; kim—what; karomi—shall do; aham—I.

TRANSLATION

"O my Lord! O most merciful master! O master of Mathurā! When shall I see You again? Because of my not seeing You, my agitated heart has become unsteady. O most beloved one, what shall I do now?"

Antya TEXT 8.35

ei śloke kṛṣṇa-prema kare upadeśa kṛṣṇera virahe bhaktera bhāva-viśeṣa //CC Antya, 8.35//

TRANSLATION

I have incidentally described the passing away of Mādhavendra Purī. Anyone who hears this must be considered very fortunate.

Antya TEXT 8.38

rāmacandra-purī aiche rahilā nīlācale

virakta svabhāva, kabhu rahe kona sthale //CC Antya, 8.38//

SYNONYMS

rāmacandra-purī—Rāmacandra Purī; aiche—in this way; rahilā nīlācale—remained at Jagannātha Purī; virakta—renounced; sva-bhāva—as is the custom; kabhu—sometimes; rahe—he remained; kona sthale—at a particular place.

TRANSLATION

Thus Rāmacandra Purī stayed at Jagannātha Purī. As customary for those in the renounced order, he would sometimes stay someplace and then go away.

Antya TEXT 8.39

animantraṇa bhikṣā kare, nāhika nirṇaya

anyera bhikṣāra sthitira layena niścaya //CC Antya, 8.39//

SYNONYMS

animantraṇa—without being invited; bhikṣā kare—accepts food; nāhika nirṇaya—there is no certainty; anyera—of others; bhikṣāra—of acceptance of prasāda; sthitira—of the situation; layena niścaya—takes account.

TRANSLATION

There was no certainty of where Rāmacandra Purī would take his meal, for he would do so even uninvited. Nevertheless, he was very particular to keep account of how others were taking their meals.

Antya TEXT 8.40

prabhura nimantraṇe lāge kauḍi cāri paṇa

kabhu kāśīśvara, govinda khāna tina jana //CC Antya, 8.40//

SYNONYMS

prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; nimantraṇe—for invitation; lāge—is required; kauḍi cāri paṇa—four times eighty small conchshells; kabhu kāśīśvara—sometimes Kāśīśvara; govinda—the personal servant of Caitanya Mahāprabhu; khāna—eat; tina jana—three persons.

TRANSLATION

To invite Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would cost 320 kauḍis [small conchshells]. This would provide lunch for three people, including Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and sometimes Kāśīśvara and Govinda.

Antya TEXT 8.41

pratyaha prabhura bhikṣā iti-uti haya keha yadi mūlya āne, cāri-paṇa-nirṇaya //CC Antya, 8.41//

TRANSLATION

Every day the Lord would take His meal at a different place, and if someone was prepared to pay for a meal, the price was fixed at only four paṇas.

Antya TEXT 8.42

prabhura sthiti, rīti, bhikṣā, śayana, prayāṇa rāmacandra-purī kare sarvānusandhāna //CC Antya, 8.42//

SYNONYMS

prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; sthiti—situation; rīti—regulative principles; bhikṣā—accepting lunch; śayana—sleeping; prayāṇa—movement; rāmacandra-purī—Rāmacandra Purī; kare sarva-anusandhāna—takes all information of.

TRANSLATION

Rāmacandra Purī concerned himself with gathering all sorts of information about how Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was situated, including His regulative principles, His lunch, His sleep and His movements.

Antya TEXT 8.43

prabhura yateka guṇa sparśite nārila chidra cāhi' bule, kāñhā chidra nā pāila //CC Antya, 8.43//

SYNONYMS

prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; yateka guṇa—all the transcendental attributes; sparśite nārila—could not touch or understand; chidra cāhi'-looking for faults; bule—he goes about; kāñhā—anywhere; chidra—fault; nā pāila—he could not find.

TRANSLATION

Because Rāmacandra Purī was interested only in finding faults, he could not understand the transcendental qualities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. His only concern was finding faults, but still he could not find any.

Antya TEXT 8.44

'sannyāsī hañā kare miṣṭāṇṇa bhakṣaṇa

ei bhoge haya kaiche indriya-vāraṇa'? //CC Antya, 8.44//

SYNONYMS

sannyāsī hañā—being a sannyāsī; kare miṣṭāṇṇa bhakṣaṇa—eats sweetmeats; ei bhoge—by this eating; haya—there is; kaiche—how; indriya-vāraṇa—controlling the senses.

TRANSLATION

At last he found a fault. "How can a person in the renounced order eat so many sweetmeats?" he said. "If one eats sweets, controlling the senses is very difficult."

Antya TEXT 8.45

ei nindā kari' kahe sarva-loka-sthāne prabhure dekhiteha avaśya āise prati-dine //CC Antya, 8.45//

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu had heard rumors about Rāmacandra Purī's blasphemy. Now He directly heard his fanciful accusations.

PURPORT

Rāmacandra Purī could find no faults in the character of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, for He is situated in a transcendental position as the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Ants are generally found everywhere, but when Rāmacandra Purī saw ants crawling in the abode of the Lord, he took for granted that they must have been there because Caitanya Mahāprabhu had been eating sweetmeats. He thus discovered imaginary faults in the Lord and then left.

Antya TEXT 8.51

sahajei pipīlikā sarvatra beḍāya tāhāte tarka uṭhāñā doṣa lāgāya //CC Antya, 8.51//

SYNONYMS

sahajei—generally; pipīlikā—ants; sarvatra—everywhere; beḍāya—loiter; tāhāte—by that; tarka uṭhāñā—raising a controversy; doṣa lāgāya—find faults.

TRANSLATION

Ants generally crawl about here, there and everywhere, but Rāmacandra Purī, looking for imaginary faults, criticized Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu by alleging that there had been sweetmeats in His room.

Antya TEXT 8.52

ei-mātra govinda kaila aṅgikāra

māthāya ghā māre vipra, kare hāhākāra //CC Antya, 8.57-58//

SYNONYMS

sei-dina-that day; eka-vipra-one brāhmaṇa; kaila nimantraṇa-invited; eka-cauṭhi bhāta-one-fourth of a pot of rice; pāñca-gaṇḍāra vyañjana-vegetables worth only five gaṇḍās; ei-mātra-only this; govinda-the servant of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kaila aṅgikāra-accepted; māthāya-his head; ghā māre-struck; vipra-the brāhmaṇa; kare hāhā-kāra-began to say, "alas, alas."

TRANSLATION

That day, a brāhmaṇa extended an invitation to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. When Govinda accepted only five gaṇḍās worth of vegetables and a fourth of a pot of rice, the brāhmaṇa, in great despair, struck his head with his hand and cried, "Alas! Alas!"

Antya TEXT 8.59

sei bhāta-vyañjana prabhu ardheka khāila

ye kichu rahila, tāhā govinda pāila //CC Antya, 8.59//

SYNONYMS

sei—that; bhāta—rice; vyañjana—vegetable; prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ardheka khāila—ate half; ye kichu rahila—whatever remained; tāhā—that; govinda—Govinda; pāila—got.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu ate only half of the rice and vegetables, and whatever remained was taken by Govinda.

Antya TEXT 8.60

TRANSLATION

"My dear Arjuna, one cannot perform mystic yoga if he eats more than necessary or needlessly fasts, sleeps and dreams too much or does not sleep enough. One should eat and enjoy his senses as much as necessary, one should properly endeavor to execute his duties, and one should regulate his sleep and wakefulness. Thus one can become freed from material pains by executing mystic yoga." "

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Bhagavad-gītā (6.16-17).

Antya TEXT 8.69

TRANSLATION

"One should see that because of the meeting of material nature and the living entity, the universe is acting uniformly. Thus one should neither praise nor criticize the characteristics or activities of others."

PURPORT

This verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (11.28.1) was spoken by Lord Kṛṣṇa to Uddhava.

Antya TEXT 8.79

tāra madhye pūrva-vidhi 'praśaṁsā' chāḍiyā para-vidhi 'nindā' kare 'baliṣṭha' jāniyā //CC Antya, 8.79//

SYNONYMS

tāra madhye—between the two; pūrva-vidhi—the former rule; praśaṁsā—praising; chāḍiyā—giving up; para-vidhi—the other rule; nindā—criticizing; kare—does; baliṣṭha jāniyā—knowing it to be more prominent.

TRANSLATION

"Of the two rules, Rāmacandra Purī obeys the first by abandoning praise, but although he knows that the second is more prominent, he neglects it by criticizing others.

PURPORT

The above-mentioned verse from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam gives two injunctions. The first, called pūrva-vidhi, is that one should not praise, and the second, para-vidhi, is that one should not criticize. As will be apparent from the following verse, the injunction against praise is less important than the injunction against blasphemy. One should carefully observe the para-vidhi, although one may neglect the pūrva-vidhi. Thus the actual injunction is that one may praise but should not criticize. This is called śleṣokti, or a statement having two meanings. Rāmacandra Purī, however, acted in just the opposite way, for he neglected the para-vidhi but strictly observed the pūrva-vidhi. Since he avoided following the principle of not criticizing, Rāmacandra Purī broke both the rules.

Antya TEXT 8.80

pūrva-parayor madhye para-vidhir balavān //CC Antya, 8.80//

SYNONYMS

pūrva-parayoḥ—the former and the latter; madhye—between; para-vidhiḥ—the latter rule; balavān—more prominent.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Eighth Chapter, describing how the Lord reduced His eating in fear of the criticism of Rāmacandra Purī.

Chapter 9 The Deliverance of Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka

This Ninth Chapter is summarized as follows. Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka, the son of Bhavānanda Rāya, was engaged in the service of the government, but he misappropriated some funds from the treasury. Therefore the baḍa-jānā, the eldest son of King Pratāparudra, ordered that he be punished by death. Thus Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka was raised on the cāṅga to be killed, but by the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu he was delivered. Moreover, he was even promoted to a higher post.

prahlāda, bali, vyāsa, śuka ādi muni-gaṇa

āsi' prabhu dekhi' preme haya acetana //CC Antya, 9.10//

SYNONYMS

prahlāda—Prahlaḍa Mahārāja; bali—Bali Mahārāja; vyāsa—Vyāsadeva; śuka—Śukadeva Gosvāmī; ādi—and so on; muni-gaṇa—great sages; āsi'-coming; prabhu dekhi'-by seeing Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; preme—in ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa; haya acetana—became unconscious.

TRANSLATION

Prahlaḍa Mahārāja, Bali Mahārāja, Vyāsadeva, Śukadeva Gosvāmī and other great sages came to visit Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Upon seeing Him, they became unconscious in ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

According to the opinion of some historians, Prahlaḍa Mahārāja was born in Tretā-yuga in the city of Mūlatāna in the state of Punjab. He was born of Hiraṇyakaśipu, a king of the dynasty of Kaśyapa. Prahlaḍa Mahārāja was a great devotee of Lord Viṣṇu, but his father was very much against Viṣṇu. Because the father and son thus differed in their consciousness, the demon father inflicted all kinds of bodily pain upon Prahlaḍa. When this torture became intolerable, the Supreme Lord appeared as Nṛsimhadeva and killed the great demon Hiraṇyakaśipu.

Bali Mahārāja was the grandson of Prahlaḍa Mahārāja. The son of Prahlaḍa Mahārāja was Virocana, and his son was known as Bali. Appearing as Vāmana and begging Bali Mahārāja for three feet of land, the Lord took possession of the entire three worlds. Thus Bali Mahārāja became a great devotee of Lord Vāmana. Bali Mahārāja had one hundred sons, of whom Mahārāja Bāṇa was the eldest and most famous.

Vyāsadeva was the son of the great sage Parāśara. Other names for him are Sātyavateya and Kṛṣṇa-dvaipāyana Bādarāyaṇa Muni. As one of the authorities on the Vedas, he divided the original Veda, for convenience, into four divisions—Sāma, Yajur, Ṛg and Atharva. He is the author of eighteen Purāṇas as well as the theosophical thesis Brahma-sūtra and its natural commentary, Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. He belongs to the Brahma-sampradāya and is a direct disciple of Nārada Muni.

Śukadeva Gosvāmī is the son of Vyāsadeva. He was a brahmacārī fully conscious of Brahman realization, but later he became a great devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa. He narrated Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam to Mahārāja Parīkṣit.

TRANSLATION

One day people suddenly came to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and informed Him, "Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka, the son of Bhavānanda Rāya, has been condemned to death by the baḍa-jānā, the eldest son of the King, and has been raised on the cāṅga.

PURPORT

The cāṅga was a device for killing a condemned person. It consisted of a raised platform on which the condemned was made to stand. Underneath the platform, there were stationary upright swords. The condemned man would be pushed down onto the swords, and in this way he would die. For some reason, Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka had been condemned to death and had therefore been raised upon the cāṅga.

TRANSLATION

"Jagannātha has saved him once from death today, but if tomorrow he again does not pay what he owes the treasury, who will give him protection?

PURPORT

The Supreme Personality of Godhead will certainly protect a devotee who does something sinful accidentally. As the Lord says in Bhagavad-gītā (9.30-31):

api cet sudurācāro bhajate mām ananya-bhāk sādhur eva sa mantavyaḥ saṁyag vyavasito hi saḥ kṣipram bhavati dharmātmā śāśvac-chāntim nigacchati kaunteya pratijānīhi na me bhaktaḥ praṇaśyati

"Even if one commits the most abominable actions, if he is engaged in devotional service, he is to be considered saintly because he is properly situated. He quickly becomes righteous and attains lasting peace. O son of Kuntī, declare it boldly that My devotee never perishes." However, if a devotee or so-called devotee purposefully commits sinful activities continually in the hope that Kṛṣṇa will give him protection, Kṛṣṇa will not protect him. Therefore Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, kāli ke rākhibe, yadi nā dibe rāja-dhana?: "Jagannātha has saved Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka from being killed by the King today, but if he commits the same offense again, who will give him protection?" Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu thus warns all such foolish devotees that Jagannātha will not protect them if they continue to commit offenses.

vyavahāra lāgi' tomā bhaje, sei jñāna-andha //CC Antya, 9.68//

SYNONYMS

sannyāsī—a sannyāsī; virakta—one who has given up all connections with everyone; tomāra—Your; kā-sane—with whom; sambandha—relationship; vyavahāra lāgi'-for some material purpose; tomā bhaje—worships You; sei—he; jñāna-andha—blind to all knowledge.

TRANSLATION

"You are a renounced sannyāsī. What connections do You have? One who worships You for some material purpose is blind to all knowledge."

PURPORT

Becoming a devotee of the Lord to serve material purposes is a great mistake. Many people become showbottle devotees for material profits. indeed materialistic persons sometimes take to professional devotional service and keep Viṣṇu, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, as a means of livelihood. None of this, however, is approved. In the book known as Sapta-śatī, as mentioned by Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, one can discover how a person worshiping the goddess Durgā begs her for different varieties of material profit. Such activities are very popular among people in general, but they are the attempts of foolish, blind people (sei jñāna-andha).

A materialist does not actually know why one should become a devotee. A devotee's only concern is to satisfy the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Pure devotional service is defined by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī:

anyābhilāṣitā-śūnyaṁ

jñāna-karmādy-anāvṛtam

ānukūlyena kṛṣṇānu-

śīlanam bhaktir uttamā

One should be completely free from all material desires and should serve Kṛṣṇa simply to please Him. When people become interested in their own sense gratification (bhukti mukti siddhi kāmī), some of them desire to enjoy the material world to the fullest extent, some of them desire to be liberated and merge into the existence of Brahman, and others want to perform magic through mystic power and thus become incarnations of God. These are all against the principles of devotional service. One must be free from all material desires. The desire of the impersonalist to merge into the existence of Brahman is also material because such an impersonalist wants to gratify his senses by merging into the existence of Kṛṣṇa instead of serving His lotus feet. Even if such a person merges into the Brahman effulgence, he falls down again into material existence. As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.2.32):

āruhya kṛcchreṇa param padam tataḥ

patanty adho 'nādr̥ta-yuṣmad-aṅghrayaḥ

Because Māyāvādī philosophers have no information regarding the transcendental service of the Lord, even after attaining liberation from material activities and merging in the Brahman effulgence, they must come down again to this material world.

tomāra bhajana-phale tomāte 'prema-dhana'

viṣaya lāgi' tomāya bhaje, sei mūrkhā jana //CC Antya, 9.69//

SYNONYMS

tomāra—Your; bhajana—devotional service; phale—by the result of; tomāte—unto You; prema-dhana—wealth of love; viṣaya lāgi'-for material profit; tomāya bhaje—one engages in Your service; sei—he; mūrkhā jana—a fool.

TRANSLATION

Kāśī Miśra continued, "If one engages in devotional service for Your satisfaction, this will result in his increasingly awakening his dormant love for You. But if one engages in Your devotional service for material purposes, he should be considered a number-one fool.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments that there are many materialistic persons who become preachers, gurus, religionists or philosophers only for the sake of maintaining a high standard of living and sense gratification for themselves and their families. Sometimes they adopt the dress of a sannyāsī or preacher. They train some of their family members as lawyers and continually seek help from a high court to acquire riches on the plea of maintaining temples. Although such persons may call themselves preachers, live in Vṛndāvana or Navadvīpa, and also print many religious books, it is all for the same purpose, namely to earn a living to maintain their wives and children. They may also professionally recite the Bhāgavatam or other scriptures, worship the Deity in the temple and initiate disciples. Making a show of devotional paraphernalia, they may also collect money from the public and use it to cure the disease of some family member or near relative. Sometimes they become bābājīs or collect money on the plea of worshiping the poor, whom they call daridra-nārāyaṇa, or for social and political upliftment. Thus they spread a network of business schemes to collect money for sense gratification by cheating people in general who have no knowledge of pure devotional service. Such cheaters cannot understand that by offering devotional service to the Supreme Personality of Godhead, one can be elevated to a position of eternal servitude to the Lord, which is even greater than the position of Brahmā and other demigods. Unfortunately, fools have no understanding of the perpetual pleasure of devotional service.

TRANSLATION

Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka achieved the result of kingly opulence due to but a glimpse of the Lord's mercy. Therefore no one can calculate the full value of His mercy.

Antya TEXT 9.110

kāhān cāṅge caḍāñā laya dhana-prāṇa!

kāhān saba chāḍi' sei rājyādi-pradāna! //CC Antya, 9.110//

SYNONYMS

kāhān—on one hand; cāṅge—on the cāṅga; caḍāñā—raising; laya—takes; dhana—wealth; prāṇa—life; kāhān—on the other hand; saba—all; chāḍi'-excusing; sei—he; rājya-ādi-pradāna—awarding the same government post and so on.

TRANSLATION

Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka was lifted onto the cāṅga to be killed, and all his money was taken away, but instead his debts were excused, and he was appointed collector in the same place.

Antya TEXT 9.111

TRANSLATION

Kāśī Miśra went to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and informed Him in detail of all the King's intentions.

Antya TEXT 9.117

prabhu kahe,--"kāśī-miśra, ki tumi karilā?

rāja-pratigraha tumi āmā' karāilā?" //CC Antya, 9.117//

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; kāśī-miśra—My dear Kāśī Miśra; ki—what; tumi karilā—have you done; rāja-pratigraha—taking from the King; tumi—you; āmā'-me; karāilā—have made to do.

TRANSLATION

Upon hearing about Kāśī Miśra's tactics with the King, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "Kāśī Miśra, what have you done? You have made Me indirectly take help from the King."

PURPORT

When the King heard the details of Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka's unfortunate condemnation, he was induced to excuse his debt, in particular because he felt that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was very sorry about this incident. The Lord did not like the idea that the money forfeited to Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka was indirectly a contribution to Him. Therefore He immediately protested.

Antya TEXT 9.118

miśra kahe,--"śuna, prabhu, rājāra vacane akapaṭe rājā ei kailā nivedane //CC Antya, 9.118//

TRANSLATION

Kāśī Miśra said, "My dear Lord, the King has done this without reservations. Kindly hear his statement.

Antya TEXT 9.119

'prabhu yena nāhi jānena,--rājā āmāra lāgiyā dui-lakṣa kāhana kauḍi dileka chāḍiyā //CC Antya, 9.119//

SYNONYMS

prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; yena—so that; nāhi jānena—may not think; rājā—the King; āmāra lāgiyā—for Me-dui-lakṣa kāhana kauḍi—200,000 kāhanas of kauḍis; dileka chāḍiyā—has remitted.

TRANSLATION

"The King said,'Speak to the Lord in such a way that He will not think,"For My sake the King has forfeited 200,000 kāhanas of kauḍis."

PURPORT

The kauḍi is like an American cent or Japanese yen. In the old medium of exchange, the first unit of currency was a small conchshell called a kauḍi. Four kauḍis made one gaṇḍā, twenty gaṇḍās made one paṇa, and sixteen paṇas made one kāhana. Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka owed the government 200,000 kāhanas. The King absolved him of this debt, reappointed him to his post and doubled his salary.

Antya TEXT 9.120

TRANSLATION

"I made Rāmānanda Rāya the governor of Rājamahendrī. There is practically no account of whatever money he took and distributed in that position.

PURPORT

Near Rājamahendrī is a famous railway station. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī notes that the present Rājamahendrī City is located on the northern bank of the Godāvarī. At the time when Rāmānanda Rāya was governor, however, the state capital, which was known as Vidyānagara or Vidyāpura, was located on the southern side of the Godāvarī, at the confluence of the Godāvarī and the sea. That was the part of the country which at that time was known as Rājamahendrī. North of Kaliṅga-deśa is Utkaliṅga, or the state of Orissa. The capital of southern Orissa was known as Rājamahendrī, but now the location of Rājamahendrī has changed.

kintu—but; tomāra—Your; smaraṇera—of remembrance; nahe—not; ei—this; mukhya-phala—chief result; phala-ābhāsa—a glimpse of the result; ei—this; yāte—because; viṣaya—material opulence; cañcala—flickering.

TRANSLATION

"However, my Lord, these are not the principal results of meditating upon Your lotus feet. Material opulence is very flickering. Therefore it is simply a glimpse of the result of Your mercy.

PURPORT

One can achieve the highest perfection of life simply by meditating upon the lotus feet of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Generally people are concerned with the four religious principles, namely religion, material opulence, sense gratification and liberation. However, as indicated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (dharmaḥ projjhita-kaitavo 'tra), success in these four kinds of material and spiritual gain are not the true results of devotional service. The true result of devotional service is the actual development of one's dormant love for Kṛṣṇa in every circumstance. By the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka could understand that the material benefits he had achieved were not the ultimate result of meditating upon His lotus feet. The true result comes when one is detached from material opulences. Therefore Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka prayed to the Lord for such detachment.

SYNONYMS

mahā-viṣaya—great material engagements; kara—you perform; kibā—or; virakta—renounced; udāsa—free from attachment; janme-janme—birth after birth; tumi pañca—you five; mora—My; nija-dāsa—own servants.

TRANSLATION

"Whether you are involved in material activities or become completely renounced, you five brothers are all My eternal servants, birth after birth.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments that one should remember that he is eternally a servant of Kṛṣṇa. Whether one is engaged in material activity involving pounds, shillings and pence or is in the renounced order, he should always think that he is an eternal servant of God, for that is the real position of the living being. Taking sannyāsa and dealing in pounds, shillings and pence are both external affairs. One should always consider how to please and satisfy Kṛṣṇa. Thus even if one is involved in great material affairs, he will not become attached. As soon as one forgets that he is an eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa, he becomes involved in material attachments. However, if one is always conscious that Kṛṣṇa is always the supreme master and that he is an eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa, he is a liberated person in any condition. Entangling material activities will not affect him.

SYNONYMS

kintu—but; mora—My; kariha—just carry out; eka—one; ājñā—order; pālana—obedience to; vyaya nā kariha—never spend; kichu—any; rājāra mūla-dhana—capital of the King.

TRANSLATION

"However, just obey one order from Me. Do not spend any of the King's revenue.

PURPORT

When a person forgets his position as an eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa, he commits many sinful activities, but one who maintains his position as an eternal servant of Kṛṣṇa cannot deviate from the path of morality, religion and ethics. At the present, people all over the world, especially in India, have forgotten their relationship with the Supreme Personality of Godhead and His eternal servants. Therefore the principles of morality, religion and ethics have almost disappeared. This situation is most unprofitable for human society. Therefore everyone should try to accept Kṛṣṇa consciousness and follow the principles of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

TRANSLATION

Thus the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was spoken of in the family of Bhavānanda Rāya. That mercy was clearly demonstrated, although it appeared to be something different.

PURPORT

The result of advancement in spiritual knowledge is not material improvement, but Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu advised Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka how to use material opulence without incurring reactions to sinful life. From this advice, it appeared that the Lord encouraged Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka to enhance his material condition. Actually, however, He did not. In fact, this was but a manifestation of His great affection for His devotee.

requested; āmā haite kichu nahe—I cannot do anything; prabhu—Lord Caitanya; tabe—then; kahila—replied.

TRANSLATION

Indeed, when all the devotees had requested the Lord to bestow His mercy upon Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka, the Lord had replied that He could do nothing.

PURPORT

When a person is sinful, he loses both the chance for spiritual advancement and the chance for material opulence. If one enjoys the material world for sense gratification, he is certainly doomed. Advancement in material opulence is not the direct mercy of the Supreme Personality of Godhead; nevertheless, it indicates the indirect mercy of the Lord, for even a person too attached to material prosperity can gradually be detached and raised to the spiritual platform. Then he can offer causeless, purified service to the Lord. When Śrī Caitanya said, āmā haite kichu nahe ("It is not My business to do anything"), He set the ideal example for a person in the renounced order. If a sannyāsī takes the side of a viṣayī, a person engaged in material activities, his character will be criticized. A person in the renounced order should not take interest in material activities, but if he does so out of affection for a particular person, that should be considered his special mercy.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Ninth Chapter, describing the deliverance of Gopīnātha Paṭṭanāyaka and the manifestation of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's causeless mercy to His devotee.

Chapter 10 Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Accepts Prasāda from the Devotees

The following summary of Chapter Ten is given by Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. Before the Ratha-yātrā ceremony, all the devotees from Bengal started for Jagannātha Purī as usual. Rāghava Paṇḍita brought with him various kinds of food for Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. The food had been cooked by his sister, whose name was Damayantī, and the stock was generally known as rāghavera jhāli. Makaradhvaja Kara, an inhabitant of Pānihāṭi who accompanied Rāghava Paṇḍita, was the secretary in charge of accounting for the rāghavera jhāli, the bags of food carried by Rāghava Paṇḍita.

The day when all the devotees arrived at Jagannātha Purī, Lord Govinda was enjoying sporting pastimes in the water of Narendra-sarovara. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu also enjoyed the ceremony in the water with His devotees. As previously, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu performed the cleansing ceremony at Guṇḍicā and chanted the famous verse jagamohana-pari-muṇḍā yāu. After kīrtana ended, He distributed prasāda to all the devotees and also took some Himself. Then He lay down at the door of the Gambhīrā to take rest. Somehow or other Govinda came by and massaged His feet. Govinda could not go out that day, however, and therefore he was unable to accept prasāda. From the character of Govinda it is to be learned that we may sometimes commit offenses for the service of the Lord, but not for sense gratification.

Govinda, the personal servant of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, induced the Lord to eat all the food delivered by the devotees of Bengal for His service. All the Vaiṣṇavas used to invite Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to their homes. The Lord accepted the invitation of Caitanya dāsa, the son of Śivānanda Sena, and ate rice and yogurt there.

yatna kari' guṇḍā kari' purāṇa sukutā //CC Antya, 10.15-16//

SYNONYMS

āmra-kāśandi—āmra-kāśandi; ādā-kāśandi—ādā-kāśandi; jhāla-kāśandi—jhāla-kāśandi; nāma—named; nembu-ādā—a preparation made with lime and ginger; āmra-koli—āmra-koli; vividha vidhāna—various preparations; āmsi—āmsi;

āma-khaṇḍa—āma-khaṇḍa; tailāmra—mango within mustard oil; āma-sattā—āma-sattā; yatna kari'-with great attention; guṇḍā kari'-making into a powder; purāṇa sukutā—dried bitter vegetables such as bitter melon.

TRANSLATION

These are the names of some of the pickles and condiments in the bags of Rāghava Paṇḍita: āmra-kāśandi, ādā-kāśandi, jhāla-kāśandi, nembu-ādā, āmra-koli, āmsi, āma-khaṇḍa, tailāmra and āma-sattā. With great attention, Damayantī also made dried bitter vegetables into a powder.

Antya TEXT 10.17

'sukutā' bali' avajñā nā kariha citte

sukutāya ye sukha prabhura, tāhā nahe pañcāmṛte //CC Antya, 10.17//

SYNONYMS

sukutā—sukutā; bali'-because; avajñā—neglect; nā kariha—do not make; citte—within the mind; sukutāya—from sukutā; ye—which; sukha—happiness; prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; tāhā—that; nahe—is not; pañcāmṛte—in pañcāmṛta.

TRANSLATION

Do not neglect sukutā because it is a bitter preparation. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu derived more happiness from eating this sukutā than from drinking pañcāmṛta [a preparation of milk, sugar, ghee, honey and curd].

Antya TEXT 10.18

bhāva-grāhī mahāprabhu sneha-mātra laya

sukutā pātā kāśandite mahā-sukha pāya //CC Antya, 10.18//

TRANSLATION

Because of her natural love for Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Damayantī considered the Lord an ordinary human being. Therefore she thought that He would become sick by overeating and there would be mucus within His abdomen.

PURPORT

Because of pure love, the devotees of Kṛṣṇa in Goloka Vṛndāvana, Vrajabhūmi, loved Kṛṣṇa as an ordinary human being like them. Yet although they considered Kṛṣṇa one of them, their love for Kṛṣṇa knew no bounds. Similarly, because of extreme love, devotees like Rāghava Paṇḍita and his sister, Damayantī, thought of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as a human being, but their love for Him was boundless. By overeating, an ordinary human being becomes prone to a disease called amla-pitta, which is a product of indigestion characterized by acidity of the stomach. Damayantī thought that such a condition would afflict Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Antya TEXT 10.20

TRANSLATION

There is no use describing here the activities of the Lord again. It would simply be repetitious and would increase the size of this book.

Antya TEXT 10.52

jala-līlā kari' govinda calilā ālaya

nija-gaṇa lañā prabhu gelā devālaya //CC Antya, 10.52//

SYNONYMS

jala-līlā kari'-after finishing the pastimes on the water; govinda—Lord Jagannātha in His moving form as Govinda; calilā ālaya—returned to His place; nija-gaṇa—His devotees; lañā—taking; prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; gelā—went; deva-ālaya—to the temple.

TRANSLATION

After concluding His pastimes in the water, Lord Govinda returned to His residence. Then Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to the temple, taking all His devotees with Him.

PURPORT

The Deity referred to herein as Govinda is the vijaya-vigraha in the temple of Jagannātha. When there is a need to take Jagannātha somewhere, the vijayavighraha is taken because the body of Jagannātha is very heavy. The vijaya-vighraha in the Jagannātha temple is known as Govinda. For the pastimes in the Narendrasarovara, the vijaya-vighraha was carried there instead of Lord Jagannātha.

Antya TEXT 10.100

ei saba haya bhakti-śāstra-sūkṣma marma caitanyera kṛpāya jāne ei saba dharma //CC Antya, 10.100//

SYNONYMS

ei saba—all these; haya—are; bhakti-śāstra—of the system of devotional service; sūkṣma marma—finer principles; caitanyera kṛpāya—by the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jāne—one can understand; ei saba—all these; dharma—principles of devotional service.

TRANSLATION

These are some of the finer points of etiquette in devotional service. Only one who has received the mercy of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu can understand these principles.

PURPORT

Karmīs, fruitive workers, cannot understand the finer conclusions of devotional service because they accept only its ritualistic value but do not understand how devotional service satisfies the Supreme Personality of Godhead. The karmīs view the formalities as a means of advancing in religion, economic development, sensual satisfaction and liberation. Although these are only material results of following religious principles, the karmīs consider them everything. Such ritualistic activities are called karma. Karmīs who adopt devotional service very loosely and who therefore remain on the platform of material activities are called prākṛta-sahajiyās. They cannot understand how pure devotional service is rendered in paternal and conjugal love, for this can be understood only by the special mercy bestowed by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu upon pure devotees.

Antya TEXT 10.101

prabhu kahe,--'ādi-vasyā' duḥkha kāñhe māne?

kebā ki diyāche, tāhā ānaha ekhāne' //CC Antya, 10.116//

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe—the Lord replied; ādi-vasyā—you who have been residing with Me for a very long time; duḥkha kāñhe māne—why are you unhappy about this; kebā ki diyāche—whatever they have delivered; tāhā—all that; ānaha ekhāne—bring here.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu replied, "Why are you so foolishly unhappy? Bring here to Me whatever they have given you."

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura explains that the word ādi-vasyā refers to one who has been living with another for a very long time. Govinda was addressed as ādi-vasyā because he had been living with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu for a very long time, whereas other devotees, who were mostly new, would come and go. In effect, the Lord told Govinda, "Since you have been living with Me for a long time, you should not be foolishly disappointed in this situation. Bring all the food to Me, and you will see that I can eat it."

Antya TEXT 10.117

TRANSLATION

All the varieties of the remaining prasāda were kept to eat throughout the year.

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu ate His lunch, Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī would serve it little by little.

Antya TEXT 10.132

kabhu rātri-kāle kichu karena upayoga bhaktera śraddhāra dravya avaśya karena upabhoga //CC Antya, 10.132//

SYNONYMS

kabhu—sometimes; rātri-kāle—at night; kichu—some; karena upayoga—used; bhaktera—of the devotees; śraddhāra—with faith and love; dravya—preparations; avaśya—certainly; karena upabhoga—enjoys.

TRANSLATION

Sometimes Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would take some of it at night. The Lord certainly enjoys preparations made with faith and love by His devotees.

PURPORT

Kṛṣṇa is very pleased with His devotees and their offerings. Therefore in Bhagavad-gītā the Lord says:

patraṁ puṣpaṁ phalaṁ toyam yo me bhaktyā prayacchati tad ahaṁ bhakty-upahṛtam

aśnāmi prayatātmanaḥ

"If one offers Me with love and devotion a leaf, a flower, fruit or water, I will accept it." (Bg. 9.26) Herein also we find that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted all this food because it had been offered by His devotees. Sometimes He would eat it during lunch and sometimes at night, but He would always think that since His devotees had offered it with great love and affection, He must eat it.

Antya TEXT 10.133

ei-mata mahāprabhu bhakta-gaṇa-saṅge jagannāthera—of Lord Jagannātha; prasāda—remnants of food; āne—bring; karite miśrita—mixing; kāhān—somewhere; ekā yāyena—goes alone; kāhān—somewhere; gaṇera sahita—with associates.

TRANSLATION

They would mix these preparations with the remnants of food from Lord Jagannātha. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted the invitations, He went sometimes alone and sometimes with His associates.

Antya TEXT 10.139

ācāryaratna, ācāryanidhi, nandana, rāghava

śrīvāsa-ādi yata bhakta, vipra saba //CC Antya, 10.139//

SYNONYMS

ācāryaratna—Ācāryaratna; ācāryanidhi—Ācāryanidhi; nandana—Nandana Ācārya; rāghava—Rāghava Paṇḍita; śrīvāsa-ādi—headed by Śrīvāsa; yata bhakta—all devotees; vipra saba—all brāhmaṇas.

TRANSLATION

Devotees like Ācāryaratna, Ācāryanidhi, Nandana Ācārya, Rāghava Paṇḍita and Śrīvāsa were all of the brāhmaṇa caste.

Antya TEXTS 10.140-141

ei-mata nimantraṇa karena yatna kari vāsudeva, gadādhara-dāsa, gupta-murāri kulīna-grāmī, khaṇḍa-vāsī, āra yata jana jagannāthera prasāda āni' kare nimantraṇa //CC Antya, 10.140-141//

SYNONYMS

ei-mata—like this; nimantraṇa—invitation; karena—execute; yatna kari—with devotion; vāsudeva—Vāsudeva; gadādhara-dāsa—Gadādhara dāsa; gupta-murāri—Murāri Gupta; kulīna-grāmī—the inhabitants of Kulīna-grāma; khaṇḍa-vāsī—the inhabitants of Khaṇḍa; āra—and; yata jana—many other persons; jagannāthera prasāda—remnants of the food of Jagannātha; āni'-bringing; kare nimantraṇa—invite.

TRANSLATION

They would extend invitations to the Lord. Vāsudeva Datta, Gadādhara dāsa, Murāri Gupta, the inhabitants of Kulīna-grāma and Khaṇḍa and many other devotees who were not brāhmaṇas by caste would purchase food offered to Lord Jagannātha and then extend invitations to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

The inhabitants of Kulīna-grāma, such as Satyarāja Khān and Rāmānanda Vasu, were not brāhmaṇas by caste, nor were the inhabitants of Khaṇḍa, such as Mukunda dāsa, Narahari dāsa and Raghunandana. Therefore they would purchase prasāda from the market where the remnants of Lord Jagannātha's food was sold and then extend invitations to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, whereas Ācāryaratna, Ācāryanidhi and others who were brāhmaṇas by caste would cook at home when they invited the Lord. Caitanya Mahāprabhu observed the etiquette then current in society by accepting only prasāda cooked by members of the brāhmaṇa caste, but on principle He accepted invitations from His devotees, regardless of whether they were brāhmaṇas by caste.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Tenth Chapter, describing how Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu tasted the prasāda offered by His devotees.

Chapter 11 The Passing of Haridāsa Ṭhākura

The summary of the chapter is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya as follows. In this chapter, Brahma Haridāsa Ṭhākura gave up his body with the consent of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, and the Lord Himself personally performed the funeral ceremony and carried the body to the sea. He personally entombed the body, covered it with sand, and erected a platform on the site. After taking bath in the sea, He personally begged prasāda of Jagannātha from shopkeepers and distributed prasāda to the assembled devotees.

Antya TEXT 11.20

eta bali' mahā-prasāda karilā vandana

eka rañca lañā tāra karilā bhakṣaṇa //CC Antya, 11.20//

SYNONYMS

eta bali'-saying this; mahā-prasāda—to the mahā-prasāda; karilā vandana—he offered respect; eka rañca—one fractional part; lañā—taking; tāra karilā bhakṣaṇa—ate it.

TRANSLATION

Saying this, he offered prayers to the mahā-prasāda, took a little portion, and ate it.

PURPORT

Mahā-prasāda is nondifferent from Kṛṣṇa. Therefore, instead of eating mahā-prasāda, one should honor it. It is said here, karilā vandana, "he offered prayers." When taking mahā-prasāda, one should not consider the food ordinary preparations. Prasāda means favor. One should consider mahā-prasāda a favor of Kṛṣṇa. As stated by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura, kṛṣṇa baḍa dayāmaya karibāre jihvā jaya svaprasāda-anna dilā bhāi. Kṛṣṇa is very kind. In this material world we are all very attached to tasting various types of food. Therefore, Kṛṣṇa eats many nice varieties of food and offers the food back to the devotees, so that not only are one's demands for various tastes satisfied, but by eating prasāda he makes advancement in spiritual life. Therefore, we should never consider ordinary food on an equal level with mahā-prasāda.

SYNONYMS

namaskāra kari'-after offering obeisances; teñho—he, Haridāsa Ṭhākura; kailā nivedana—submitted; śārīra—body; su-stha—all right; haya—is; mora—my; asustha—not in a healthy condition; buddhi-mana—my mind and intelligence.

TRANSLATION

Haridāsa offered his obeisances to the Lord and replied, "My body is all right, but my mind and intelligence are not well."

Antya TEXT 11.23

prabhu kahe,--'kon vyādhi, kaha ta' nirṇaya?'

teñho kahe,--'saṅkhyā-kīrtana nā pūraya' //CC Antya, 11.23//

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; kon vyādhi—what disease; kaha ta' nirṇaya—can you ascertain; teñho kahe—he said; saṅkhyā-kīrtana—fixed amount of chanting; nā pūraya—has not become complete.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu further inquired from Haridāsa, "Can you ascertain what your disease is?" Haridāsa Ṭhākura replied, "My disease is that I cannot complete my rounds."

PURPORT

If one cannot complete the fixed number of rounds he is assigned, he should be considered to be in a diseased condition of spiritual life. Śrīla Haridāsa Ṭhākura is called nāmācārya. Of course, we cannot imitate Haridāsa Ṭhākura, but everyone must chant a prescribed number of rounds. In our Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement we have fixed sixteen rounds as the minimum so that the Westerners will not feel burdened. These sixteen rounds must be chanted, and chanted loudly, so that one can hear himself and others.

Antya TEXT 11.24

prabhu kahe,--"vṛddha ha-ilā 'saṅkhyā' alpa kara siddha-deha tumi, sādhane āgraha kene kara? //CC Antya, 11.24//

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe—Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said; vṛddha ha-ilā—you have become old; saṅkhyā alpa kara—reduce your number; siddha-deha tumi—you are already liberated; sādhane—in the regulative principles; āgraha kene kara—why are you eager.

TRANSLATION

"Now that you have become old," the Lord said, "you may reduce the number of rounds you chant daily. You are already liberated, and therefore you need not follow the regulative principles very strictly.

PURPORT

Unless one has come to the platform of spontaneous love of God, he must follow the regulative principles. Ṭhākura Haridāsa was the living example of how to follow the regulative principles. Similarly, Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī was also such a living example. In the Ṣaḍ-gosvāmy-aṣṭaka it is stated: saṅkhyā-pūrvaka-nāma-gāna-natibhiḥ kālāvasānīkṛtau. The Gosvāmīs, especially Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, strictly followed all the regulative principles. The first regulative principle is that one must chant the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra loudly enough so that he can hear himself, and one must vow to chant a fixed number of rounds. Not only was Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī chanting a fixed number of rounds, but he had also taken a vow to bow down many times and offer obeisances to the Lord.

Antya TEXT 11.25

loka nistārite ei tomāra 'avatāra'

nāmera mahimā loke karilā pracāra //CC Antya, 11.25//

SYNONYMS

loka nistārite—to deliver the people in general; ei—this; tomāra avatāra—your incarnation; nāmera mahimā—the glories of the holy name; loke—in this world; karilā pracāra—you have preached.

TRANSLATION

"Your role in this incarnation is to deliver the people in general. You have sufficiently preached the glories of the holy name in this world."

PURPORT

Haridāsa Ṭhākura is known as nāmācārya because it is he who preached the glories of chanting hari-nāma, the holy name of God. By using the words tomāra avatāra ("your incarnation"), Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu confirms that Haridāsa Ṭhākura is the incarnation of Lord Brahmā. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that advanced devotees help the Supreme Personality of Godhead in His mission and that such devotees or personal associates incarnate by the will of the Supreme Lord. The Supreme Lord incarnates by His own will, and, by His will, competent devotees also incarnate to help Him in His mission. Haridāsa Ṭhākura is thus the incarnation of Lord Brahmā, and other devotees are likewise incarnations who help in the prosecution of the Lord's mission.

Antya TEXT 11.26

aneka nācāilā more prasāda kariyā

viprera śrāddha-pātra khāinu 'mleccha' hañā //CC Antya, 11.30//

SYNONYMS

aneka—in many ways; nācāilā—You have made dance; more—me; prasāda kariyā—by Your mercy; viprera—of the brāhmaṇas; śrāddha-pātra—the dish of the śrāddha ceremony; khāinu—I have eaten; mleccha hañā—although born in a family of meateaters.

TRANSLATION

"My dear Lord, by Your mercy You have made me dance in many ways. For example, I was offered the śrāddha-pātra that should have been offered to first-class brāhmaṇas. I ate from it even though I was born in a family of meateaters.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, in his Anubhāṣya, quotes from the Viṣṇu-smṛiti in reference to śrāddha-pātra.

brāhmaṇāpasadā hy ete kathitāḥ pañkti-dūṣakāḥ etān vivarjayed yatnāt śrāddha-karmaṇi paṇḍitāḥ

According to this verse, if one is born in a brāhmaṇa family but does not behave according to brahminical standards, he should not be offered the śrāddha-pātra, which is prasāda offered to the forefathers. Advaita Ācārya offered the śrāddha-pātra to Haridāsa Ṭhākura, not to a brāhmaṇa who had been born in a brāhmaṇa family. Although Haridāsa Ṭhākura was born in the family of meateaters, because he was an advanced devotee he was shown more respect than a first-class brāhmaṇa.

SYNONYMS

ei ta'-thus; kahiluṅ—I have spoken; haridāsera—of Haridāsa Ṭhākura; vijaya—victory; yāhāra śravaṇe—by hearing which; kṛṣṇe—unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; dṛḍha-bhakti—firm devotional service; haya—becomes.

TRANSLATION

Thus I have spoken about the victorious passing away of Haridāsa Ṭhākura. Anyone who hears this narration will certainly fix his mind firmly in devotional service to Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

At Puruṣottama-kṣetra, or Jagannātha Purī, there is a temple of Ṭoṭā-gopīnātha. If one goes from there to the sea, he can discover the tomb of Haridāsa Ṭhākura still existing. Every year on the date of Ananta-caturdaśī there is a festival to commemorate the passing away of Haridāsa Ṭhākura. At the same place, three Deities of Nityānanda, Kṛṣṇa Caitanya and Advaita Prabhu were established about one hundred years ago. A gentleman named Bhramaravara from Kendrāpāḍā in the province of Orissa contributed funds to establish these Deities in the temple. The management of the temple was under the Ṭoṭā-gopīnātha gosvāmīs.

This temple was later sold to someone else, and this party is now maintaining the sevā-pūjā of the temple. Near this temple and the tomb of Haridāsa Ṭhākura, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura constructed a small house, called Bhakti-kuṭī. In the Bengali year 1329 (A.D. 1922), Puruṣottama-maṭha, a branch of the Gauḍīya Maṭha, was established there. in the Bhakti-ratnākara it is stated:

śrīnivāsa śīghra samudrera kūle gelā haridāsa-ṭhākurera samādhi dekhilā bhūmite paḍiyā kailā praṇati vistara bhāgavata-gaṇa śrī-samādhi-sannidhāne śrīnivāse sthira kailā sasneha-vacane punaḥ śrīnivāsa śrī-samādhi praṇamiyā

ye vilāpa kailā, tā śunile drave hiyā

"Śrīnivāsa Ṭhākura quickly ran to the seashore. When he saw the tomb of Haridāsa Ṭhākura, he immediately fell down offering prayers and almost fainted. The devotees present there pacified him with very sweet and affectionate words, and Śrīnivāsa again offered his obeisances to the tomb. Hearing of the separation that Śrīnivāsa expressed in his lamentation at the tomb of Haridāsa Ṭhākura makes one's heart melt."

TRANSLATION

Haridāsa Ṭhākura was not only the topmost devotee of the Lord, but also a great and learned scholar. It was his great fortune that he passed away before Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

Haridāsa Ṭhākura is mentioned here as the most learned scholar, parama-vidvān. Actually, the most important science to know is the science of getting out of the clutches of material existence. Anyone who knows this science must be considered the greatest learned person. Anyone who knows the temporary situation of this material world and is expert in achieving a permanent situation in the spiritual world, who knows that the Supreme Personality of Godhead is beyond the jurisdiction of our experimental knowledge, is understood to be the most learned scholar. Haridāsa Ṭhākura knew this science perfectly. Therefore, he is described in this connection as parama-vidvān. He personally preached the importance of chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, which is approved by the revealed scriptures.

As stated in the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.5.24):

iti puṁsārpitā viṣṇau

bhaktiś cen nava-lakṣaṇā

kriyeta bhagavatya addhā

tan manye 'dhītam uttamam

There are nine different processes of devotional service to Kṛṣṇa, the most important being śravaṇam kīrtanam—hearing and chanting. Haridāsa Ṭhākura knew this science very well, and he can therefore be called, technically, sarva-śāstrādhī. Anyone who has learned the essence of all the Vedic scripture is to be known as a first-class educated person, with full knowledge of all śāstra.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Eleventh Chapter, describing the passing of Haridāsa Ṭhākura.

Chapter 12 The Loving Dealings Between Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and Jagadānanda Paṇḍita

A summary of the Twelfth Chapter is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya as follows. This chapter discusses the transformations of ecstatic love that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu exhibited day and night. The devotees from Bengal again journeyed to Jagannātha Purī to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. As usual, the leader was Śivānanda Sena, who traveled with his wife and children. Because arrangements were delayed en route and Lord Nityānanda did not have a suitable place to reside, He became somewhat disturbed. Thus He became very angry with Śivānanda Sena, who was in charge of the affairs of the party, and kicked him in loving anger. Śivānanda Sena felt highly favored to have been kicked by Nityānanda Prabhu, but his nephew Śrīkānta Sena became upset and therefore left their company. He met Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī before the rest of the party arrived.

That year a devotee named Parameśvara dāsa Modaka also went with his family to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī. The devotees often invited Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to eat with them. When the Lord bade them all farewell, He talked very pleasingly with them. The year before, Jagadānanda Paṇḍita had been sent to Śacīmātā with prasāda and cloth. This year he returned to Purī with a big pot of floral-scented oil to massage the Lord's head. The Lord, however, would not accept the oil, and because of His refusal, Jagadānanda Paṇḍita broke the pot in front of Him and began to fast. The Lord tried to pacify him and asked Jagadānanda Paṇḍita to cook for Him. Jagadānanda Paṇḍita became so pleased when Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted his cooking that he broke his fast.

prātaḥ-snāne vrata śrāddhe

dvādaśyām grahaṇe tathā

madya-lepa-samam tailam

tasmāt tailam vivarjayet

"If one who has taken a vow smears oil on his body while bathing in the morning, while observing a ritualistic ceremony like the śrāddha ceremony, or on dvādaśī day, he may as well pour wine over his body. Therefore, oil should be rejected." This word vrata (vow) is sometimes understood to refer to the sannyāsa-vrata. Raghunandana Bhaṭṭācārya has also said in his book Tithi-tattva:

ghṛtaṁ ca sārṣapaṁ tailam

yat tailam puṣpa-vāsitam

aduṣṭam pakva-tailam ca

tailābhyaṅge ca nityaśaḥ

This means that clarified butter (ghee), mustard oil, floral oil and boiled oil may be used only by gr̥hasthas, householders.

"Have I taken sannyāsa for such happiness? Accepting this oil would bring My ruination, and all of you would laugh.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu declared Himself a strict sannyāsī. A sannyāsī is not supposed to take help from anyone. Retaining a masseur to give Him massages would indicate His dependence on others. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted to follow very strictly the principle of not accepting anyone's help for His bodily comfort.

Antya TEXT 12.114

TRANSLATION

Who can estimate the limit of Jagadānanda Paṇḍita's fortune? He himself is the example of his own great fortune.

Antya TEXT 12.154

jagadānandera 'prema-vivarta' śune yei jana premera 'svarūpa' jāne, pāya prema-dhana //CC Antya, 12.154//

SYNONYMS

jagadānandera—of Jagadānanda; prema-vivarta—loving exchange; śune—hears; yei jana—any person who; premera—of love; svarūpa—identity; jāne—he knows; pāya—gets; prema-dhana—the wealth of ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

Anyone who hears about the loving exchanges between Jagadānanda Paṇḍita and Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, or who reads Jagadānanda's book Prema-vivarta, can understand what love is. Moreover, he achieves ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

The word vivarta means accepting something to be the opposite of what it appears. Here, Jagadānanda Paṇḍita appeared very angry, but this anger was a manifestation of his great love for Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Prema-vivarta is also the name of a book written by Jagadānanda Paṇḍita. Therefore the author of Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī, uses the words prema-vivarta to refer to one who reads the book or hears about Jagadānanda Paṇḍita's relationships with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. In either case, such a person very soon achieves love of Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 12.155

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Twelfth Chapter, describing Jagadānanda Paṇḍita's loving dealings with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Chapter 13 Pastimes with Jagadānanda Paṇḍita and Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura gives the following summary of the Thirteenth Chapter in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. Thinking Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu to be uncomfortable sleeping on bark of plantain trees, Jagadānanda made a pillow and quilt for Him. The Lord, however, did not accept them. Then Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī made another pillow and quilt from finely shredded plantain leaves, and after strongly objecting, the Lord accepted them. With the permission of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, Jagadānanda Paṇḍita went to Vṛndāvana, where he discussed many devotional subjects with Sanātana Gosvāmī. There was also a discussion about Mukunda Sarasvatī's garment. When Jagadānanda returned to Jagannātha Purī, he presented Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu some gifts from Sanātana Gosvāmī, and the incident of the pīlu fruit took place.

Once, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu became ecstatic upon hearing the songs of a deva-dāsī. Unaware of who was singing, He ran toward her through thorny bushes, but when Govinda informed the Lord that it was a woman singing, He immediately stopped. By this incident, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu instructed everyone that sannyāsīs and Vaiṣṇavas should not hear women singing.

When Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī left Vārāṇasī on his way to Jagannātha Purī after completing his education, he met Rāmadāsa Viśvāsa Paṇḍita. Viśvāsa Paṇḍita was very proud of his education, and being an impersonalist, he was not well received by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. A partial study of the life of Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī comprises the end of this chapter.

SYNONYMS

bhitarera—internal; krodha-duḥkha—anger and unhappiness; prakāśa nā kaila—did not disclose; mathurā yāite—to go to Mathurā; prabhu-sthāne—from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ājñā māgila—asked for permission.

TRANSLATION

Now, concealing his anger and unhappiness, Jagadānanda Paṇḍita again asked Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu for permission to go to Mathurā.

Antya TEXT 13.23

prabhu kahe,--"mathurā yāibā āmāya krodha kari' āmāya doṣa lāgāñā tumi ha-ibā bhikhārī" //CC Antya, 13.23//

SYNONYMS

prabhu kahe—the Lord said; mathurā yāibā—you would go to Mathurā; āmāya—at Me; krodha kari'-being angry; āmāya—Me; doṣa lāgāñā—accusing; tumi—you; ha-ibā—will become; bhikhārī—a beggar.

TRANSLATION

With great affection, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "If you are angry with Me when you go to Mathurā, you will merely become a beggar and criticize Me."

Antya TEXT 13.24

jagadānanda kahe prabhura dhariyā caraṇa

"pūrva haite icchā mora yāite vṛndāvana //CC Antya, 13.24//

SYNONYMS

jagadānanda—Jagadānanda Paṇḍita; kahe—said; prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dhariyā caraṇa—grasping the lotus feet; pūrva haite—for a very long time; icchā—desire; mora—my; yāite vṛndāvana—to go to Vṛndāvana.

TRANSLATION

Grasping the Lord's feet, Jagadānanda Paṇḍita then said, "For a long time I have desired to go to Vṛndāvana.

Antya TEXT 13.25

prabhu-ājñā nāhi, tāte nā pāri yāite

ebe ājñā deha', avaśya yāimu niścite" //CC Antya, 13.25//

SYNONYMS

prabhu-ājñā—the permission of Your Lordship; nāhi—not; tāte—therefore; nā pāri yāite—I could not go; ebe—now; ājñā—permission; deha'-give; avaśya—certainly; yāimu—I shall go; niścite—without fail.

TRANSLATION

"I could not go without Your Lordship's permission. Now You must give me permission, and I shall certainly go there."

Antya TEXT 13.26

prabhu prīte tānra gamana nā karena aṅgikāra

tenho prabhura ṭhāñi ājñā māge bāra bāra //CC Antya, 13.26//

SYNONYMS

prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; prīte—out of affection; tānra—his; gamana—departure; nā karena aṅgikāra—does not accept; tenho—he; prabhura ṭhāñi—from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ājñā—permission; māge—begs; bāra bāra—again and again.

TRANSLATION

Because of affection for Jagadānanda Paṇḍita, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would not permit him to depart, but Jagadānanda Paṇḍita repeatedly insisted that the Lord give him permission to go.

Antya TEXT 13.27

svarūpa-gosāñire paṇḍita kailā nivedana

"pūrva haite vṛndāvana yāite mora mana //CC Antya, 13.27//

SYNONYMS

svarūpa-gosāñire—to Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī; paṇḍita—Jagadānanda Paṇḍita; kailā nivedana—made his petition; pūrva haite—for a long time; vṛndāvana yāite—to go to Vṛndāvana; mora mana—my mind.

TRANSLATION

He then submitted a plea to Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī. "For a very long time," he said, "I have wanted to go to Vṛndāvana.

Antya TEXT 13.28

prabhu-ājñā vinā tāhāṇ yāite nā pāri ebe ājñā nā dena more, 'krodhe yāha' bali //CC Antya, 13.28//

SYNONYMS

prabhu-ājñā—the permission of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; vinā—without; tāhāṇ—there; yāite—to go; nā pāri—I am unable; ebe—now; ājñā—permission; nā dena—does not give; more—me; krodhe—in anger; yāha—you go; bali—saying.

TRANSLATION

"I cannot go there, however, without the Lord's permission, which at present He denies me. He says, 'You are going because you are angry at Me.'

Antya TEXT 13.29

sahejei mora tāhāṇ yāite mana haya prabhu-ājñā lañā deha', kariye vinaya" //CC Antya, 13.29//

SYNONYMS

sahejei—naturally; mora—my; tāhāṇ—there; yāite—to go; mana—mind; haya—is; prabhu-ājñā—permission from Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; lañā deha'-kindly get; kariye vinaya—humbly requesting.

TRANSLATION

"Naturally I have a desire to go to Vṛndāvana; therefore please humbly request Him to grant His permission."

Antya TEXT 13.30

tabe svarūpa-gosāñi kahe prabhura caraṇe

"jagadānandera icchā baḍa yāite vṛndāvane //CC Antya, 13.30//

TRANSLATION

At the request of Svarūpa Dāmodara, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu granted Jagadānanda Paṇḍita permission to go. The Lord sent for him and instructed him as follows.

Antya TEXT 13.34

"vārāṇasī paryanta svacchande yāibā pathe

āge sāvadhāne yāibā kṣatriyādi-sāthe //CC Antya, 13.34//

SYNONYMS

vārāṇasī paryanta—up to Vārāṇasī; svacchande—without disturbance; yāibā pathe—you can go on the path; āge—after that; sāvadhāne—with great care; yāibā—you should go; kṣatriyā-ādi-sāthe—with the kṣatriyas.

TRANSLATION

"You may go as far as Vārāṇasī without encountering disturbances, but beyond Vārāṇasī you should be very careful to travel on the path in the company of the kṣatriyas.

PURPORT

The path from Vārāṇasī to Vṛndāvana was infested with robbers, and therefore in those days there were kṣatriyas to protect travelers.

Antya TEXT 13.35

kevala gauḍiyā pāile 'bāṭapāḍa' kari' bāndhe saba luṭi' bāṇdhi' rākhe, yāite virodhe //CC Antya, 13.35//

SYNONYMS

kevala—alone; gauḍiyā—Bengali; pāile—if gotten; bāṭapāḍa—plundering; kari'-doing; bāndhe—they arrest; saba—everything; luṭi'-taking; bāṇdhi'-arresting; rākhe—keep; yāite virodhe—do not release.

TRANSLATION

"As soon as the plunderers on the road see a Bengali traveling alone, they take everything from him, arrest him and do not let him go.

PURPORT

Bengalis are generally not very stout or strong. Therefore when a lone Bengali traverses the roads of Bihar, the plunderers on the road capture him, rob all his belongings and kidnap him for their own service. According to one opinion, the rogues of Bihar know very well that Bengalis are intelligent; therefore these thieves generally force the Bengalis into service requiring intelligence and do not allow them to leave.

Antya TEXT 13.36

mathurā gele sanātana-saṅgei rahibā mathurāra svāmī sabera caraṇa vandibā //CC Antya, 13.36//

SYNONYMS

mathurā gele—when you go to Mathurā; sanātana-saṅgei—in the association of Sanātana Gosvāmī; rahibā—remain; mathurāra svāmī—the leading men of Mathurā; sabera—of all; caraṇa vandibā—worship the feet.

TRANSLATION

"When you reach Mathurā, you should remain with Sanātana Gosvāmī and offer respectful obeisances to the feet of all the leading men there.

Antya TEXT 13.37

dūre rahi' bhakti kariha saṅge nā rahibā

tān-sabāra ācāra-ceṣṭā la-ite nāribā //CC Antya, 13.37//

SYNONYMS

dūre rahi'-keeping apart; bhakti kariha—show devotion; saṅge—in association; nā rahibā—do not stay; tān-sabāra—their; ācāra—behavior; ceṣṭā—endeavors; la-ite nāribā—you cannot take up.

TRANSLATION

"Do not mix freely with the residents of Mathurā; show them respect from a distance. Because you are on a different platform of devotional service, you cannot adopt their behavior and practices.

PURPORT

The residents of Vṛndāvana and Mathurā are devotees of Kṛṣṇa in parental affection, and their feelings always conflict with the opinions of smārta-brāhmaṇas. Devotees who worship Kṛṣṇa in opulence cannot understand the parental devotional feelings of the residents of Mathurā and Vṛndāvana, who follow the path of spontaneous love. Devotees on the platform of vidhi-mārga (regulative devotional principles) may misunderstand the activities of those on the platform of rāga-mārga (devotional service in spontaneous love). Therefore Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu instructed Jagadānanda Paṇḍita to remain apart from the residents of Vṛndāvana, who were spontaneous devotees, so as not to become disrespectful toward them.

Antya TEXT 13.38

SYNONYMS

śīghra—as soon as possible; āsiha—return; tāhān—there; nā rahiha—do not remain; cira-kāla—for a long time; govardhane—on Govardhana Hill; nā caḍiha—do not climb; dekhite gopāla—to see the Gopāla Deity.

TRANSLATION

"You should remain in Vṛndāvana for only a short time and then return here as soon as possible. Also, do not climb Govardhana Hill to see the Gopāla Deity.

PURPORT

In his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura advises that one avoid remaining in Vṛndāvana for a very long time. As the saying goes, "Familiarity breeds contempt." If one stays in Vṛndāvana for many days, he may fail to maintain proper respect for its inhabitants. Therefore those who have not attained the stage of spontaneous love for Kṛṣṇa should not live in Vṛndāvana very long. It is better for them to make short visits. One should also avoid climbing Govardhana Hill to see the Gopāla Deity. Since Govardhana Hill itself is identical with Gopāla, one should not step on the hill or touch it with his feet. One may see Gopāla when He goes elsewhere.

rakta-vastra 'vaiṣṇavera' parite nā yuyāya kona pravāsīre dimu, ki kāya uhāya? //CC Antya, 13.61//

SYNONYMS

rakta-vastra—saffron clothing; vaiṣṇavera—for a Vaiṣṇava; parite nā yuyāya—is not fit to put on; kona pravāsīre—to some outsider; dimu—I shall give; ki—what; kāya—business; uhāya—with that.

TRANSLATION

"This saffron cloth is unfit for a Vaiṣṇava to wear; therefore I have no use for it. I shall give it to a stranger."

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments on this incident as follows: Vaiṣṇavas are all liberated persons, unattached to anything material. Therefore a Vaiṣṇava need not accept the dress of a sannyāsī to prove his exalted position. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu accepted the renounced order from a sannyāsī of the Māyāvāda school. Present-day Vaiṣṇava sannyāsīs, however, never think that by accepting the dress of the sannyāsa order they have become equal to Caitanya Mahāprabhu. In fact, a Vaiṣṇava accepts the sannyāsa order to remain an eternal servant of his spiritual master. He accepts the sannyāsa order knowing that he is unequal to his spiritual master, who is a paramahansa, and he thinks that he is unfit to dress like a paramahansa. Therefore a Vaiṣṇava accepts sannyāsa out of humility, not out of pride.

Sanātana Gosvāmī had adopted the dress of a paramahansa; therefore it was inappropriate for him to wear the saffron cloth on his head. However, a Vaiṣṇava sannyāsī does not think himself fit to imitate the dress of a paramahansa Vaiṣṇava. According to the principles set down by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu (tṛṇād api sunīcena), one should always think himself in the lowest stage, not on the level of a paramahansa Vaiṣṇava. Thus a Vaiṣṇava will sometimes accept the sannyāsa order just to keep himself below the level of a paramahansa Vaiṣṇava. This is the instruction of Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura.

Antya TEXT 13.62

TRANSLATION

Rāmadāsa Viśvāsa was very learned in all the revealed scriptures. He was a teacher of the famous book Kāvya-prakāśa and was known as an advanced devotee and worshiper of Raghunātha [Lord Rāmacandra].

PURPORT

Commenting on the word parama-vaiṣṇava, Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura says that anyone who desires to merge into the existence of the Lord cannot be a pure Vaiṣṇava, but because Rāmadāsa Viśvāsa was a great devotee of Lord Rāmacandra, he was almost a Vaiṣṇava. In those days, no one could distinguish between a pure Vaiṣṇava and a pseudo Vaiṣṇava. Therefore Rāmadāsa Viśvāsa was known as a Vaiṣṇava because he worshiped Lord Rāmacandra.

Antya TEXT 13.93

Antya TEXT 13.112

aṣṭa-māsa rahi' prabhu bhaṭṭe vidāya dilā

'vivāha nā kariha' bali' niṣedha karilā //CC Antya, 13.112//

SYNONYMS

aṣṭa-māsa—for eight months; rahi'-staying; prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; bhaṭṭe—to Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa; vidāya dilā—bid farewell; vivāha nā kariha—do not marry; bali'-saying; niṣedha karilā—he forbade.

TRANSLATION

After eight months, when Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu bade farewell to Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa, the Lord flatly forbade him to marry. "Do not marry," the Lord said.

PURPORT

Raghunātha Bhaṭṭācārya had become a greatly advanced devotee while still unmarried. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu could see this, and therefore He advised him not to begin the process of material sense gratification. Marriage is a concession for people who are unable to control their senses. Raghunātha, however, being an advanced devotee of Kṛṣṇa, naturally had no desire for sense gratification. Therefore Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu advised him not to enter the bondage of marriage. Generally a person cannot make much advancement in spiritual consciousness if he is married. He becomes attached to his family and is prone to sense gratification. Thus his spiritual advancement is very slow or almost nil.

Antya TEXT 13.113

vṛddha mātā-pitāra yāi' karaha sevana

vaiṣṇava-pāśa bhāgavata kara adhyayana //CC Antya, 13.113//

SYNONYMS

vṛddha—old; mātā-pitāra—of the mother and father; yāi'-going back; karaha sevana—engage in service; vaiṣṇava-pāśa—from a pure Vaiṣṇava; bhāgavata—

Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; kara adhyayana—study.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said to Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa, "When you return home, serve your aged father and mother, who are devotees, and try to study Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam from a pure Vaiṣṇava who has realized God."

PURPORT

One should note how Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, advised Raghunātha Bhaṭṭācārya to learn Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. He advised him to understand Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam not from professional men but from a real bhāgavata, devotee. He also advised Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa to serve his mother and father because they were both His devotees. Anyone who wishes to advance in Kṛṣṇa consciousness must try to serve the devotees of Kṛṣṇa. As Narottama dāsa Ṭhākura says, chāḍiyā vaiṣṇava-sevā nistāra pāyeche kebā: "Without serving a self-realized Vaiṣṇava, no one has ever been released from the materialistic way of life." Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would have never advised Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa to serve ordinary parents, but since his parents were Vaiṣṇavas, the Lord advised him to serve them.

One might ask "Why shouldn't ordinary parents be served?" As stated in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (5.5.18):

gurur na sa syāt sva-jano na sa syāt pitā na sa syāj jananī na sā syāt daivam na tat syān na patiś ca sa syān na mocayed yaḥ samupeta-mṛtyum

"One who cannot deliver his dependent from the path of birth and death should never become a spiritual master, a relative, a father or mother, or a worshipable demigod, nor should such a person become a husband." Everyone naturally gets a father and mother at the time of birth, but the real father and mother are they who can release their offspring from the clutches of imminent death. This is possible only for parents advanced in Kṛṣṇa consciousness. Therefore any parents who cannot enlighten their offspring in Kṛṣṇa consciousness cannot be accepted as a real father and mother. The following verse from the Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu (1.2.200) confirms the uselessness of serving ordinary parents:

laukikī vaidikī vāpi

yā kriyā kriyate mune

hari-sevānukūlaiva

sa kāryā bhaktim icchatā

"One should perform only those activities-either worldly or prescribed by Vedic rules and regulations-which are favorable for the cultivation of Kṛṣṇa consciousness."

Concerning the study of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu clearly advises that one avoid hearing from a non-Vaiṣṇava professional reciter. In this connection Sanātana Gosvāmī quotes a verse from the Padma Purāṇa:

avaiṣṇava-mukhodgīrṇam

pūtam hari-kathāmṛtam

śravaṇam naiva kartavyam

sarpocchiṣtam yathā payaḥ

"No one should hear or take lessons from a person who is not a Vaiṣṇava. Even if he speaks about Kṛṣṇa, such a lesson should not be accepted, for it is like milk touched by the lips of a serpent." Nowadays it is fashionable to observe Bhāgavata-saptāha and hear Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam from persons who are anything but advanced devotees or self-realized souls. There are even many Māyāvādīs who read Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam to throngs of people. Many Māyāvādīs have recently begun reciting Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam in Vṛndāvana, and because they can present the Bhāgavatam with word jugglery, twisting the meaning by grammatical tricks, materialistic persons who go to Vṛndāvana as a matter of spiritual fashion like to hear them. All this is clearly forbidden by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. We should note carefully that since these Māyāvādīs cannot personally know the meaning of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, they can never deliver others by reciting it. On the other hand, an advanced devotee of the Lord is free from material bondage. He personifies the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam in life and action. Therefore we advise that anyone who wants to learn the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam must approach such a realized soul.

TRANSLATION

He would not listen to blasphemy of a Vaiṣṇava, nor would he listen to talk of a Vaiṣṇava's misbehavior. He knew only that everyone was engaged in Kṛṣṇa's service; he did not understand anything else.

PURPORT

Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa never did anything harmful to a Vaiṣṇava. In other words, he was never inattentive in the service of the Lord, nor did he ever violate the rules and regulations of a pure Vaiṣṇava. It is the duty of a Vaiṣṇava ācārya to prevent his disciples and followers from violating the principles of Vaiṣṇava behavior. He should always advise them to strictly follow the regulative principles, which will protect them from falling down. Although a Vaiṣṇava preacher may sometimes criticize others, Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa avoided this. Even if another Vaiṣṇava was actually at fault, Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa would not criticize him; he saw only that everyone was engaged in Kṛṣṇa's service. That is the position of a mahā-bhāgavata. Actually, even if one is serving māyā, in a higher sense he is also a servant of Kṛṣṇa. Because māyā is the servant of Kṛṣṇa, anyone serving māyā serves Kṛṣṇa indirectly. Therefore it is said:

keha māne, keha nā māne, saba tānra dāsa

ye nā māne, tāra haya sei pāpe nāśa

"Some accept Him, whereas others do not, yet everyone is His servant. One who does not accept Him, however, will be ruined by his sinful activities." (Cc. Ādi 6.85)

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Thirteenth Chapter, describing Jagadānanda Paṇḍita's visit to Vṛndāvana, the Lord's hearing the song of the deva-dāsī, and Raghunātha Bhaṭṭa Gosvāmī's achieving love of Kṛṣṇa.

Chapter 14 Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's Feelings of Separation from Kṛṣṇa

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura gives the following summary of the Fourteenth Chapter of Antya-līlā. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's feelings of separation from Kṛṣṇa resulted in highly elevated transcendental madness. When He was standing near the Garuḍa-stambha and praying to Lord Jagannātha, a woman from Orissa put her foot on the Lord's shoulder in her great eagerness to see Lord Jagannātha. Govinda chastised her for this, but Caitanya Mahāprabhu praised her eagerness. When Caitanya Mahāprabhu went to the temple of Lord Jagannātha, He was absorbed in ecstatic love and saw only Kṛṣṇa. As soon as He perceived this woman, however, His external consciousness immediately returned, and He saw Jagannātha, Baladeva and Subhadrā. Caitanya Mahāprabhu also saw Kṛṣṇa in a dream, and He was overwhelmed with ecstatic love. When He could no longer see Kṛṣṇa, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu compared Himself to a yogī and described how that yogī was seeing Vṛndāvana. Sometimes all the transcendental ecstatic symptoms were manifest in Him. One night, Govinda and Svarūpa Dāmodara noticed that although the three doors to the Lord's room were closed and locked, the Lord was not present inside. Seeing this, Svarūpa Dāmodara and the other devotees went outside and saw the Lord lying unconscious by the gate known as Simha-dvāra. His body had become unusually long, and the joints of His bones were loose. The devotees gradually brought Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu back to His senses by chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra, and then they took Him back to His residence. Once Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu mistook Caṭaka-parvata for Govardhana-parvata. As He ran toward it, He became stunned, and then the eight ecstatic transformations appeared in His body due to great love for Kṛṣṇa. At that time all the devotees chanted the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra to pacify Him.

svarūpa-gosāñi āra raghunātha-dāsa

ei dūra kaḍacāte e-līlā prakāśa //CC Antya, 14.7//

SYNONYMS

svarūpa-gosāñi—Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī; āra—and; raghunātha-dāsa—Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī; ei dūra—of these two; kaḍacāte—in the notebooks; e-līlā—these pastimes; prakāśa—described.

TRANSLATION

Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī recorded all these transcendental activities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in their notebooks.

PURPORT

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's transcendental feelings of separation from Kṛṣṇa and His consequent madness are not at all understandable by a person on the material platform. Nonetheless, a so-called party of devotees named nadīyā-nāgarī has sprung up and introduced the worship of Viṣṇupriyā. This certainly indicates their ignorance concerning Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastimes. In the opinion of Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, such worship is a product of the imagination. Many other methods of worshiping Caitanya Mahāprabhu have also been introduced, but they have all been rejected by stalwart devotees like Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura. The groups practicing such unauthorized worship have been listed by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura:

āula, bāula, kartābhajā, neḍā, daraveśa, sāni sahajiyā, sakhībhekī, smārta, jāta-gosāñi

ativāḍī, cūḍādhārī, gaurāṅga-nāgarī

Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī witnessed Caitanya Mahāprabhu's activities firsthand, and they recorded them in two notebooks. Therefore, without reference to these notebooks, one cannot understand the activities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Anyone inventing some new method for worshiping Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is certainly unable to understand the Lord's pastimes, for he is bereft of the real process of approaching the Lord.

Antya TEXT 14.8

se-kāle e-dui rahena mahāprabhura pāśe

āra saba kaḍacā-kartā rahena dūra-deśe //CC Antya, 14.8//

SYNONYMS

se-kāle—in those days; e-dui—these two; rahena—stayed; mahāprabhura pāśe—with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; āra—other; saba—all; kaḍacā-kartā—commentators; rahena—remained; dūra-deśe—far away.

TRANSLATION

In those days, Svarūpa Dāmodara and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī lived with Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, whereas all other commentators lived far away from Him.

PURPORT

Besides Svarūpa Dāmodara and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, there were many others who also recorded Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's activities. Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura believes that the people of the world would benefit greatly if such notes were available. It is a most unfortunate situation for human society that none of these notebooks are still extant.

Antya TEXT 14.9

kṣaṇe kṣaṇe anubhavi' ei dui-jana saṅkṣepe bāhulye kareṇa kaḍacā-granthana //CC Antya, 14.9//

SYNONYMS

kṣaṇe kṣaṇe—moment by moment; anubhavi'-understanding; ei dui-jana—these two persons; saṅkṣepe—in brief; bāhulye—elaborately; kareṇa—do; kaḍacā-granthana—compiling the notebooks.

TRANSLATION

These two great personalities [Svarūpa Dāmodara and Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī] recorded the activities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu moment by moment. They described these activities briefly as well as elaborately in their notebooks.

PURPORT

For future reference, we should remember that Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī recorded the pastimes briefly, whereas Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī recorded them elaborately. These two great personalities simply recorded the facts; they did not create any descriptive literary embellishments.

svārūpa--'sūtra-kartā', raghunātha--'vṛttikāra'

tāra bāhulya varṇi--pāñji-ṭīkā-vyavahāra //CC Antya, 14.10//

SYNONYMS

svārūpa—Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī; sūtra-kartā—maker of short codes; raghunātha—Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī; vṛttikāra—maker of elaborate explanations; tāra—of those; bāhulya—more elaborately; varṇi—I shall describe; pāñji—fluffing out (as of cotton); ṭīkā—explanation; vyavahāra—behavior.

TRANSLATION

Svarūpa Dāmodara wrote short codes, whereas Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī wrote elaborate descriptions. I shall now describe Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's activities more elaborately, as if fluffing out compressed cotton.

PURPORT

Pāñji-ṭīkā means further explanations of a subject. Writing such explanations is likened to the process of fluffing out cotton.

Antya TEXT 14.11

tāte viśvāsa kari' śuna bhāvera varṇana

ha-ibe bhāvera jñāna, pāibā prema-dhana //CC Antya, 14.11//

SYNONYMS

tāte—therefore; viśvāsa kari'-having faith; śuna—please hear; bhāvera varṇana—description of ecstatic emotions; ha-ibe—there will be; bhāvera—of ecstatic emotions; jñāna—knowledge; pāibā—you will get; prema-dhana—love of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

Please hear faithfully this description of Caitanya Mahāprabhu's ecstatic emotions. Thus you will come to know of His ecstatic love, and ultimately you will achieve love of Godhead.

Antya TEXT 14.12

kṛṣṇa mathurāya gele, gopīra ye daśā haila

kṛṣṇa-vicchede prabhura se daśā upajila //CC Antya, 14.12//

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa mathurāya gele—when Lord Kṛṣṇa departed for Mathurā; gopīra—of the gopīs; ye daśā—which condition; haila—was; kṛṣṇa-vicchede—by separation from Kṛṣṇa; prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; se daśā—that situation; upajila—happened.

TRANSLATION

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu felt separation from Kṛṣṇa, His condition exactly corresponded to the condition of the gopīs in Vṛndāvana after Kṛṣṇa's departure for Mathurā.

Antya TEXT 14.13

uddhava-darśane yaiche rādhāra vilāpa

krame krame haila prabhura se unmāda-vilāpa //CC Antya, 14.13//

SYNONYMS

uddhava-darśane—by seeing Uddhava; yaiche—as; rādhāra—of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; vilāpa—lamentation; krame krame—gradually; haila—became; prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; se—that; unmāda-vilāpa—lamentation in madness.

TRANSLATION

The lamentation of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī when Uddhava visited Vṛndāvana gradually became a feature of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's transcendental madness.

Antya TEXT 14.14

rādhikāra bhāve prabhura sadā 'abhimāna' sei bhāve āpanāke haya 'rādhā'-jñāna //CC Antya, 14.14//

SYNONYMS

rādhikāra bhāve—in the emotion of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; sadā—always; abhimāna—conception; sei bhāve—under such a conception; āpanāke—upon Himself; haya—becomes; rādhā-jñāna—consideration as Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī.

TRANSLATION

Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī's emotions after seeing Uddhava exactly correspond to those of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. He always conceived of Himself in Her position and sometimes thought that He was Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī Herself.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura explains that the purport of the word abhimāna, or "self-conception," is that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu thought Himself to be in the position of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī and was always ready to render service in that way. Although Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is Kṛṣṇa Himself, He assumed the complexion and emotions of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī and remained in that status. He never assumed the complexion or status of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Of course, Kṛṣṇa wanted to experience the role of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; that is the original cause of His assuming the body of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Therefore pure Vaiṣṇavas never disturb Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's conception of being Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī.

Unfortunately, at the present time a group of so-called devotees maintain that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the enjoyer and that they are enjoyers as well. They have actually deviated from devotional service to the Lord. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu manifested Himself to show that cultivation of love for Kṛṣṇa in separation is the easiest way of success for all living entities. Despite this fact, there are some theosophists who declare that because Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, such cultivation is easy for Him but difficult for the living entity and that one can therefore approach Kṛṣṇa in any way he likes. To nullify this idea, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu demonstrated practically how one can achieve love of Kṛṣṇa by adopting Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī's mood in separation from Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 14.15

divyonmāde aiche haya, ki ihā vismaya?

adhirūḍha-bhāve divyonmāda-pralāpa haya //CC Antya, 14.15//

SYNONYMS

divya-unmāde—in transcendental madness; aiche—such; haya—is; ki ihā vismaya—what is the wonder; adhirūḍha-bhāve—in highly elevated love of Kṛṣṇa; divya-unmāda—in transcendental madness; pralāpa—talking; haya—there is.

TRANSLATION

Such is the state of transcendental madness. Why is it difficult to understand? When one is highly elevated in love of Kṛṣṇa, he becomes transcendently mad and talks like a madman.

SYNONYMS

etasya—of this; mohana-ākhyasya—mood known as mohana, or enchanting; gatim—progress; kāmapi—inexplicable; upeyuṣaḥ—having obtained; bhrama-ābhā—resembling bewilderment; kāpi—some; vaicitrī—condition bringing about astonishment; divya-unmāda—transcendental madness; iti—thus; īryate—it is called; udghūrṇā—of the name udghūrṇā; citra-jalpa—of the name citra-jalpa; ādyāḥ—and so on; tat-bhedāḥ—different features of that; bahavaḥ—many; matāḥ—described.

TRANSLATION

"When the ecstatic emotion of enchantment gradually progresses, it becomes similar to bewilderment. Then one reaches the stage of astonishment [vaicitrī], which awakens transcendental madness. Udghūrṇā and citra-jalpa are two among the many divisions of transcendental madness."

PURPORT

This is a quotation from the Ujjvala-nīlamaṇi (Sthāyibhāva-prakaraṇa 190).

SYNONYMS

uḍiyā—a native of Orissa; eka—one; strī—woman; bhīḍe—in the crowd; darśana nā pāñā—being unable to see; garuḍe caḍi'-climbing up the column of Garuḍa; dekhe—sees; prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; skandhe—on the shoulder; pada—her foot; diyā—placing.

TRANSLATION

Suddenly, a woman from Orissa, unable to see Lord Jagannātha because of the crowd, climbed the column of Garuḍa, placing her foot on Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's shoulder.

Antya TEXT 14.25

dekhiyā govinda āste-vyaste strīke varjilā

tāre nāmāite prabhu govinde niṣedhilā //CC Antya, 14.25//

SYNONYMS

dekhiyā—seeing; govinda—the personal servant of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; āste-vyaste—with great haste; strīke—the woman; varjilā—got down; tāre—her; nāmāite—to get down; prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; govinde—Govinda; niṣedhilā—forbade.

TRANSLATION

When he saw this, Caitanya Mahāprabhu's personal secretary, Govinda, hastily got her down from her position. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, however, chastised him for this.

PURPORT

Because Garuḍa is the carrier of Lord Viṣṇu, he is the supreme Vaiṣṇava. Therefore to touch his body with one's feet or to climb the column of Garuḍa is certainly a vaiṣṇava-aparādha, an offense to a Vaiṣṇava. The woman was also offensive to Kṛṣṇa by putting her foot on the shoulder of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Seeing all these offenses, Govinda very hastily made her get down.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said to Govinda, "O ādi-vasyā [uncivilized man], do not forbid this woman to climb the Garuḍa-stambha. Let her see Lord Jagannātha to her satisfaction."

PURPORT

For an explanation of the word ādi-vasyā, refer to Antya-līlā, Chapter Ten, verse 116.

SYNONYMS

tāra—her; ārti—eagerness; dekhi'-seeing; prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kahite lāgilā—began to speak; eta ārti—so much eagerness; jagannātha—Lord Jagannātha; more—unto Me; nāhi dilā—did not bestow.

TRANSLATION

Seeing the woman's eagerness, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "Lord Jagannātha has not bestowed so much eagerness upon Me.

PURPORT

The woman was so eager to see Lord Jagannātha that she forgot she was offending the feet of a Vaiṣṇava by climbing the column of Garuḍa. She also neglected to consider that by putting her foot on the shoulder of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, she offended the Supreme Personality of Godhead. These are both grievous offenses that displease the Supreme Lord and Vaiṣṇavas. She was so eager to see Lord Jagannātha, however, that she committed all these offenses obliviously. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu praised her eagerness; He regretted that Lord Jagannātha had not bestowed such great eagerness upon Him.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu sat down on the ground and began to mark it with His nails. He was blinded by tears, which flowed from His eyes like the Ganges.

Antya TEXT 14.37

'pāiluṅ vṛndāvana-nātha, punaḥ hārāiluṅ

ke mora nileka kṛṣṇa? kāhāṅ mui āinu'? //CC Antya, 14.37//

SYNONYMS

pāiluṅ—I got; vṛndāvana-nātha—the Supreme Lord of Vṛndāvana; punaḥ—again; hārāiluṅ—I have lost; ke—who; mora—My; nileka—took away; kṛṣṇa—Lord Kṛṣṇa; kāhāṅ—where; mui āinu—have I come.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "I found Kṛṣṇa, the Lord of Vṛndāvana, but I have lost Him again. Who has taken My Kṛṣṇa? Where have I come?"

PURPORT

These are the feelings of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī. First Lord Caitanya felt that He had been taken to Vṛndāvana, where He saw Kṛṣṇa's rāsa dance with the gopīs. Then He was brought to Kurukṣetra to see Lord Jagannātha, His sister (Subhadrā) and Lord Balarāma. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu lost Vṛndāvana and Kṛṣṇa, the master of Vṛndāvana. At this time, Caitanya Mahāprabhu experienced divyonmāda, transcendental madness in separation from Kṛṣṇa. At Kurukṣetra, Kṛṣṇa displays His opulence, whereas in Vṛndāvana He is in His original position. Kṛṣṇa never goes even a step away from Vṛndāvana; therefore Kurukṣetra is less important for the gopīs than Vṛndāvana.

Although devotees who worship Kṛṣṇa in opulence (His Vaikuṇṭha aspect) may prefer to see Lord Kṛṣṇa at Kurukṣetra along with Subhadrā and Balarāma, the gopīs want to see Kṛṣṇa in Vṛndāvana, performing the rāsa dance with Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu showed by practical example how one can cultivate the mood of Rādhārāṇī and the other gopīs in separation from Kṛṣṇa. Devotees absorbed in this mood do not like to see Kṛṣṇa anywhere else but Vṛndāvana. Therefore Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu lamented, "I found Kṛṣṇa in Vṛndāvana, and now I have again lost Him and come to Kurukṣetra." Unless one is a very highly advanced devotee, he cannot understand these intricate feelings. The author of Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, however, has tried to explain this divyonmāda as far as possible, and it is our duty simply to appreciate it as far as possible. Therefore the author has made the following request in verse 11:

tāte viśvāsa kari' śuna bhāvera varṇana

ha-ibe bhāvera jñāna, pāibā prema-dhana

"My dear readers, simply try to hear this description with faith and love. That will help you to understand transcendental ecstasy, and at last you will achieve love of Godhead very easily."

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "At first My mind somehow achieved the treasure of Kṛṣṇa, but it again lost Him. Therefore it gave up My body and home because of lamentation and accepted the religious principles of a kāpālīka-yogī. Then My mind went to Vṛndāvana with its disciples, My senses., "

PURPORT

This verse is clearly metaphorical.

SYNONYMS

prāpta—acquired; ratna—gem; hārāñā—having lost; tāra—of it; guṇa—attributes; sañariyā—remembering; mahāprabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; santāpe—in lamentation; vihvala—overwhelmed; rāya—of Rāmānanda Rāya; svarūpera—of Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī; kaṇṭha dhari'-catching the necks; kahe—said; hāhā hari hari—alas, where is Hari, where is Hari; dhairya—patience; gela—lost; ha-ilā capala—became restless.

TRANSLATION

Having lost His acquired gem, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu became overwhelmed with lamentation by remembering its attributes. Then, grasping the necks of Rāmānanda Rāya and Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī, He cried, "Alas, where is My Lord Hari? Where is Hari?" Finally He became restless and lost all patience.

TRANSLATION

"The ring of Kṛṣṇa's rāsa-līlā, manufactured by Śukadeva Gosvāmī, the most auspicious craftsman, is as pure as an earring made from a conchshell. The yogī of My mind is wearing that earring upon his ear. From a gourd he has carved out the bowl of My aspirations, and he has taken the bag of My expectations on his shoulder.

SYNONYMS

mana—the mind; kṛṣṇa-viyogī—bereft of Kṛṣṇa's association; duḥkhe—in unhappiness; mana—the mind; haila—became; yogī—a mystic yogī; se viyoge—by that feeling of separation; daśa—ten; daśā—transcendental transformations; haya—there are; se daśāya—by those transcendental transformations; vyākula hañā—being very agitated; mana—the mind; gela—went away; palāñā—fleeing; śūnya—void; mora—My; śarīra—body; ālaya—place of residence.

TRANSLATION

"When My mind lost the association of Kṛṣṇa and could no longer see Him, he became depressed and took up mystic yoga. In the void of separation from Kṛṣṇa, he experienced ten transcendental transformations. Agitated by these transformations, My mind fled, leaving My body, his place of residence, empty. Thus I am completely in trance."

PURPORT

In this verse, the outward activities of the kāpālīka mendicants have been described, but not their actual life. The kāpālīka mendicants are tantric materialists who carry skulls in their hands. They are not Vaiṣṇavas and have nothing to do with spiritual life. Therefore they are untouchable. Only an outward comparison has been made between the mind and their activities, but their behavior should never be imitated.

cintā—anxiety; atra—here (because of separation from Kṛṣṇa); jāgara—wakefulness; udvegau—and mental agitation; tānavam—thinness; malina-aṅgatā—an unclean, almost dirty state of the body; pralāpaḥ—talking like a madman; vyādhiḥ—disease; unmādaḥ—madness; mohāḥ—illusion; mṛtyuḥ—death; daśā—conditions; daśa—ten.

TRANSLATION

"The ten bodily transformations resulting from separation from Kṛṣṇa are anxiety, wakefulness, mental agitation, thinness, uncleanliness, talking like a madman, disease, madness, illusion and death."

PURPORT

This verse is part of a description of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī's different traits from Ujjvala-nīlamanī by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī. In this book, he elaborately explains the ten symptoms as follows.

Cintā. As stated in the Haṁsadūta:

yadā yāto gopī-hṛdaya-madano nanda-sadanān mukundo gāndinyās tanayam anurundhan madhu-purīm tadāmāṅkṣīc cintā-sariti ghana-ghūrṇāparicayair agādhāyām vādhāmaya-payasi rādhā virahiṇī

"At the request of Akrūra, Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma left the house of Nanda Mahārāja for Mathurā. At that time, Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī's mind was disrupted, and She became almost mad because of extreme separation from Kṛṣṇa. She experienced great mental pain and agitation, which caused Her to drown in mental speculation in the river of anxiety. She thought, 'Now I am going to die, and when I die, Kṛṣṇa will surely come back to see Me again. But when He hears of My death from the people of Vṛndāvana, He will certainly be very unhappy. Therefore I shall not die.' " This is the explanation of the word cintā.

Jāgara. As stated in the Padyāvalī:

yāḥ paśyanti priyam svapne dhanyāstāḥ sakhi yoṣitaḥ

asmākaṁ tu gate kṛṣṇe

gatā nidrāpi vairiṇī

Thinking Herself very unfortunate, Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī addressed Her very dear friend Viśākhā, "My dear friend, if I could see Kṛṣṇa in My dreams, I would certainly be glorified for My great fortune. But what can I do? Sleep also plays mischievously with Me. Indeed, it has become My enemy. Therefore I have not slept since the departure of Kṛṣṇa."

Udvega. This word is also explained in the Haṁsadūta as follows:

mano me hā kaṣṭhaṁ jvalati kim ahaṁ hanta karavai na pāraṁ nāvāraṁ sumukhi kalayāṁ yasya jaladheḥ iyaṁ vande mūrdhnā sapadi tam upāyaṁ kathaya me

parāmr̥ṣye yasmād dhṛti-kaṇikayāpi kṣaṇi-kayā

Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī addressed Lalitā, "My dear beautiful-faced Lalitā, I cannot express how My heart is burning. It is a great, unfathomable ocean of anxiety. Still, I wish to offer My obeisances at your lotus feet. What shall I do? Please consider My condition and advise Me how I can become peaceful. That is My desire."

Tānava is described as follows:

udañcad-vaktrāmbhoruha-vikṛtir antaḥ-kulaṣitā sadāhārābhāva-glapita-kucakokā yadu-pate viśuṣyanti rādhā tava viraha-tāpād anudinaṁ

nidāghe kuly eva kraśima-paripākaṁ prathayati

When Uddhava returned to Mathurā after visiting Vṛndāvana, Lord Kṛṣṇa inquired from him about Rādhārāṇī and Viśākhā. Uddhava replied as follows: "Consider the condition of the gopīs! Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī especially is in a very painful condition because of separation from You. She has grown skinny, and Her bodily luster is almost gone. Her heart is immersed in pain, and because She has given up eating, Her breast has become black, as if diseased. Because of separation from You, all the gopīs, especially Rādhārāṇī, appear like dried-up water holes under the scorching heat of the sun."

Malina-aṅgatā is described as follows:

hima-visara-viśīrṇāmbhoja-tulyānana-śrīḥ khara-marud-aparajyad-bandhu-jīvopamauṣṭhī

agha-hara śarad-arkottāpitendīvarākṣī

tava viraha-vipatti-mlāpitāsīd viśākhā

Uddhava said to Kṛṣṇa, "O most auspicious Kṛṣṇa, please hear me. The tribulation caused by Your absence has made Viśākhā languid. Her lips tremble like trees in a strong wind. Her beautiful face is like a lotus flower that has withered under the snow, and Her eyes are like lotus petals scorched by the heat of the autumn sun."

Pralāpa is explained in Lalita-mādhava as follows:

kva nanda-kula-candramāḥ kva śikhi-candra-kālaṅkṛtiḥ

kva manda-muralī-ravaḥ kva nu surendra-nīla-dyutiḥ kva rāsa-rasa-tāṇḍavī kva sakhi jīva-rakṣauṣadhir

nidhir mama suhṛttamaḥ kva tava hanta hā dhig-vidhiḥ

This is Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī's lamentation for Her beloved Kṛṣṇa, who was away from home. A woman whose husband has left home and gone to a foreign land is called proṣita-bhartṛkā. Lamenting for Kṛṣṇa in the same way as such a woman laments for her husband, Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī said, "My dear friend, where is the glory of the family of Mahārāja Nanda, who wears a half-moon ornament on His head? Where is Kṛṣṇa, whose hue is like that of the indranīla jewel and who plays so nicely on His flute? Where is your friend, the best of all men, so expert in dancing in the circle of the rāsa dance? Where is He who is the real medicine to save Me from dying of heart disease? I must condemn Providence, for he has caused Me so many tribulations by separating Me from Kṛṣṇa."

Vyādhi is also described in Lalita-mādhava:

uttāpī puṭa-pākato 'pi garala-grāmād api kṣobhaṇo dambholer api duḥsahaḥ kaṭur alaṁ hṛn-magna-sūlyād api tīvraḥ prauḍha-visūcikāni-cayato 'py uccair mamāyaṁ balī marmāṇy adya bhinatti gokula-pater viśleṣa-janmā jvaraḥ

Being greatly afflicted by the pain of separation from Kṛṣṇa, Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī said, "My dear Lalitā, kindly hear Me. I cannot bear suffering the fever of separation from Kṛṣṇa, nor can I explain it to you. It is something like gold melting in an earthen box. This fever produces more distress than poison, and it is more piercing than a thunderbolt. I suffer exactly like someone almost dead from cholera. To be giving Me so much pain, this fever must be very strong indeed."

Unmāda is explained as follows:

bhramati bhavana-garbhe nirnimittaṁ hasantī prathayati tava vārtāṁ cetanācetaneṣu luthati ca bhuvi rādhā kampitāṅgī murāre

viṣama-viraha-khedodgāri-vibhrānta-cittā

Uddhava said to Kṛṣṇa, "My dear Kṛṣṇa, all the gopīs are so afflicted by Your absence that they have become almost mad. O Murāri, at home Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī laughs unnecessarily and, like a madwoman, inquires about You from every entity without distinction, even from the stones. She rolls on the ground, unable to bear the agony of Your absence."

Moha is explained as follows:

nirundhe dainyābdhiṁ harati guru-cintā paribhavaṁ vilumpaty unmādaṁ sthagayati balād bāṣpa-laharīm idānīm kaṁsāre kuvalaya-dṛśaḥ kevalam idaṁ

vidhatte sāvityaṁ tava viraha-mūrcchā-sahacarī

Lalitā wrote Kṛṣṇa the following letter on Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī's behalf: "My dear Kṛṣṇa, separation from You has greatly agitated Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī's mind, and She has fallen unconscious on the ground. O enemy of Kaṁsa, You have now become a first-class politician, and therefore You can supposedly give relief to everyone. Therefore please consider the plight of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī, or very soon You will hear of Her death. Maybe at that time You will lament, although now You are jubilant."

Mṛtyu is explained in the Haṁsadūta:

aye rāsa-kṛīḍā-rasika mama sakhyam nava-navā purā baddhā yena praṇaya-laharī hanta gahanā sa cen muktāpekṣas tvam asi dhig imām tūlaśakalam

yad etasyā nāsā-nihitam idam adyāpi calati

In the following letter, Lalitā chastised Kṛṣṇa for staying in Mathurā: "Simply by dancing in the circle of the rāsa dance, You attracted Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī's love. Why are You now so indifferent to my dear friend Rādhārāṇī? She is lying nearly unconscious, thinking of Your pastimes. I shall determine whether She is alive by putting a cotton swab under Her nostrils, and if She is still living, I shall chastise Her."

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Fourteenth Chapter, describing Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's transcendental ecstatic emotions and His mistaking Caṭaka-parvata for Govardhana Hill.

Chapter 15 The Transcendental Madness of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu

The following is a summary of the Fifteenth Chapter of Antya-līlā. After seeing the upala-bhoga ceremony of Lord Jagannātha, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu once more began to feel ecstatic emotions. When He saw the garden on the beach by the sea, He again thought that He was in Vṛndāvana, and when He began to think of Kṛṣṇa engaging in His different pastimes, transcendental emotions excited Him again. On the night of the rāsa dance, the gopīs, bereaved by Kṛṣṇa's absence, searched for Kṛṣṇa from one forest to another. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu adopted the same transcendental thoughts as the gopīs and was filled with ecstatic emotion. Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī recited a verse from Gīta-govinda just suitable to the Lord's emotions. Caitanya Mahāprabhu then exhibited the ecstatic transformations known as bhāvodaya, bhāva-sandhi, bhāva-śābalya and so on. The Lord experienced all eight kinds of ecstatic transformations, and He relished them very much.

Antya TEXT 15.1

durgame kṛṣṇa-bhāvābdhau

nimagnonmagna-cetasā

gaureṇa hariṇā prema-maryādā bhūri darśitā //CC Antya, 15.1//

SYNONYMS

durgame—very difficult to understand; kṛṣṇa-bhāva-abdhau—in the ocean of ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa; nimagna—submerged; unmagna-cetasā—His heart being absorbed; gaureṇa—by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; hariṇā—by the Supreme Personality of Godhead; prema-maryādā—the exalted position of transcendental love; bhūri—in various ways; darśitā—was exhibited.

TRANSLATION

The ocean of ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa is very difficult to understand, even for such demigods as Lord Brahmā. By enacting His pastimes, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu submerged Himself in that ocean, and His heart was absorbed in that love. Thus He exhibited in various ways the exalted position of transcendental love for Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 15.2

jaya jaya śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya adhīśvara jaya nityānanda pūrṇānanda-kalevara //CC Antya, 15.2//

SYNONYMS

jaya jaya—all glories; śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanya—to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; adhīśvara—the Supreme Personality of Godhead; jaya—all glories; nityānanda—to Lord Nityānanda; pūrṇa-ānanda—filled with transcendental pleasure; kalevara—His body.

TRANSLATION

All glories to Śrī Kṛṣṇa Caitanya, the Supreme Personality of Godhead! All glories to Lord Nityānanda, whose body is always filled with transcendental bliss!

Antya TEXT 15.3

jayādvaitācārya kṛṣṇa-caitanya-priyatama

jaya śrīvāsa-ādi prabhura bhakta-gaṇa //CC Antya, 15.3//

SYNONYMS

jaya—all glories; advaita-ācārya—to Advaita Ācārya; kṛṣṇa-caitanya—to Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu; priya-tama—very dear; jaya—all glories; śrīvāsa-ādi—headed by Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura; prabhura—of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; bhakta-gaṇa—to the devotees.

TRANSLATION

All glories to Śrī Advaita Ācārya, who is very dear to Lord Caitanya! And all glories to the devotees of the Lord, headed by Śrīvāsa Ṭhākura!

Antya TEXT 15.4

ei-mata mahāprabhu rātri-divase

ātma-sphūrṭi nāhi kṛṣṇa-bhāvēśe //CC Antya, 15.4//

SYNONYMS

ei-mata—in this way; mahāprabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; rātri-divase—night and day; ātma-sphūrṭi nāhi—forgot Himself; kṛṣṇa-bhāva-āvēśe—being merged in ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

Thus Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu forgot Himself throughout the entire day and night, being merged in an ocean of ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 15.5

kabhu bhāve magna, kabhu ardha-bāhya-sphūrṭi kabhu bāhya-sphūrṭi,--tina rīte prabhu-sthiti //CC Antya, 15.5//

SYNONYMS

kabhu—sometimes; bhāve—in ecstatic emotion; magna—merged; kabhu—sometimes; ardha—half; bāhya-sphūrṭi—in external consciousness; kabhu—sometimes; bāhya-sphūrṭi—in full external consciousness; tina rīte—in three ways; prabhu-sthiti—the situation of the Lord.

TRANSLATION

The Lord would maintain Himself in three kinds of consciousness: sometimes He merged totally in ecstatic emotion, sometimes He was in partial external consciousness and sometimes in full external consciousness.

Antya TEXT 15.6

snāna, darśana, bhojana deha-svabhāve haya

kumārera cāka yena satata phiraya //CC Antya, 15.6//

SYNONYMS

snāna—bathing; darśana—visiting the temple; bhojana—taking lunch; deha-svabhāve—by the nature of the body; haya—are; kumārera cāka—the potter's wheel; yena—as; satata—always; phiraya—revolves.

TRANSLATION

Actually, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was always merged in ecstatic emotion, but just as a potter's wheel turns without the potter's touching it, the Lord's bodily activities, like bathing, going to the temple to see Lord Jagannātha, and taking lunch, went on automatically.

Antya TEXT 15.7

eka-dina karena prabhu jagannātha daraśana jagannāthe dekhe sākṣāt vrajendra-nandana //CC Antya, 15.7//

SYNONYMS

eka-dina—one day; karena—does; prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; jagannātha—Lord Jagannātha; daraśana—visiting; jagannāthe—Lord Jagannātha; dekhe—He sees; sākṣāt—personally; vrajendra-nandana—the son of Mahārāja Nanda.

TRANSLATION

One day, while Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was looking at Lord Jagannātha in the temple, Lord Jagannātha appeared to be personally the son of Nanda Mahārāja, Śrī Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 15.8

eka-bāre sphure prabhura kṛṣṇera pañca-guṇa

pañca-guṇe kare pañcendriya ākarṣaṇa //CC Antya, 15.8//

SYNONYMS

eka-bāre—at one time; sphure—manifest; prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kṛṣṇera—of Lord Kṛṣṇa; pañca-guṇa—five attributes; pañca-guṇe—five attributes; kare—do; pañca-indriya—of the five senses; ākarṣaṇa—attraction.

TRANSLATION

When He realized Lord Jagannātha to be Kṛṣṇa Himself, Śrī Caitanya

Mahāprabhu's five senses were immediately absorbed in attraction for the five attributes of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Śrī Kṛṣṇa's beauty attracted the eyes of Lord Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Kṛṣṇa's singing and the vibration of His flute attracted the Lord's ears, the transcendental fragrance of Kṛṣṇa's lotus feet attracted His nostrils, Kṛṣṇa's transcendental sweetness attracted His tongue, and Kṛṣṇa's bodily touch attracted the Lord's sensation of touch. Thus each of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's five senses was attracted by one of the five attributes of Lord Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 15.9

eka-mana pañca-dike pañca-guṇa ṭāne ṭānāṭāni prabhura mana haila ageyāne //CC Antya, 15.9//

SYNONYMS

eka-mana—one mind; pañca-dike—in five directions; pañca-guṇa—the five attributes; ṭāne—attracted; ṭānāṭāni—by a tug-of-war; prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; mana—the mind; haila—became; ageyāne—unconscious.

TRANSLATION

Just as in a tug-of-war, the single mind of Lord Caitanya was attracted in five directions by the five transcendental attributes of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Thus the Lord became unconscious.

Antya TEXT 15.10

hena-kāle īśvarera upala-bhoga sarila

bhakta-gaṇa mahāprabhure ghare lañā āila //CC Antya, 15.10//

TRANSLATION

Just then, the upala-bhoga ceremony of Lord Jagannātha concluded, and the devotees who had accompanied Lord Caitanya to the temple brought Him back home.

Antya TEXT 15.11

svarūpa, rāmānanda,--ei dui-jana lañā

vilāpa karena duñhāra kañthete dhariyā //CC Antya, 15.11//

SYNONYMS

svarūpa—Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī; rāmānanda—Rāmānanda Rāya; ei dui-jana—these two personalities; lañā—with; vilāpa karena—laments; duñhāra—of both; kañthete—the necks; dhariyā—holding.

TRANSLATION

That night, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was attended by Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī and Rāmānanda Rāya. Keeping His hands around their necks, the Lord began to lament.

Antya TEXT 15.12

kṛṣṇera viyoge rādhāra utkañṭhita mana

TRANSLATION

When Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī was very agitated due to feeling great separation from Kṛṣṇa, She spoke a verse to Viśākhā explaining the cause of Her great anxiety and restlessness.

Antya TEXT 15.13

sei śloka paḍi' āpane kare manastāpa

ślokerā artha śunāya duṁhāre kariyā vilāpa //CC Antya, 15.13//

SYNONYMS

sei śloka—that verse; paḍi'-reciting; āpane—personally; kare—does; manaḥ-tāpa—burning of the mind; ślokerā—of the verse; artha—meaning; śunāya—causes to hear; duṁhāre—both; kariyā vilāpa—lamenting.

TRANSLATION

Reciting that verse, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu expressed His burning emotions. Then, with great lamentation, He explained the verse to Svarūpa Dāmodara and Rāmānanda Rāya.

Antya TEXT 15.14

saundaryāmr̥ta-sindhu-bhaṅga-lalanā-cittādri-saṁplāvakaḥ saurabhyāmr̥ta-samplavāvṛta-jagat pīyūṣa-ramyādharaḥ śrī-gopendra-sutaḥ sa karṣati balāt pañcendriyāṇy āli me //CC Antya, 15.14//

SYNONYMS

saundarya—His beauty; amṛta-sindhu—of the ocean of nectar; bhaṅga—by the waves; lalanā—of women; citta—the hearts; adri—hills; saṁplāvakaḥ—inundating; karṇa—through the ears; ānandi—giving pleasure; sanarma—joyful; ramya—beautiful; vacanaḥ—whose voice; koṭi-indu—than ten million moons; śīta—more cooling; āṅgakaḥ—whose body; saurabhya—His fragrance; amṛta—of nectar; samplava—by the inundation; āvṛta—covered; jagat—the entire universe; pīyūṣa—nectar; ramya—beautiful; adharaḥ—whose lips; śrī-gopa-indra—of Nanda Mahārāja; sutaḥ—the son; saḥ—He; karṣati—attracts; balāt—by force; pañca-indriyāṇi—the five senses; āli—O dear friend; me—My.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said: "Though the hearts of the gopīs are like high-standing hills, they are inundated by the waves of the nectarean ocean of Kṛṣṇa's beauty. His sweet voice enters their ears and gives them transcendental bliss. The touch of His body is cooler than millions and millions of moons together, and the nectar of His bodily fragrance overflows the entire world. O My dear friend, that Kṛṣṇa, who is the son of Nanda Mahārāja and whose lips are exactly like nectar, is attracting My five senses by force.'

PURPORT

This verse is found in Govinda-līlāmṛta (8.3).

Antya TEXT 15.15

kṛṣṇa-rūpa-śabda-sparśa, saurabhya-adhara-rasa, yāra mādhyura kahana nā yāya dekhi' lobhe pañca-jana, eka āśva--mora mana, caḍi' pañca pāñca-dike dhāya //CC Antya, 15.15//

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa—of Lord Kṛṣṇa; rūpa—beauty; śabda—sound; sparśa—touch; saurabhya—fragrance; adhara—of lips; rasa—taste; yāra—whose; mādhyura—sweetness; kahana—describing; nā yāya—is not possible; dekhi'-seeing; lobhe—in greed; pañca-jana—five men; eka—one; āśva—horse; mora—My; mana—mind; caḍi'-riding on; pañca—all five; pāñca-dike—in five directions; dhāya—run.

TRANSLATION

"Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa's beauty, the sound of His words and the vibration of His flute, His touch, His fragrance and the taste of His lips are full of an indescribable sweetness. When all these features attract My five senses at once, My senses all ride together on the single horse of My mind but want to go in five different directions.

Antya TEXT 15.16

sakhi he, śuna mora duḥkhera kārāṇa mora pañcendriya-gaṇa, mahā-lampāṭa dasyu-gaṇa, sabe kahe,--hara' para-dhana //CC Antya, 15.16// sakhi—My dear friend; he—O; śuna—please hear; mora—My; duḥkhera kārāṇa

SYNONYMS

—the cause of unhappiness; mora—My; pañca-indriya-gaṇa—five senses of perception; mahā—very; lampāṭa—extravagant; dasyu-gaṇa—rogues; sabe kahe—they all say; hara'-plunder; para-dhana—another's property.

TRANSLATION

"O My dear friend, please hear the cause of My misery. My five senses are actually extravagant rogues. They know very well that Kṛṣṇa is the Supreme Personality of Godhead, but they still want to plunder Kṛṣṇa's property.

Antya TEXT 15.17

eka aśva eka-kṣaṇe, pāñca pāñca dike ṭāne, eka mana kon dike yāya?
eka-kāle sabe ṭāne, gela ghoḍāra parāṇe,
ei duḥkha sahana nā yāya //CC Antya, 15.17//

SYNONYMS

eka—one; aśva—horse; eka-kṣaṇe—at one time; pāñca—five men; pāñca dike—in five directions; ṭāne—pull; eka—one; mana—mind; kon dike—in what direction; yāya—will go; eka-kāle—at one time; sabe—all; ṭāne—pull; gela—will go; ghoḍāra—of the horse; parāṇe—life; ei—this; duḥkha—unhappiness; sahana—tolerating; nā yāya—is not possible.

TRANSLATION

"My mind is just like a single horse being ridden by the five senses of perception, headed by sight. Each sense wants to ride that horse, and thus they pull My mind in five directions simultaneously. In what direction will it go? If they all pull at one time, certainly the horse will lose its life. How can I tolerate this atrocity?

Antya TEXT 15.18

indriye nā kari roṣa, inhā-sabāra kāhān doṣa, kṛṣṇa-rūpādira mahā ākarṣaṇa rūpādi pāñca pāñce ṭāne, gela ghoḍāra parāṇe, mora dehe nā rahe jīvana //CC Antya, 15.18//

SYNONYMS

indriye—at the senses; nā—not; kari roṣa—I can be angry; inhā-sabāra—of all of them; kāhāñ—where; doṣa—fault; kṛṣṇa-rūpa-ādira—of Lord Kṛṣṇa's beauty, sounds, touch, fragrance and taste; mahā—very great; ākarṣaṇa—attraction; rūpa-ādi—the beauty and so on; pāñca—five; pāñce—the five senses; ṭāne—drag; gela—is going away; ghoḍāra—of the horse; parāṇe—life; mora—My; dehe—in the body; nā—not; rahe—remains; jīvana—life.

TRANSLATION

"My dear friend, if you say, 'Just try to control Your senses,' what shall I say? I cannot become angry at My senses. Is it their fault? Kṛṣṇa's beauty, sounds, touch, fragrance and taste are by nature extremely attractive. These five features are attracting My senses, and each wants to drag My mind in a different direction. Thus the life of My mind is in great danger, just like a horse ridden in five directions at once. Thus I am also in danger of dying.

Antya TEXT 15.19

kṛṣṇa-rūpāmṛta-sindhu, tāhāra taraṅga-bindu, eka-bindu jagat ḍubāya trijagate yata nārī, tāra citta-ucca-giri, tāhā ḍubāi āge uṭhi' dhāya //CC Antya, 15.19//

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-rūpa—of Kṛṣṇa's transcendental beauty; amṛta-sindhu—the ocean of nectar; tāhāra—of that; taraṅga-bindu—a drop of a wave; eka-bindu—one drop; jagat—the whole world; ḍubāya—can flood; tri-jagate—in the three worlds; yata nārī—all women; tāra citta—their consciousness; ucca-giri—high hills; tāhā—that; ḍubāi—drowning; āge—forward; uṭhi'-raising; dhāya—runs.

TRANSLATION

"The consciousness of each woman within the three worlds is certainly like a high hill, but the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's beauty is like an ocean. Even a drop of water from that ocean can flood the entire world and submerge all the high hills of consciousness.

Antya TEXT 15.20

kṛṣṇera vacana-mādhurī, nānā-rasa-narma-dhārī, tāra anyāya kathana nā yāya jagatera nārīra kāṇe, mādhurī-guṇe bāndhi' ṭāne, ṭānāṭāni kāṇera prāṇa yāya //CC Antya, 15.20//

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇera—of Lord Kṛṣṇa; vacana-mādhurī—the sweetness of speaking; nānā—various; rasa-narma-dhārī—full of joking words; tāra—of that; anyāya—atrocities; kathana—description; nā yāya—cannot be made; jagatera—of the world; nārīra—of women; kāṇe—in the ear; mādhurī-guṇe—to the attributes of sweetness; bāndhi'-binding; ṭāne—pulls; ṭānāṭāni—tug-of-war; kāṇera—of the ear; prāṇa yāya—the life departs.

TRANSLATION

"The sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's joking words plays indescribable havoc with the hearts of all women. His words bind a woman's ear to the qualities of their sweetness. Thus there is a tug-of-war, and the life of the ear departs.

Antya TEXT 15.21

kṛṣṇa-aṅga suśītala, ki kahimu tāra bala, chaṭāya jine koṭīndu-candana saśāila nārīra vakṣa, tāhā ākarṣite dakṣa, ākarṣaye nārī-gaṇa-mana //CC Antya, 15.21//

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-aṅga—the body of Kṛṣṇa; su-śītala—very cool; ki kahimu—what shall I say; tāra—of that; bala—the strength; chaṭāya—by the rays; jine—surpasses; koṭi-indu—millions upon millions of moons; candana—sandalwood pulp; saśāila—like raised hills; nārīra—of a woman; vakṣa—breasts; tāhā—that; ākarṣite—to attract; dakṣa—very expert; ākarṣaye—attracts; nārī-gaṇa-mana—the minds of all women.

TRANSLATION

"Kṛṣṇa's transcendental body is so cool that it cannot be compared even to sandalwood pulp or to millions upon millions of moons. It expertly attracts the breasts of all women, which resemble high hills. Indeed, the transcendental body of Kṛṣṇa attracts the minds of all women within the three worlds.

Antya TEXT 15.22

kṛṣṇāṅga--saurabhya-bhara, mṛga-mada-mada-hara, nīlotpalera hare garva-dhana jagat-nārīra nāsā, tāra bhitara pāte vāsā, nārī-gaṇe kare ākarṣaṇa //CC Antya, 15.22//

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa-aṅga—the body of Kṛṣṇa; saurabhya-bhara—full of fragrance; mṛga-mada—of musk; mada-hara—intoxicating power; nīlotpalera—of the bluish lotus flower; hare—takes away; garva-dhana—the pride of the treasure; jagat-nārīra—of the women in the world; nāsā—nostrils; tāra bhitara—within them; pāte vāsā—constructs a residence; nārī-gaṇe—women; kare ākarṣaṇa—attracts.

TRANSLATION

"The fragrance of Kṛṣṇa's body is more maddening than the aroma of musk, and it surpasses the fragrance of the bluish lotus flower. It enters the nostrils of all the women of the world and, making a nest there, thus attracts them.

Antya TEXT 15.23

kṛṣṇera adharāmṛta, tāte karpūra manda-smita, sva-mādhurye hare nārīra mana anyatra chāḍāya lobha, nā pāile mane kṣobha, vraja-nārī-gaṇera mūla-dhana" //CC Antya, 15.23//

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇera—of Lord Kṛṣṇa; adhara-amṛta—the sweetness of the lips; tâte—with that; karpūra—camphor; manda-smita—gentle smile; sva-mādhurye—by His sweetness; hare—attracts; nārīra mana—the minds of all women; anyatra—anywhere else; chāḍāya—vanquishes; lobha—greed; nā pāile—without getting; mane—in the mind; kṣobha—great agitation; vraja-nārī-gaṇera—of all the gopīs of Vṛndāvana; mūla-dhana—wealth.

TRANSLATION

"Kṛṣṇa's lips are so sweet when combined with the camphor of His gentle smile that they attract the minds of all women, forcing them to give up all other attractions. If the sweetness of Kṛṣṇa's smile is unobtainable, great mental difficulties and lamentation result. That sweetness is the only wealth of the gopīs of Vṛndāvana."

Antya TEXT 15.24

eta kahi' gaurahari, dui-janāra kaṇṭha dhari', kahe,--'śuna, svarūpa-rāmarāya kāhān karoṇ, kāhān yāna, kāhān gele kṛṣṇa pāna, eta kahi'-saying this; gaurahari—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dui-janāra—of the two persons; kaṇṭha dhari'-catching the necks; kahe—said; śuna—please hear; svarūpa-rāma-rāya—Svarūpa Dāmodara and Rāmānanda Rāya; kāhān karoṇ—what shall I do; kāhān yāna—where shall I go; kāhān gele—going where; kṛṣṇa pāna—I can get Kṛṣṇa; duṇhe—both of you; more—unto Me; kaha—please say; se upāya—such a means.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

After speaking in this way, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu caught hold of the necks of Rāmānanda Rāya and Svarūpa Dāmodara. Then the Lord said, "My dear friends, please listen to Me. What shall I do? Where shall I go? Where can I go to get Kṛṣṇa? Please, both of you, tell Me how I can find Him."

Antya TEXT 15.25

ei-mata gaura-prabhu prati dine-dine vilāpa kareṇa svarūpa-rāmānanda-sane //CC Antya, 15.25//

SYNONYMS

ei-mata—in this way; gaura-prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; prati dine-dine—day after day; vilāpa kareṇa—laments; svarūpa-rāmānanda-sane—in the company of Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī and Rāmānanda Rāya.

TRANSLATION

Thus absorbed in transcendental pain, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu lamented day after day in the company of Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī and Rāmānanda Rāya.

Antya TEXT 15.26

sei dui-jana prabhure kare āśvāsana

svarūpa gāya, rāya kare śloka paṭhana //CC Antya, 15.26//

SYNONYMS

sei—those; dui-jana—two persons; prabhure—to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kare—do; āśvāsana—pacification; svarūpa gāya—Svarūpa Dāmodara sings; rāya—Rāmānanda Rāya; kare—does; śloka paṭhana—recitation of verses.

TRANSLATION

Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī would sing appropriate songs, and Rāmānanda Rāya would recite suitable verses to enhance the ecstatic mood of the Lord. In this way they were able to pacify Him.

Antya TEXT 15.27

karṇāmṛta, vidyāpati, śrī-gīta-govinda

ihāra śloka-gīte prabhura karāya ānanda //CC Antya, 15.27//

TRANSLATION

"My dear friend, the luster of Kṛṣṇa's body is more brilliant than a newly formed cloud, and His yellow dress is more attractive than newly arrived lightning. A peacock feather decorates His head, and on His neck hangs a lovely necklace of brilliant pearls. As He holds His charming flute to His lips, His face looks as beautiful as the full autumn moon. By such beauty, Madana-mohana, the enchanter of Cupid, is increasing the desire of my eyes to see Him."

PURPORT

This verse is also found in the Govinda-līlāmṛta (8.4).

Antya TEXT 15.64

nava-ghana-snigdha-varṇa, dalitāñjana-cikkaṇa, indīvara-nindi sukomala

jini' upamāna-gaṇa, hare sabāra netra-mana, kṛṣṇa-kānti parama prabala //CC Antya, 15.64//

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued: "Śrī Kṛṣṇa's complexion is as polished as powdered eye ointment. It surpasses the beauty of a newly formed cloud and is softer than a blue lotus flower. Indeed, His complexion is so pleasing that it attracts the eyes and mind of everyone, and it is so powerful that it defies all comparison.

Antya TEXT 15.65

kaha, sakhi, ki kari upāya?
kṛṣṇādbhuta balāhaka, mora netra-cātaka, nā dekhi' piyāse mari' yāya //CC Antya, 15.65//

SYNONYMS

kaha—please tell; sakhi—My dear friend; ki kari upāya—what shall I do; kṛṣṇa—Kṛṣṇa; adbhuta—wonderful; balāhaka—cloud; mora—My; netra—eyes; cātaka—like cātaka birds; nā dekhi'-without seeing; piyāse—from thirst; mari' yāya—are dying.

TRANSLATION

"My dear friend, please tell me what I should do. Kṛṣṇa is as attractive as a wonderful cloud, and My eyes are just like cātaka birds, which are dying of thirst because they do not see such a cloud.

Antya TEXT 15.66

saudāminī pītāmbara, sthira nahe nirantara, muktā-hāra baka-pānti bhāla indra-dhanu śikhi-pākhā, upare diyāche dekhā,

TRANSLATION

"Dear Kṛṣṇa, by seeing Your beautiful face decorated with tresses of hair, by seeing the beauty of Your earrings falling on Your cheeks, and by seeing the nectar of Your lips, the beauty of Your smiling glances, Your two arms, which assure complete fearlessness, and Your broad chest, whose beauty arouses conjugal attraction, we have simply surrendered ourselves to becoming Your maidservants.'

PURPORT

This verse quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.29.39) was spoken by the gopīs when they arrived before Kṛṣṇa for the rāsa dance.

Antya TEXT 15.71

kṛṣṇa jini' padma-cānda, pātiyāche mukha phānda,

TRANSLATION

"After conquering the moon and the lotus flower, Kṛṣṇa wished to capture the doelike gopīs. Thus He spread the noose of His beautiful face, and within that noose He placed the bait of His sweet smile to misguide the gopīs. The gopīs fell prey to that trap and became Kṛṣṇa's maidservants, giving up their homes, families, husbands and prestige.

Antya TEXT 15.72

bāndhava kṛṣṇa kare vyādhara ācāra

TRANSLATION

"On Kṛṣṇa's chest are the ornaments of Śrīvatsa and the mark indicating the residence of the goddess of fortune. His chest, which is as broad as a plunderer's, attracts thousands upon thousands of damsels of Vraja, conquering their minds and breasts by force. Thus they all become maidservants of the Supreme Personality of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

"The two very beautiful arms of Kṛṣṇa are just like long bolts. They also resemble the bodies of black snakes that enter the space between the two hill-like breasts of women and bite their hearts. The women then die from the burning poison.

PURPORT

In other words, the gopīs become very agitated by lusty desires; they are burning due to the poisonous bite inflicted by the black snakes of Kṛṣṇa's beautiful arms.

eka-bāra yāra sparśe, smara-jvālā-viṣa nāśe, yāra sparśe lubdha nārī-mana //CC Antya, 15.76//

SYNONYMS

kṛṣṇa—of Lord Kṛṣṇa; kara-pada-tala—the palms and the soles of the feet; koṭi-candra—millions upon millions of moons; su-śītala—cool and pleasing; jini'-surpassing; karpūra—camphor; veṇā-mūla—roots of khasakhasa; candana—sandalwood pulp; eka-bāra—once; yāra—of which; sparśe—by the touch; smara-jvālā—the burning effect of remembering; viṣa—the poison; nāśe—becomes vanquished; yāra—of which; sparśe—by the touch; lubdha—enticed; nārī-mana—the minds of women.

TRANSLATION

"The combined cooling effect of camphor, roots of khasakhasa and sandalwood is surpassed by the coolness of Kṛṣṇa's palms and the soles of His feet, which are cooler and more pleasing than millions upon millions of moons. If women are touched by them even once, their minds are enticed, and the burning poison of lusty desire for Kṛṣṇa is immediately vanquished."

TRANSLATION

"My dear friend, Kṛṣṇa's chest is as broad and attractive as a door made of indranīla gems, and His two arms, strong as bolts, can relieve the mental anguish of young girls distressed by lusty desires for Him. His body is cooler than the moon, sandalwood, the lotus flower and camphor. In this way, Madana-mohana, the attractor of Cupid, is increasing the desire of My breasts."

PURPORT

This verse is also found in the Govinda-līlāmṛta (8.7).

TRANSLATION

"Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is the topmost of all devotees. Sometimes, while walking on the beach, He would see a beautiful garden nearby and mistake it for the forest of Vṛndāvana. Thus He would be completely overwhelmed by ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa and begin to dance and chant the holy name. His tongue worked incessantly as He chanted, 'Kṛṣṇa! Kṛṣṇa!' Will He again become visible before the path of My eyes?"

PURPORT

This quotation is from the first Caitanyāṣṭaka, verse 6, in Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī's Stava-mālā.

Antya TEXT 15.98

caitanya-caritāmṛta kahe kṛṣṇadāsa //CC Antya, 15.99//

SYNONYMS

śrī-rūpa—Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī; raghunātha—Śrīla Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī; pade—at the lotus feet; yāra—whose; āśa—expectation; caitanya-caritāmṛta—the book named Caitanya-caritāmṛta; kahe—describes; kṛṣṇadāsa—Śrīla Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Fifteenth Chapter, describing Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastimes in the garden by the sea.

Chapter 16 Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu Tastes Nectar from the Lips of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa

The Sixteenth Chapter is summarized by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. When the Bengali devotees of the Lord returned to Jagannātha Purī, a gentleman named Kālidāsa who was an uncle of Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī went with them to see Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. Kālidāsa had tasted the remnants of food of all the Vaiṣṇavas in Bengal, even Jhaḍu Ṭhākura. Because of this, he received the shelter of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu at Jagannātha Purī.

When Kavi-karṇapūra was only seven years old, he was initiated by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu into the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra. He later became the greatest poet among the Vaiṣṇava ācāryas.

When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu ate the remnants of food known as vallabha-bhoga, He described the glories of such remnants of the Lord's food and then fed all the devotees the prasāda. Thus they all tasted adharāmṛta, the nectar from the lips of Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 16.1

vande śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanyam

kṛṣṇa-bhāvāmṛtaṁ hi yaḥ

āsvādyāsvādayan bhaktān

prema-dīkṣām aśikṣayat //CC Antya, 16.1//

SYNONYMS

vande—I offer my respectful obeisances; śrī-kṛṣṇa-caitanyam—unto Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kṛṣṇa-bhāva-amṛtam—the nectar of ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa; hi—certainly; yaḥ—He who; āsvādyā—tasting; āsvādayan—causing to taste; bhaktān—the devotees; prema—in love of Kṛṣṇa; dīkṣām—initiation; aśikṣayat—instructed.

TRANSLATION

Let me offer my respectful obeisances unto Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who personally tasted the nectar of ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa and then instructed His devotees how to taste it. Thus He enlightened them about ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa to initiate them into transcendental knowledge.

Antya TEXT 16.2

jaya jaya śrī-caitanya jaya nityānanda jayādvaita-candra jaya gaura-bhakta-vṛnda //CC Antya, 16.2//

TRANSLATION

All glories to Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu! All glories to Lord Nityānanda! All glories to Advaita Ācārya! And all glories to all the devotees of the Lord!

Antya TEXT 16.3

ei-mata mahāprabhu rahena nīlācale

bhakta-gaṇa-saṅge sadā prema-vihvale //CC Antya, 16.3// ei-mata—in this way; mahāprabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; rahena—stays; nīlācale—in Jagannātha Purī; bhakta-gaṇa-saṅge—in the association of devotees; sadā—always; prema-vihvale—merged in ecstatic love.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu thus stayed at Jagannātha Purī in the association of His devotees, always merged in ecstatic devotional love.

Antya TEXT 16.4

TRANSLATION

The next year, as usual, all the devotees from Bengal went to Jagannātha Purī, and, as in previous years, there was a meeting between Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and the devotees.

Antya TEXT 16.5

tāṇ-sabāra saṅge āila kālīdāsa nāma

kṛṣṇa-nāma vinā teṇho nāhi kahe āna //CC Antya, 16.5//

SYNONYMS

tāṇ-sabāra saṅge—with all of them; āila—came; kālī-dāsa nāma—a man named Kālīdāsa; kṛṣṇa-nāma—the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; vinā—besides; teṇho—he; nāhi—does not; kahe—say; āna—anything else.

TRANSLATION

Along with the devotees from Bengal came a gentleman named Kālīdāsa. He never uttered anything but the holy name of Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 16.6

mahā-bhāgavata teṇho sarala udāra

kṛṣṇa-nāma-'saṅkete' cālāya vyavahāra //CC Antya, 16.6//

SYNONYMS

mahā-bhāgavata—a highly advanced devotee; teṇho—he; sarala udāra—very simple and liberal; kṛṣṇa-nāma-saṅkete—with chanting of the holy name of Kṛṣṇa; cālāya—performs; vyavahāra—ordinary dealings.

TRANSLATION

Kālidāsa was a very advanced devotee, yet he was simple and liberal. He would chant the holy name of Kṛṣṇa while performing all his ordinary dealings.

Antya TEXT 16.7

kautukete teṇho yadi pāśaka khelāya

'hare kṛṣṇa' 'kṛṣṇa' kari' pāśaka cālāya //CC Antya, 16.7//

SYNONYMS

kautukete—in jest; teṇho—he; yadi—when; pāśaka khelāya—plays with dice; hare kṛṣṇa—the holy name of the Lord; kṛṣṇa—Kṛṣṇa; kari'-chanting; pāśaka cālāya—throws the dice.

TRANSLATION

When he used to throw dice in jest, he would throw the dice while chanting Hare Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

In this connection Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura warns the men of this age not to imitate the jesting of a mahā-bhāgavata like Kālidāsa. If someone imitates him by playing with dice or gambling while chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra, he will certainly become a victim of offenses unto the holy name. As it is said, hari-nāma-bale pāpe pravṛtti: one must not commit sinful activities on the strength of chanting the Hare Kṛṣṇa mantra. Playing with dice is certainly gambling, but it is clearly said here that Kālidāsa did this only in jest. A mahā-bhāgavata can do anything, but he never forgets the basic principles. Therefore it is said, vaiṣṇavera kriyā-mudrā vijñeha nā bujhaya: "No one can understand the activities of a pure devotee." We should not imitate Kālidāsa.

Antya TEXT 16.8

TRANSLATION

There was a great Vaiṣṇava named Jhaḍu Ṭhākura, who belonged to the bhūṇimāli caste. Kālidāsa went to his home, taking mangoes with him.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura remarks that both Kālidāsa and Jhaḍu Ṭhākura are worshiped at a place called Śrīpāṭabāṭī, in the village known as Bhedo or Bhaduyā. This village is situated about three miles south of the village of Kṛṣṇapura, the birthplace of Raghunātha dāsa Gosvāmī, which is about one mile west of the Byāṇḍel junction of the Burdwan line. A post office there is named Devānanda-pura. Jhaḍu Ṭhākura used to worship the Deity of Śrī Madana-gopāla. The Deity is still worshiped by one Rāmaprasāda dāsa, who belongs to the rāmāyet community. It is said that the Deity worshiped by Kālidāsa had been worshiped until now in the village of Śaṅkha on the bank of the Sarasvatī River, but the Deity has been taken away by a gentleman named Matilāla Caṭṭopādhyāya from the village of Trivenī. The Deity is now being worshiped at his place.

Antya TEXT 16.25

na me 'bhaktaś catur-vedī

mad-bhaktaḥ śva-pacaḥ priyaḥ

tasmai deyaṁ tato grāhyaṁ

sa ca pūjyo yathā hy aham //CC Antya, 16.25//

SYNONYMS

no—not; me—My; abhaktaḥ—devoid of pure devotional service; catuḥ-vedī—a scholar of the four Vedas; mat-bhaktaḥ—My devotee; śva-pacaḥ—even from a family of dog-eaters; priyaḥ—very dear; tasmai—to him (the pure devotee); deyaṁ—should be given; tataḥ—from him; grāhyaṁ—should be accepted (remnants of food); saḥ—that person; ca—also; pūjyaḥ—is worshipable; yathā—as much as; hi—certainly; aham—I.

TRANSLATION

"Even though one is a very learned scholar in Sanskrit literature, if he is not engaged in pure devotional service, he is not accepted as My devotee. But if someone born in a family of dog-eaters is a pure devotee with no motives for enjoyment through fruitive activity or mental speculation, he is very dear to Me. All respect should be given to him, and whatever he offers should be accepted, for such devotees are indeed as worshipable as I am.'

PURPORT

This verse spoken by the Supreme Personality of Godhead is found in Hari-bhakti-vilāsa.

manye tad-arpita-mano-vacanehitārthaprāṇam punāti sa kulam na tu bhūri-mānaḥ //CC Antya, 16.26//

SYNONYMS

viprāt—than a brāhmaṇa; dvi-ṣaḍ-guṇa-yutāt—who is qualified with twelve brahminical qualifications; aravinda-nābha—of Lord Viṣṇu, who has a lotuslike navel; pāda-aravinda—unto the lotus feet; vimukhāt—than a person bereft of devotion; śva-pacam—a caṇḍāla, or person accustomed to eating dogs; variṣṭham—more glorified; manye—I think; tat-arpita—dedicated unto Him; manaḥ—mind; vacana—words; īhita—activities; artha—wealth; prāṇam—life; punāti—purifies; saḥ—he; kulam—his family; na tu—but not; bhūri-mānaḥ—a brāhmaṇa proud of possessing such qualities.

TRANSLATION

"A person may be born in a brāhmaṇa family and have all twelve brahminical qualities, but if in spite of being qualified he is not devoted to the lotus feet of Lord Kṛṣṇa, who has a navel shaped like a lotus, he is not as good as a caṇḍāla who has dedicated his mind, words, activities, wealth and life to the service of the Lord. Simply to take birth in a brāhmaṇa family or to have brahminical qualities is not sufficient. One must become a pure devotee of the Lord. If a śva-paca or caṇḍāla is a devotee, he delivers not only himself but his whole family, whereas a brāhmaṇa who is not a devotee but simply has brahminical qualifications cannot even purify himself, not to speak of his family.'

PURPORT

This and the following verse are quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.9.10 and 3.33.7).

Antya TEXT 16.27

yaj-jihvāgre vartate nāma tubhyam

tepus tapas te juhuvuḥ sasnur āryā brahmānūcur nāma gṛṇanti ye te //CC Antya, 16.27//

SYNONYMS

aho bata—how wonderful it is; śva-pacaḥ—a dog-eater; ataḥ—than the initiated brāhmaṇa; garīyān—more glorious; yat—of whom; jihvā-agre—on the tip of the tongue; vartate—remains; nāma—the holy name; tubhyam—of You, my Lord; tepuḥ—have performed; tapaḥ—austerity; te—they; juhuvuḥ—have performed sacrifices; sasnuḥ—have bathed in all holy places; āryāḥ—actually belonging to the Āryan race; brahma—all the Vedas; anūcuḥ—have studied; nāma—the holy name; gṛṇanti—chant; ye—who; te—they.

TRANSLATION

"My dear Lord, anyone who always keeps Your holy name on his tongue is greater than an initiated brāhmaṇa. Although he may be born in a family of dog-eaters and therefore, by material calculations, be the lowest of men, he is glorious nevertheless. That is the wonderful power of chanting the holy name of the Lord. One who chants the holy name is understood to have performed all kinds of austerities. He has studied all the Vedas, he has performed all the great sacrifices mentioned in the Vedas, he has already taken his bath in all the holy places of pilgrimage, and it is he who is factually the Āryan.' SYNONYMS śuni'-hearing; ṭhākura kahe—Jhaḍu Ṭhākura said; śāstra—revealed scripture; ei—this; satya—truth; kaya—says; sei—he; śreṣṭha—best; aiche—in such a way; yānte—in whom; kṛṣṇa-bhakti—devotion to Kṛṣṇa; haya—there is.

TRANSLATION

Hearing these quotations from the revealed scripture Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Jhaḍu Ṭhākura replied, "Yes, this is true, for it is the version of śāstra. It is true, however, for one who is genuinely advanced in devotion to Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

āmi—I; nīca-jāti—belonging to a lower caste; āmāra—my; nāhi—there is not; kṛṣṇa-bhakti—devotion to Kṛṣṇa; anya—others; aiche haya—may be such; āmāya—unto me; nāhi—there is not; aiche śakti—such power.

TRANSLATION

"Such a position may befit others, but I do not possess such spiritual power. I belong to a lower class and have not even a pinch of devotion to Kṛṣṇa."

PURPORT

In his statement, Jhaḍu Ṭhākura presents himself as being born in a low-caste family and not having the qualifications of a bona fide devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa. He accepts the statements declaring a lowborn person highly exalted if he is a Vaiṣṇava. However, he feels that these descriptions from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam appropriately describe others, but not himself. Jhaḍu Ṭhākura's attitude is quite befitting a real Vaiṣṇava, for a Vaiṣṇava never considers himself exalted, even if he factually is. He is always meek and humble and never thinks that he is an advanced devotee. He assigns himself to a lower position, but that does not mean that he is indeed low. Sanātana Gosvāmī once said that he belonged to a low-caste family, for although he was born in a brāhmaṇa family, he had associated with mlecchas and yavanas in his service as a government minister. Similarly, Jhaḍu Ṭhākura presented himself as someone who belonged to a low caste, but he was actually elevated above many persons born in brāhmaṇa families. Not only is there evidence for this in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, as quoted by Kālidāsa in verses 26 and 27; there is also considerable evidence for this conclusion in other śāstras. For example, in the Mahābhārata, Vana-parva, Chapter 180, it is stated:

śūdre tu yad bhavel lakṣma

dvije tac ca na vidyate na vai śūdro bhavec chūdro

brāhmaṇo na ca brāhmaṇaḥ

"If the characteristics of a brāhmaṇa are found in a śūdra and not in a brāhmaṇa, that śūdra should not be known as a śūdra, and that brāhmaṇa should not be known as a brāhmaṇa."

Similarly, in the Vana-parva, Chapter 211, it is said:

śūdra-yonau hi jātasya sad-guṇānupatiṣṭhataḥ

ārjave vartamānasya

brāhmaṇyam abhijāyate

"If a person born in a śūdra family has developed the qualities of a brāhmaṇa, such as satya [truthfulness], śama [peacefulness], dama [self-control] and ārjava [simplicity], he attains the exalted position of a brāhmaṇa."

In the Anuśāsana-parva, Chapter 163, it is said:

sthito brāhmaṇa-dharmeṇa

brāhmaṇyam upajīvati

kṣatriyo vātha vaiśyo vā

brahma-bhūyaḥ sa gacchati

ebhis tu karmabhir devi

śubhair ācaritais tathā śūdro brāhmaṇatām yāti vaiśyaḥ kṣatriyatām vrajet na yonir nāpi saṁskāro na śrutam na ca santatiḥ kāraṇāni dvijatvasya vṛttam eva tu kāraṇam

"If one is factually situated in the occupation of a brāhmaṇa, he must be considered a brāhmaṇa, even if born of a kṣatriya or vaiśya family.

"O Devī, if even a śūdra is actually engaged in the occupation and pure behavior of a brāhmaṇa, he becomes a brāhmaṇa. Moreover, a vaiśya can become a kṣatriya.

"Therefore, neither the source of one's birth, nor his reformation, nor his education is the criterion of a brāhmaṇa. The vṛtta, or occupation, is the real standard by which one is known as a brāhmaṇa."

We have seen that a person who is not the son of a doctor and has not attended a medical college is sometimes able to practice medicine. By practical knowledge of how to perform a surgical operation, how to mix medicine and how to give certain medicines for certain diseases, a person can receive a certificate and be registered as a medical practitioner in the practical field. He can do a medical man's work and be known as a doctor. Although qualified medical men may consider him a quack, the government will recognize his work. Especially in India, there are many such doctors who perform their medical services perfectly. They are accepted even by the government. Similarly, if one is engaged in brahminical service or occupational duties, he must be considered a brāhmaṇa despite the family in which he is born. That is the verdict of all the śāstras.

In the Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (7.11.35), it is said:

yasya yal lakṣaṇam proktam pumso varṇābhivyañjakam yad anyatrāpi dṛśyeta

tat tenaiva vinirdiśet

This is a statement by Nārada Muni to Mahārāja Yudhiṣṭhira, wherein Nārada says that the symptoms of a brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya and vaiśya are all described in śāstra. Therefore, if one is found exhibiting the symptoms and qualities of a brāhmaṇa and serving in a brahminical occupation, even if he is not born a brāhmaṇa or kṣatriya, he should be considered according to his qualifications and occupation.

Similarly, in the Padma purāṇa it is said:

na śūdrā bhagavad-bhaktās te tu bhāgavatā matāḥ

sarva-varṇeṣu te śūdrā

ye na bhaktā janārdane

"A devotee should never be considered a śūdra. All the devotees of the Supreme Personality of Godhead should be recognized as bhāgavatas. If one is not a devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa, however, even if born of a brāhmaṇa, kṣatriya or vaiśya family, he should be considered a śūdra."

In the Padma Purāṇa it is also said:

śva-pākam iva nekṣeta

loke vipram avaiṣṇavam

vaiṣṇavo varṇo-bāhyo 'pi

punāti bhuvana-trayam

"If a person born in a brāhmaṇa family is an avaiṣṇava, a nondevotee, one should not see his face, exactly as one should not look upon the face of a caṇḍāla, or dog-eater. However, a vaiṣṇava found in varṇas other than brāhmaṇa can purify all the three worlds."

The Padma Purāṇa further says:

śūdraṁ vā bhagavad-bhaktaṁ

niṣādaṁ śva-pacaṁ tathā

vīkṣate jāti-sāmānyāt

sa yāti narakaṁ dhruvam

"One who considers a devotee of the Supreme Personality of Godhead who was born in a family of śūdras, niṣādas or caṇḍālas to belong to that particular caste certainly goes to hell."

A brāhmaṇa must be a Vaiṣṇava and a learned scholar. Therefore in India it is customary to address a brāhmaṇa as paṇḍita. Without knowledge of Brahman, one cannot understand the Supreme Personality of Godhead. Therefore a Vaiṣṇava is already a brāhmaṇa, whereas a brāhmaṇa may become a Vaiṣṇava. In the Garuḍa Purāṇa it is said:

bhaktir aṣṭa-vidhā hy eṣā

yasmin mlecche 'pi vartate

sa viprendro muni-śreṣṭhaḥ

sa jñānī sa ca paṇḍitaḥ

"If even a mleccha becomes a devotee, he is to be considered the best of the brāhmaṇas and a learned paṇḍita."

Similarly, Tattva-sāgara says:

yathā kāñcanatām yāti

kāṁsyaṁ rasa-vidhānataḥ

tathā dīkṣā-vidhānena

dvijatvaṁ jāyate nṛṇāṁ

"As bell metal is turned to gold when mixed with mercury in an alchemical process, so one who is properly trained and initiated by a bona fide spiritual master becomes a brāhmaṇa immediately." All this evidence found in the revealed scriptures proves that according to the Vedic version, a Vaiṣṇava is never to be considered an a-brāhmaṇa, or non-brāhmaṇa. A Vaiṣṇava should not be thought to belong to a lower caste even if born in a mleccha or yavana family. Because he has become a devotee of Lord Kṛṣṇa, he has become purified and has attained the stage of brāhmaṇa (dvijatvaṁ jāyate nṛṇāṁ).

TRANSLATION

The Lord said again and again, "Only by great fortune may one come by a particle of the remnants of food offered to the Lord." The servants of the Jagannātha temple inquired, "What is the meaning of this?"

PURPORT

The remnants of Kṛṣṇa's food are mixed with His saliva. In the Mahābhārata and the Skanda Purāṇa it is stated:

mahā-prasāde govinde

nāma-brahmaṇi vaiṣṇave

svalpa-puṇyavatām rājan

viśvāso naiva jāyate

"Persons who are not very highly elevated in pious activities cannot believe in the remnants of food [prasāda] of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, nor in Govinda, the holy name of the Lord, nor in the Vaiṣṇavas."

Antya TEXT 16.97

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, "These ingredients, such as sugar, camphor, black pepper, cardamom, cloves, butter, spices and licorice, are all material. Everyone has tasted these material substances before.

PURPORT

The word prākṛta refers to things tasted for the sense gratification of the conditioned soul. Such things are limited by the material laws. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu wanted to make the point that material things have already been experienced by materially absorbed persons who are interested only in sense gratification.

Antya TEXT 16.110

TRANSLATION

"Therefore, it is to be understood that the spiritual nectar of Kṛṣṇa's lips has touched these ordinary ingredients and transferred to them all their spiritual qualities.

PURPORT

Since everyone had previously tasted these ingredients, why had they become extraordinary and spiritually tasteful? This was proof that food, prasāda, becomes uncommonly flavorful and tasteful by touching Kṛṣṇa's lips.

Antya TEXT 16.113

surata-vardhanam—which increases the lusty desire for enjoyment; śoka-nāśanam—which vanquishes all lamentation; svarita-veṇunā—by the vibrating flute; suṣṭhu—nicely; cumbitam—touched; itara-rāga-vismāraṇam—which causes forgetfulness of all other attachment; nṛṇām—of the human beings; vitara—please deliver; vīra—O hero of charity; naḥ—unto us; te—Your; adhara-amṛtam—the nectar of the lips.

TRANSLATION

"O hero of charity, please deliver unto us the nectar of Your lips. That nectar increases lusty desires for enjoyment and diminishes lamentation in the material world. Kindly give us the nectar of Your lips, which are touched by Your transcendently vibrating flute, for that nectar makes all human beings forget all other attachments."

PURPORT

This is a quotation from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.31.14).

Antya TEXT 16.118

śloka śuni' mahāprabhu mahā-tuṣṭa hailā

TRANSLATION

"My dear friend, the all-surpassing nectar from the lips of the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, can be obtained only after many, many pious activities. For the beautiful gopīs of Vṛndāvana, that nectar vanquishes the desire for all other tastes. Madana-mohana always chews pan that surpasses the nectar of heaven. He is certainly increasing the desires of My tongue."

PURPORT

This verse is found in the Govinda-līlāmṛta (8.8).

TRANSLATION

"My dear lover," He said, "let Me describe some of the characteristics of Your transcendental lips. They agitate the mind and body of everyone, they increase lusty desires for enjoyment, they destroy the burden of material happiness and lamentation, and they make one forget all material tastes. The whole world falls under their control. They vanquish shame, religion and patience, especially in women. Indeed, they inspire madness in the minds of all women. Your lips increase the greed of the tongue and thus attract it. Considering all this, we see that the activities of Your transcendental lips are always perplexing.

SYNONYMS

āchuka—let it be; nārīra—of women; kāya—the bodies; kahite—to speak; vāsiye—I feel; lāja—shame; tomāra—Your; adhara—lips; baḍa—very much; dhr̥ṣṭa-rāya—impudent; puruṣe—the male; kare ākarṣaṇa—they attract; āpanā—themselves; piyāite—causing to drink; mana—mind; anya-rasa—other tastes; saba—all; pāsarāya—cause to forget.

TRANSLATION

"My dear Kṛṣṇa, since You are a male, it is not very extraordinary that the attraction of Your lips can disturb the minds of women. I am ashamed to say this, but Your lips sometimes attract even Your flute, which is also considered a male. It likes to drink the nectar of Your lips, and thus it also forgets all other tastes.

Antya TEXT 16.124

SYNONYMS

sa-cetana—conscious living beings; rahu dūre—leave aside; acetana—unconscious; sa-cetana—conscious; kare—make; tomāra—Your; adhara—lips; baḍa—very great; vājikara—magicians; tomāra—Your; veṇu—flute; śuṣka-in-dhana—dry wood; tāra—of that; janmāya—creates; indriya-mana—the senses and mind; tāre—the flute; āpanā—themselves; piyāya—cause to drink; nirantara—constantly.

TRANSLATION

"Aside from conscious living beings, even unconscious matter is sometimes made conscious by Your lips. Therefore, Your lips are great magicians. Paradoxically, although Your flute is nothing but dry wood, Your lips make it drink their nectar. They create a mind and senses in the dry wooden flute and give it transcendental bliss.

TRANSLATION

"Thereupon, the flute said angrily to Me, 'Give up Your shame, fear and religion and come drink the lips of Kṛṣṇa. On that condition, I shall give up my attachment for them. If You do not give up Your shame and fear, however, I shall continuously drink the nectar of Kṛṣṇa's lips. I am slightly fearful because You also have the right to drink that nectar, but as for the others, I consider them like straw.'

TRANSLATION

"The nectar of Your lips and vibration of Your flute join together to loosen our belts and induce us to give up shame and religion, even before our superiors. As if catching us by our hair, they forcibly take us away and surrender us unto You to become Your maidservants. Hearing of these incidents, people laugh at us. We have thus become completely subordinate to the flute.

Antya TEXT 16.129

haya—become; amṛta-samāna—like nectar; nāma—the name; tāra—of those;
haya—becomes; kṛṣṇa-phelā—the remnants of Kṛṣṇa.

TRANSLATION

"That is the policy of these lips. Just consider the other injustices. Everything that touches those lips-including food, drink or betel-becomes just like nectar. It is then called kṛṣṇa-phelā, or remnants left by Kṛṣṇa.

Antya TEXT 16.131

tabe—then; sukṛti—one who performs pious activities; nāma—the name; dhare —bears; se—those; sukṛte—by pious activities; tāra—of that; lava—a fraction;
pāya—one can get.

TRANSLATION

"Even after much prayer, the demigods themselves cannot obtain even a small portion of the remnants of such food. Just imagine the pride of those remnants!
Only a person who has acted piously for many, many births and has thus become a devotee can obtain the remnants of such food.

SYNONYMS

e-saba—all these; tomāra—Your; kuṭināṭi—tricks; chāḍa—give up; ei—these; paripāṭī—very expert activities; veṇu-dvāre—by the flute; kānhe—why; hara—You take away; prāṇa—life; āpanāra—Your own; hāsi—laughing; lāgi'-for the matter of; naha—do not be; nārīra—of women; vadha-bhāgī—responsible for killing; deha'-kindly give; nija-adhara-amṛta—the nectar of Your lips; dāna—charity.

TRANSLATION

"Therefore, My dear Kṛṣṇa, please give up all the tricks You have set up so expertly. Do not try to kill the life of the gopīs with the vibration of Your flute. Because of Your joking and laughing, You are becoming responsible for the killing of women. It would be better for You to satisfy us by giving us the charity of the nectar of Your lips."

SYNONYMS

gopyaḥ—O gopīs; kim—what; ācarat—performed; ayam—this; kuśalam—auspicious activities; sma—certainly; veṇuḥ—flute; dāmodara—of Kṛṣṇa; adhara-sudhām—the nectar of the lips; api—even; gopikānām—which is owed to the gopīs; bhunkte—enjoys; svayam—independently; yat—from which; avaśiṣṭa—remaining; rasam—the taste only; hradinyaḥ—the rivers; hr̥ṣyat—feeling jubilant; tvacaḥ—whose bodies; aśru—tears; mumucuḥ—shed; taravaḥ—the trees; yathā—exactly like; āryāḥ—old forefathers.

TRANSLATION

"My dear gopīs, what auspicious activities must the flute have performed to enjoy the nectar of Kṛṣṇa's lips independently and leave only a taste for the gopīs for whom that nectar is actually meant. The forefathers of the flute, the bamboo trees, shed tears of pleasure. His mother, the river, on whose bank the bamboo was born, feels jubilation, and therefore her blooming lotus flowers are standing like hair on her body."

PURPORT

This is a verse quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.21.9) regarding a discussion the gopīs had among themselves. As the autumn season began in Vṛndāvana, Lord Kṛṣṇa was tending the cows and blowing on His flute. The gopīs then began to praise Kṛṣṇa and discuss the fortunate position of His flute.

TRANSLATION

" 'Although the nectar of Kṛṣṇa's lips is the absolute property of the gopīs, the flute, which is just an insignificant stick, is forcibly drinking that nectar and loudly inviting the gopīs to come drink it also. Just imagine the strength of the flute's austerities and good fortune. Even great devotees drink the nectar of Kṛṣṇa's lips after the flute has done so.

TRANSLATION

Expecting the mercy of Svarūpa, Rūpa, Sanātana and Raghunātha dāsa, and taking their lotus feet on my head, I, the most fallen Kṛṣṇadāsa, continue chanting the epic Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, which is sweeter than the nectar of transcendental bliss.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Sixteenth Chapter, describing the nectar flowing from Śrī Kṛṣṇa's lotus lips.

Chapter 17 The Bodily Transformations of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu

Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura gives the following summary of this Seventeenth Chapter in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. Absorbed in transcendental ecstasy, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu went out one night without opening the doors to His room. After crossing over three walls, He fell down among some cows belonging to the district of Tailāṅga. There He remained unconscious, assuming the aspect of a tortoise.

TRANSLATION

" 'My dear Lord Kṛṣṇa, where is that woman within the three worlds who cannot be captivated by the rhythms of the sweet songs coming from Your wonderful flute? Who cannot fall down from the path of chastity in this way? Your beauty is the most sublime within the three worlds. Upon seeing Your beauty, even cows, birds, animals and trees in the forest are stunned in jubilation.'

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.29.40).

Antya TEXT 17.32

ebe āmāya kari' roṣa, kahi' pati-tyāge 'doṣa', dhārmika hañā dharma śikhāya! //CC Antya, 17.36//

SYNONYMS

dharma—religious principles; chāḍāya—induces to reject; veṇu-dvāre—through the flute; hāne—pierces; kaṭākṣa—glancing; kāma-śare—by the arrows of lust; lajjā—shame; bhaya—fear; sakala—all; chāḍāya—induces to give up; ebe—now; āmāya—at us; kari' roṣa—becoming angry; kahi'-saying; pati-tyāge—to give up one's husband; doṣa—fault; dhārmika—very religious; hañā—becoming; dharma—religious principles; śikhāya—You teach.

TRANSLATION

" 'The vibration of Your flute, accompanied by Your glance, which pierces us forcibly with the arrows of lust, induces us to ignore the regulative principles of religious life. Thus we become excited by lusty desires and come to You, giving up all shame and fear. But now You are angry with us. You are finding fault with our violating religious principles and leaving our homes and husbands. And as You instruct us about religious principles, we become helpless.

SYNONYMS

nadat—resounding; jalada—the cloud; nisvanaḥ—whose voice; śravaṇa—the ears; karṣi—attracting; sat-śiñjitaḥ—the tinkling of whose ornaments; sa-narma—with deep meaning; rasa-sūcaka—joking; akṣara—letters; pada-artha—meanings; bhaṅgi—indications; uktikaḥ—whose talk; ramā-ādika—beginning with the goddess of fortune; vara-aṅganā—of beautiful women; hṛdaya-hāri—attracting the hearts; vaṁśī-kalaḥ—the sound of whose flute; saḥ—that; me—My; madana-mohanaḥ—Madana-mohana; sakhi—My dear friend; tanoti—expands; karṇa-sprhām—the desire of the ears.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu continued, "My dear friend, the Supreme Personality of Godhead, Kṛṣṇa, has a voice as deep as a cloud resounding in the sky. With the tinkling of His ornaments, He attracts the ears of the gopīs, and with the sound of His flute He attracts even the goddess of fortune and other beautiful women. That Personality of Godhead, known as Madana-mohana, whose joking words carry many indications and deep meanings, is increasing the lusty desires of My ears.'

PURPORT

This verse is found in the Govinda-līlāmṛta (8.5).

Antya TEXT 17.41

"kaṇṭhera gambhīra dhvani, navaghana-dhvani jini', kaṇṭhera—of the throat; gambhīra—deep; dhvani—sound; nava-ghana—of new clouds; dhvani—the resounding; jini'-conquering; yāra—of which; guṇe—the attributes; kokila—the cuckoo; lājāya—put to shame; tāra—of that; eka—one; śruti-kaṇe—particle of sound; ḍubāya—inundates; jagatera—of the whole world; kāṇe—the ear; punaḥ—again; kāṇa—the ear; bāhuḍi'-getting out; nā āya—cannot come.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"Kṛṣṇa's deep voice is more resonant than newly arrived clouds, and His sweet song defeats even the sweet voice of the cuckoo. Indeed, His song is so sweet that even one particle of its sound can inundate the entire world. If such a particle enters one's ear, one is immediately bereft of all other types of hearing.

SYNONYMS

se—that; śrī—beautiful; mukha—by the mouth; bhāṣita—spoken; amṛta—nectar; haite—than; para-amṛta—more nectarean; smita—smiling; karpūra—camphor; tāhāte—in that; miśrita—mixed; śabda—sound; artha—meaning; dui-śakti—two energies; nānā—various; rasa—mellows; kare vyakti—express; prati-akṣara—every word; narma-vibhūṣita—full of meaning.

TRANSLATION

"Kṛṣṇa's speech is far sweeter than nectar. Each of His jubilant words is full of meaning, and when His speech mixes with His smile, which is like camphor, the resultant sound and the deep meaning of Kṛṣṇa's words create various transcendental mellows.

Antya TEXT 17.45

SYNONYMS

se amṛtera—of that nectar; eka-kaṇa—one particle; kaṇa-cakora—of the ear, which is like a cakora bird; jīvana—the life; kaṇa—the ear; cakora—the cakora bird; jīye—lives; sei āśe—with that hope; bhāgya-vaśe—by good fortune; kabhu—sometimes; pāya—gets; abhāgye—by misfortune; kabhu—sometimes; nā pāya—does not get; nā pāile—if does not get; maraye—dies; piyāse—from thirst.

TRANSLATION

"One particle of that transcendental, blissful nectar is the life and soul of the ear, which is like a cakora bird that lives in hope of tasting that nectar. Sometimes, by good fortune, the bird can taste it, but at other times he unfortunately cannot and therefore almost dies of thirst.

SYNONYMS

yebā—whoever; veṇu—of the flute; kala-dhvani—the sweet vibration; eka-bāra—once; tāhā—that; śuni'-hearing; jagat—of the universe; nārī—of the women;

citta—hearts; āulāya—become disturbed; nīvi-bandha—the fastened belts; paḍe—fall; khaṣi'-becoming loosened; vinā-mūle—without a price; haya—they become; dāsī—maidservants; bāulī—mad; hañā—becoming; kṛṣṇa-pāśe—after Kṛṣṇa; dhāya—run.

TRANSLATION

"The transcendental vibration of Kṛṣṇa's flute disturbs the hearts of women all over the world, even if they hear it only once. Thus their fastened belts become loose, and these women become the unpaid maidservants of Kṛṣṇa. Indeed, they run toward Kṛṣṇa exactly like madwomen.

—for Kṛṣṇa; tṛṣṇā—thirst; ciram—at every moment; bata—alas; lambate—is increasing.

TRANSLATION

Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu said, " 'Alas, what shall I do? To whom shall I speak? Let whatever I have done in hopes of meeting Kṛṣṇa be finished now. Please say something auspicious, but do not speak about Kṛṣṇa. Alas, Kṛṣṇa is lying within My heart like Cupid; therefore how can I possibly give up talking of Him? I cannot forget Kṛṣṇa, whose smile is sweeter than sweetness itself and who gives pleasure to My mind and eyes. Alas, My great thirst for Kṛṣṇa is increasing moment by moment!'

PURPORT

This statement by Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī is quoted from Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta (42).

Antya TEXT 17.52

TRANSLATION

Suddenly, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu became calm and considered His state of mind. He remembered the words of Piṅgalā, and this aroused an ecstasy that moved Him to speak. Thus He explained the meaning of the verse.

PURPORT

Piṅgalā was a prostitute who said, "To hope against hope produces only misery.

Utter hopelessness is the greatest happiness." Remembering this statement, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu became ecstatic. The story of Piṅgalā is found in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Eleventh Canto, Eighth Chapter, verses 22-44, as well as in Mahābhārata, Sānti-parva, Chapter 174.

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Seventeenth Chapter, describing Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastime of retracting His limbs like a tortoise.

Chapter 18 Rescuing the Lord from the Sea

A summary of the Eighteenth Chapter is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. On an autumn evening when the moon was full, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu walked along the seashore near the Āiṭoṭā temple. Mistaking the sea for the Yamunā River, He jumped into it, hoping to see the water pastimes of Kṛṣṇa and Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī and the other gopīs. As He floated in the sea, however, He was washed away to the Koṇārka temple, where a fisherman, thinking that the Lord's body was a big fish, caught Him in his net and brought Him ashore. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was unconscious, and His body had become unusually transformed. As soon as the fisherman touched the Lord's body, he became mad in ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa. His own madness frightened him, however, because he thought that he was being haunted by a ghost. As he was about to seek a ghost charmer, he met Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī and the other devotees on the beach, who had been looking everywhere for the Lord. After some inquiries, Svarūpa Dāmodara could understand that the fisherman had caught Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in his net. Since the fisherman was afraid of being haunted by a ghost, Svarūpa Dāmodara gave him a slap and chanted Hare Kṛṣṇa, which immediately pacified him. Thereafter, when the devotees chanted the Hare Kṛṣṇa mahā-mantra loudly, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu came to His external consciousness. Then they brought Him back to His own residence.

TRANSLATION

In the brilliant autumn moonlight, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu mistook the sea for the River Yamunā. Greatly afflicted by separation from Kṛṣṇa, He ran and dove into the sea and remained unconscious in the water the entire night. In the morning, He was found by His personal devotees. May that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, the son of mother Śacī, protect us by His transcendental pastimes.

TRANSLATION

Even Lord Kṛṣṇa is struck with wonder at seeing the transformations of ecstasy in His devotees. If Kṛṣṇa Himself cannot estimate the limits of such emotions, how could others?

Antya TEXTS 18.16-17

bhakta-premāra yata daśā, ye gati prakāra

yata duḥkha, yata sukha, yateka vikāra kṛṣṇa tāhā samyak nā pāre jānite

TRANSLATION

"As an independent leader among elephants enters the water with its female elephants, Kṛṣṇa, who is transcendental to the Vedic principles of morality, entered the water of the Yamunā with the gopīs. His chest had brushed against their breasts, crushing His flower garland and coloring it with red kuṅkuma powder. Attracted by the fragrance of that garland, humming bumblebees followed Kṛṣṇa like celestial beings of Gandharvaloka. In this way, Lord Kṛṣṇa mitigated the fatigue of the rāsa dance."

PURPORT

This verse is from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.33.22).

Antya TEXT 18.26

ei-mata mahāprabhu bhramite bhramite

SYNONYMS

padma-utpala—the blue and red lotus flowers; acetana—unconscious; cakravāka—the cakravāka birds; sa-cetana—conscious; cakravāke—the cakravāka birds; padma—the blue lotus flowers; āsvādaya—taste; ihāñ—here; duñhāra—of both of them; ultā sthiti—the reverse situation; dharma—characteristic nature; haila—became; viparīti—reversed; kṛṣṇera—of Lord Kṛṣṇa; rājye—in the kingdom; aiche—such; nyāya—principle; haya—there is.

TRANSLATION

"Blue and red lotus flowers are unconscious objects, whereas cakravākas are conscious and alive. Nevertheless, in ecstatic love, the blue lotuses began to taste the cakravākas. This is a reversal of their natural behavior, but in Lord Kṛṣṇa's kingdom such reversals are a principle of His pastimes.

PURPORT

Generally the cakravāka bird tastes the lotus flower, but in Kṛṣṇa's pastimes the lotus, which is usually lifeless, tastes the cakravāka bird.

aparicita śatrura mitra, rākhe utpala,--e baḍa citra, ei baḍa 'virodha-alāṅkāra' //CC Antya, 18.98//

SYNONYMS

mitrera—of the sun-god; mitra—the friend; saha-vāsī—living together with the cakravāka birds; cakravāke—the cakravāka birds; luṭe—plunder; āsi'-coming; kṛṣṇera rājye—in the kingdom of Kṛṣṇa; aiche—such; vyavahāra—behavior; aparicita—unacquainted; śatrura mitra—the friend of the enemy; rākhe—protects; utpala—the red lotus flower; e—this; baḍa citra—very wonderful; ei—this; baḍa—great; virodha-alāṅkāra—metaphor of contradiction.

TRANSLATION

"The blue lotuses are friends of the sun-god, and though they all live together, the blue lotuses plunder the cakravākas. The red lotuses, however, blossom at night and are therefore strangers or enemies to the cakravākas. Yet in Kṛṣṇa's pastimes the red lotuses, which are the hands of the gopīs, protect their cakravāka breasts. This is a metaphor of contradiction."

PURPORT

Because the blue lotus flower blossoms with the rising of the sun, the sun is the friend of the blue lotus. The cakravāka birds also appear when the sun rises, and therefore the cakravākas and blue lotuses meet. Although the blue lotus is a friend of the sun, in Kṛṣṇa's pastimes it nevertheless plunders their mutual friend the cakravāka. Normally, cakravākas move about whereas lotuses stand still, but herein Kṛṣṇa's hands, which are compared to blue lotuses, attack the breasts of the gopīs, which are compared to cakravākas. This is called a reverse analogy. At night the red lotus blossoms, whereas in sunlight it closes. Therefore the red lotus is an enemy to the sun and is unknown to the sun's friend the cakravāka. The gopīs' breasts, however, are compared to cakravākas and their hands to red lotuses protecting them. This is a wonderful instance of reverse analogy.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Eighteenth Chapter, describing Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's falling into the water of the sea.

Chapter 19 The Inconceivable Behavior of Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu

The following summary of Chapter Nineteen is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya.

Every year, Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu asked Jagadānanda Paṇḍita to visit His mother in Navadvīpa with gifts of cloth and prasāda. After one such visit, Jagadānanda Paṇḍita returned to Purī with a sonnet that Advaita Ācārya had written. When Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu read it, His ecstasy was so great that all the devotees feared that the Lord would very soon pass away. The Lord's condition was so serious that at night He would bruise and bloody His face by rubbing it against the walls. To stop this, Svarūpa Dāmodara asked Śaṅkara paṇḍita to stay at night in the same room with the Lord.

This chapter further describes how Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu entered the Jagannātha-vallabha garden during the full-moon night of Vaiśākha (April-May) and experienced various transcendental ecstasies. Overwhelmed with ecstatic love at suddenly seeing Lord Śrī Kṛṣṇa beneath an aśoka tree, He exhibited various symptoms of spiritual madness.

kāhān—where; se—that; cūḍāra ṭhāma—beauty of the helmet; śikhi-piñchera uḍāna—upon which there is a peacock feather; nava-meghe—in a new cloud; yena—just like; indra-dhanu—the rainbow; pīta-ambara—yellow garments; taḍit-dyuti—like the illumination of lightning; muktā-mālā—pearl necklace; baka-pānti—like rows of ducks; nava-ambuda—a new rain cloud; jini'-conquering; śyāma-tanu—the blackish body.

TRANSLATION

"My dear friend, where is that beautiful helmet with a peacock feather upon it like a rainbow upon a new cloud? Where are those yellow garments, shining like lightning? And where is that necklace of pearls that resemble flocks of ducks flying in the sky? The blackish body of Kṛṣṇa triumphs over the new blackish rain cloud.

nārī-mane paīśe hāya, yatne nāhi bāhirāya,

tanu nahe,--seyā-kulera kāñṭā //CC Antya, 19.40//

SYNONYMS

eka-bāra—once; yāra—whose; nayane—eyes; lāge—capture; sadā—always; tāra—his; hṛdaye—in the heart; jāge—remains prominent; kṛṣṇa-tanu—the body of Kṛṣṇa; yena—like; āmra-āṭhā—the sap of the mango tree; nārī-mane—in the minds of women; paīśe—enters; hāya—alas; yatne—even with great endeavor; nāhi—does not; bāhirāya—come out; tanu nahe—is not an ordinary body; seyā-kulera kāñṭā—it is like the thorn of the seyā berry tree.

TRANSLATION

"If a person's eyes even once capture that beautiful body of Kṛṣṇa's, it remains always prominent within his heart. Kṛṣṇa's body resembles the sap of the mango tree, for when it enters the minds of women, it will not come out, despite great endeavor. Thus Kṛṣṇa's extraordinary body is like a thorn of the seyā berry tree.

se kāntite jagat mātāya

śṛṅgāra-rasa-sāra chāni', tāte candra-jyotsnā sāni', jāni vidhi niramilā tāya //CC Antya, 19.41//

SYNONYMS

jiniyā—being victorious over; tamāla-dyuti—the luster of the tamāla tree; indranīla—the gem known as indranīla; sama kānti—the luster like; se kāntite—by that luster; jagat mātāya—the whole world becomes maddened; śṛṅgāra-rasa—of the mellow of conjugal love; sāra—essence; chāni'-filtering; tāte—in that; candra-jyotsnā—the illumination of the full moon; sāni'-mixing; jāni—I know; vidhi—Providence; niramilā—made very clear; tāya—that.

TRANSLATION

"Kṛṣṇa's bodily luster shines like the indranīla gem and surpasses the luster of the tamāla tree. The luster of His body drives the entire world mad because Providence has made it transparent by refining the essence of the mellow of conjugal love and mixing it with moonshine.

SYNONYMS

aho—alas; vidhātaḥ—O Providence; tava—your; na—not; kvacit—at any time; dayā—mercy; saṁyojya—making connections; maitryā—by friendship; praṇayena—and by affection; dehinaḥ—of the embodied souls; tān—them; ca—and; akṛta-arthān—without achievement; viyunaṅkṣi—you cause to happen; apārthakam—separation; viceṣṭitam—activities; te—your; arbhaka—of a boy; ceṣṭitam—the childish play; yathā—like.

TRANSLATION

" 'O Providence, you have no mercy! You bring embodied souls together through friendship and affection, but before their desires are fulfilled, you separate them. Your activities are like the foolish pranks of children.'

PURPORT

This verse, quoted from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam (10.39.19), was chanted by the damsels of Vraja when Kṛṣṇa left Vṛndāvana for Mathurā with Akrūra and Balarāma. The gopīs lamented that providence had made it possible for them to meet Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma in affection and love and had then separated them.

SYNONYMS

nā jānis—you do not know; prema-marma—the purport of loving affairs; vyartha karis—you baffle; pariśrama—all labor; tora ceṣṭā—your activities; bālaka-samāna—like the childish activities of a boy; tora yadi lāg pāiye—if I get the opportunity to meet you; tabe—then; tore—unto you; śikṣā diye—I shall give some lessons; emana—like this; yena—so that; nā karis vidhāna—will not make arrangements.

TRANSLATION

"Providence, you do not know the purport of loving affairs, and therefore you baffle all our endeavors. This is very childish of you. If we could catch you, we would give you such a lesson that you would never again make such arrangements.

Antya TEXT 19.47

netra-mana lobhāilā mora

kṣaṇeke karite pāna, kāḍi' nilā anya sthāna, pāpa kaili 'datta-apahāra' //CC Antya, 19.48// are—oh; vidhi—Providence; akarūṇa—most unkind; dekhāñā—showing; kṛṣṇānana—the beautiful face of Kṛṣṇa; netra-mana—mind and eyes; lobhāilā—have made greedy; mora—My; kṣaṇeke karite pāna—drinking only for a moment; kāḍi' nilā—took it away; anya sthāna—to another place; pāpa kaili—have performed a most sinful act; datta-apahāra—taking back things given in charity.

SYNONYMS

TRANSLATION

"O Providence, you are so unkind! You reveal the beautiful face of Kṛṣṇa and make the mind and eyes greedy, but after they have drunk that nectar for only a moment, you whisk Kṛṣṇa away to another place. This is a great sin because you thus take away what you have given as charity.

Antya TEXT 19.49

TRANSLATION

" 'The scent of Kṛṣṇa's transcendental body surpasses the aroma of musk and attracts the minds of all women. The eight lotuslike parts of His body distribute the fragrance of lotuses mixed with that of camphor. His body is anointed with aromatic substances like musk, camphor, sandalwood and aguru. O My dear friend, that Personality of Godhead, also known as the enchanter of Cupid, always increases the desire of My nostrils.'

PURPORT

This is a verse found in Govinda-līlāmṛta (8.6).

Antya TEXT 19.92

SYNONYMS

māṭṛ-bhakti—devotion to His mother; pralāpana—words of madness; bhittye—on the walls; mukha-gharṣaṇa—rubbing His face; kṛṣṇa-gandha—of Lord Kṛṣṇa's fragrance; sphūrṭye—on the appearance; divya-nṛtya—transcendental dancing; ei—these; cāri—four; līlā—pastimes; bhede—different; gāila—has sung; ei paricchede—in this chapter; kṛṣṇadāsa—Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja; rūpa-gosāṇi-bhṛtya—servant of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī.

TRANSLATION

Thus, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, the servant of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, have sung of four divisions of the Lord's pastimes in this chapter: the Lord's devotion to His mother, His words of madness, His rubbing His face against the walls at night, and His dancing at the appearance of Lord Kṛṣṇa's fragrance.

PURPORT

Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī says that he has been able to describe these four pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu by the blessings of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī. Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī was not actually a direct disciple of Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī, but he followed the instructions given by Śrīla Rūpa Gosvāmī in Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu. He therefore acted according to the directions of Rūpa Gosvāmī and prayed in every chapter for his mercy.

SYNONYMS

alaukika—uncommon; kṛṣṇa-līlā—pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa; divya-śakti—transcendental potency; tāra—of that; tarkera—of argument; gocara—within the purview; nahe—is not; caritra—the characteristics; yāhāra—of which.

TRANSLATION

The pastimes of Lord Kṛṣṇa are uncommonly full of transcendental potency. It is a characteristic of such pastimes that they do not fall within the jurisdiction of experimental logic and arguments.

Antya TEXT 19.104

SYNONYMS

ihāra—of these talks; satyatve—in the truthfulness; pramāṇa—the evidence; śrī-bhāgavate—in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam; śrī-rādhāra—of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; prema-pralāpa—talking crazily in ecstatic love; bhramara-gītāte—in the section known as Bhramara-gītā.

TRANSLATION

The evidence of the truth of these talks is found in Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. There, in the section of the Tenth Canto known as the Bhramara-gītā, "the Song to the Bumblebee," Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī speaks insanelly in ecstatic love for Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

When Uddhava arrived from Mathurā carrying a message for the gopīs, the gopīs began talking about Kṛṣṇa and crying. Then one important gopī saw a bumblebee and began speaking to it like someone mad, thinking that the bee was a messenger of Uddhava's or was someone very dear to him and Kṛṣṇa. The verses are as follows (SB. 10.47.12-21):

madhupa kitava-bandho mā sprśāṅghriṁ sapatnyāḥ kuca-vilulita-mālā-kuṅkuma-śmaśrubhir naḥ vahatu madhu-patis tan-māninīnām prasādam

yadu-sadasi viḍambyam yasya dūtas tvam īdrk

"My dear bumblebee, you are a very cunning friend of Uddhava and Kṛṣṇa. You are very expert in touching people's feet, but I am not going to be misled by this. You appear to have sat on the breasts of one of Kṛṣṇa's friends, for I see that you have kuṅkuma dust on your mustache. Kṛṣṇa is now engaged in flattering all His young girl friends in Mathurā. Therefore, now that He can be called a friend of the residents of Mathurā, He does not need the help of the residents of Vṛndāvana. He has no reason to satisfy us gopīs. Since you are the messenger of such a person as He, what is the use of your presence here? Certainly Kṛṣṇa would be ashamed of your presence in this assembly."

How has Kṛṣṇa offended the gopīs so that they want to reject Him from their minds? The answer is given as follows:

sakṛd adhara-sudhām svām mohinīm pāyayitvā sumanasa iva sadyas tatyaje 'smān bhavādrk paricarati katham tat-pāda-padmaṁ tu padmā

hy api bata hr̥ta-cetā uttama-śloka-jalpaiḥ

"Kṛṣṇa no longer gives us the enchanting nectar of His lips; instead, He now gives that nectar to the women of Mathurā. Kṛṣṇa directly attracts our minds, yet He resembles a bumblebee like you because He gives up the association of a beautiful flower and goes to a flower that is inferior. That is the way Kṛṣṇa has treated us. I do not know why the goddess of fortune continues to serve His lotus feet instead of leaving them aside. Apparently she believes in Kṛṣṇa's false words. We gopīs, however, are not unintelligent like Lakṣmī."

After hearing the bumblebee's sweet songs and recognizing that the bee was singing about Kṛṣṇa for Her satisfaction, the gopī replied, kim iha bahu ṣaḍaṅghre gāyasi tvaṁ yadūnām

adhipatim agrhāṇām agrato naḥ purāṇam

vijaya-sakha-sakhīnām gīyatām tat-prasaṅgaḥ kṣapita-kucarujaḥ te kalpayantīṣṭam iṣṭāḥ

"Dear bumblebee, Lord Kṛṣṇa has no residence here, but we know Him as Yadupati [the King of the Yadu dynasty]. We know Him very well, and therefore we are not interested in hearing any more songs about Him. It would be better for you to go sing to those who are now very dear to Kṛṣṇa. Those women of Mathurā have now achieved the opportunity to be embraced by Him. They are His beloveds now, and therefore He has relieved the burning in their breasts. If you go there and sing your songs to those fortunate women, they will be very pleased, and they will honor you."

"O collector of honey, Kṛṣṇa must be very sorry not to see us gopīs. Surely He is afflicted by memories of our pastimes. Therefore He has sent you as a messenger to satisfy us. Do not speak to us! All the women in the three worlds where death is inevitable-the heavenly, middle and lower planets-are very easily available to Kṛṣṇa because His curved eyebrows are so attractive. Moreover, He is always served very faithfully by the goddess of fortune. In comparison with her, we are most insignificant. Indeed, we are nothing. Yet although He is very cunning, Kṛṣṇa is also very charitable. You may inform Him that He is praised for His kindness to unfortunate persons and that He is therefore known as Uttamaśloka, one who is praised by chosen words and verses."

"You are buzzing at My feet just to be forgiven for your past offenses. Kindly go away from My feet! I know that Mukunda has taught you to speak very sweet, flattering words like this and to act as His messenger. These are certainly clever tricks, My dear bumblebee, but I can understand them. This is Kṛṣṇa's offense. Do not tell Kṛṣṇa what I have said, although I know that you are very envious. We gopīs have given up our husbands, our sons, and all the religious principles that promise better births, and now we have no other business then serving Kṛṣṇa. Yet Kṛṣṇa, by controlling His mind, has easily forgotten us. Therefore, don't speak of Him any more. Let us forget our relationship."

"When we remember the past births of Kṛṣṇa, My dear bumblebee, we are very afraid of Him. In His incarnation as Lord Rāmacandra, He acted just like a hunter and unjustly killed His friend Vāli. Lusty Śūrpaṅakhā came to satisfy Rāmacandra's desires, but He was so attached to Sītādevī that He cut off Śūrpaṅakhā's nose. In His incarnation as Vāmanadeva, He plundered Bali Mahārāja and took all his possessions, cheating him on the pretext of accepting worship from him. Vāmanadeva caught Bali Mahārāja exactly as one catches a crow. My dear bumblebee, it is not very good to make friends with such a person. I know that once one begins to talk about Kṛṣṇa, it is very difficult to stop, and I admit that I have insufficient strength to give up talking about Him."

"Topics about Kṛṣṇa are so powerful that they destroy the four religious principles-religion, economic development, sense gratification and liberation. Anyone who drinks even a small drop of kṛṣṇa-kathā through aural reception is freed from all material attachment and envy. Like a bird with no means of subsistence, such a person becomes a mendicant and lives by begging. Ordinary household affairs become miserable for him, and without attachment he suddenly gives up everything. Although such renunciation is quite suitable, because I am a woman I am unable to adopt it."

"O My dear messenger, I am just like a foolish bird that hears the sweet songs of a hunter, believes in them due to simplicity, and is then pierced in the heart and made to suffer all kinds of miseries. Because we believed in Kṛṣṇa's words, we have suffered great pain. Indeed, the touch of Kṛṣṇa's nails has injured our faces. He has caused us so much pain! Therefore, you should give up topics concerning Him and talk about something else."

After hearing all these statements from Śrīmatī Rādhikā, the bumblebee left and then returned. After some thought, the gopī said:

priya-sakha punar āgāḥ preyasā preṣitaḥ kim

"You are Kṛṣṇa's very dear friend, and by His order you have come here again. Therefore you are worshipable for Me. O best of messengers, tell Me now, what is your request? What do you want? Kṛṣṇa cannot give up conjugal love, and therefore I understand that you have come here to take us to Him. But how will you do that? We know many goddesses of fortune now reside at Kṛṣṇa's chest, and they constantly serve Kṛṣṇa better than we can."

Praising the bumblebee for its sobriety, She began to speak in great jubilation.

"Kṛṣṇa is now living like a gentleman at the Gurukula in Mathurā, forgetting all the gopīs of Vṛndāvana. But does He not remember the sweet house of His father, Nanda Mahārāja? We are all naturally His maidservants. Does He not remember us? Does He ever speak about us, or has He forgotten us completely? Will He ever forgive us and once again touch us with those hands fragrant with the scent of aguru?"

SYNONYMS

mahiṣīra—of the queens; gīta—the songs; yena—just as; daśamera—of the Tenth Canto; śeṣe—at the end; pañḍite—very learned scholars; nā—not; bujhe—understand; tāra—its; artha-viśeṣe—particular meaning.

TRANSLATION

The songs of the queens at Dvārakā, which are mentioned at the end of the Tenth Canto of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, have a very special meaning. They are not understood even by the most learned scholars.

PURPORT

These songs of Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam are verses 15-24 of the Ninetieth Chapter of the Tenth Canto.

All the queens incessantly thought of Kṛṣṇa. After their pastimes in the water, the queens said, "Our dear friend the osprey, Kṛṣṇa is now asleep, but we stay awake at night because of Him. You laugh at us when you see us awake at night, but why are you not sleeping? You seem absorbed in thoughts of Kṛṣṇa. Have you also been pierced by Kṛṣṇa's smile? His smile is very sweet. One who is pierced by such an arrow is very fortunate."

"O cakravāki, you keep your eyes wide open at night because you cannot see your friend. Indeed, you are suffering very much. Is it because of compassion that you are crying, or are you trying to capture Kṛṣṇa by remembering Him? Having been touched by the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, all the queens are very happy. Are you crying to wear Kṛṣṇa's garland on your head? Please answer these questions clearly, O cakravāki, so that we can understand."

"O rivers, wives of the ocean, we see that the ocean does not give you happiness. Thus you have almost dried up, and you no longer bear beautiful lotuses. The lotuses have become skinny, and even in the sunshine they are devoid of all pleasure. Similarly, the hearts of us poor queens are all dried up, and our bodies are skinny because we are now devoid of loving affairs with Madhupati. Are you, like us, dry and without beauty because you are devoid of Kṛṣṇa's loving glance?"

Has Kṛṣṇa said something about us to you? May we inquire from you whether Kṛṣṇa is happy? We want to know. Does He remember us? We know that the goddess of fortune is serving Him alone. We are simply maidservants. How can we worship He who speaks sweet words but never fulfills our desires?"

TRANSLATION

Praying at the lotus feet of Śrī Rūpa and Śrī Raghunātha, always desiring their mercy, I, Kṛṣṇadāsa, narrate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, following in their footsteps.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Nineteenth Chapter, describing the Lord's devotion to His mother, His mad speeches in separation from Kṛṣṇa, His rubbing His face against the walls, and His dancing in the Jagannātha-vallabha garden.

Chapter 20 The Śikṣāṣṭaka Prayers

The following summary study of the Twentieth Chapter is given by Śrīla Bhaktivinoda Ṭhākura in his Amṛta-pravāha-bhāṣya. Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu passed His nights tasting the meaning of Śikṣāṣṭaka in the company of Svarūpa Dāmodara Gosvāmī and Rāmānanda Rāya. Sometimes He recited verses from Jayadeva Gosvāmī's Gīta-govinda, from Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, from Śrī Rāmānanda Rāya's jagannātha-vallabha-nāṭaka or from Śrī Bilvamaṅgala Ṭhākura's Kṛṣṇa-karṇāmṛta. In this way, He became absorbed in ecstatic emotions. For the twelve years Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu lived at Jagannātha Purī, He relished the taste of reciting such transcendental verses. The Lord was present in this mortal world for forty-eight years altogether. After hinting about the Lord's disappearance, the author of Caitanya-caritāmṛta gives a short description of the entire Antya-līlā and then ends his book.

premera sva-bhāva—the nature of love of Godhead; yāhāṇ—where; premera sambandha—a relationship of love of Godhead; sei māne—he recognizes; kṛṣṇe—unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; mora—my; nāhi—there is not; prema-gandha—even a scent of love of Godhead.

TRANSLATION

Wherever there is a relationship of love of Godhead, its natural symptom is that the devotee does not think himself a devotee. Instead, he always thinks that he has not even a drop of love for Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura comments that persons who are actually very poor because they possess not even a drop of love of Godhead or pure devotional service falsely advertise themselves as great devotees, although they cannot at any time relish the transcendental bliss of devotional service. A class of so-called devotees known as prākṛta-sahajiyās sometimes display devotional symptoms to exhibit their good fortune. They are pretending, however, because these devotional features are only external. The prākṛta-sahajiyās exhibit these symptoms to advertise their so-called advancement in love of Kṛṣṇa, but instead of praising the prākṛta-sahajiyās for their symptoms of transcendental ecstasy, pure devotees do not like to associate with them. It is not advisable to equate the prākṛta-sahajiyās with pure devotees. When one is actually advanced in ecstatic love of Kṛṣṇa, he does not try to advertise himself. Instead, he endeavors more and more to render service to the Lord.

The prākṛta-sahajiyās sometimes criticize pure devotees by calling them philosophers, learned scholars, knowers of the truth, or minute observers, but not devotees. On the other hand, they depict themselves as the most advanced, transcendently blissful devotees, deeply absorbed in devotional service and mad to taste transcendental mellows. They also describe themselves as the most advanced devotees in spontaneous love, as knowers of transcendental mellows, as the topmost devotees in conjugal love of Kṛṣṇa, and so on. Not actually knowing the transcendental nature of love of God, they accept their material emotions to be indicative of advancement. In this way they pollute the process of devotional service. To try to become writers of Vaiṣṇava literature, they introduce their material conceptions of life into pure devotional service. Because of their material conceptions, they advertise themselves as knowers of transcendental mellows, but they do not understand the transcendental nature of devotional service.

SYNONYMS

āmi—I; kṛṣṇa-pada-dāsī—a maidservant at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa; teṇho—He; rasa-sukha-rāśi—the reservoir of transcendental mellows; āliṅgiyā—by embracing; kare—makes; ātma-sātha—merged; kibā—or; nā deya—does not give; daraśana—audience; jārena—corrodes; mora—My; tanu-mana—body and mind; tabu—still; teṇho—He; mora prāṇa-nātha—the Lord of My life.

TRANSLATION

"I am a maidservant at the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa. He is the embodiment of transcendental happiness and mellows. If He likes He can tightly embrace Me and make Me feel oneness with Him, or by not giving Me His audience, He may corrode My mind and body. Nevertheless, it is He who is the Lord of My life.

TRANSLATION

"I do not mind My personal distress. I only wish for the happiness of Kṛṣṇa, for His happiness is the goal of My life. However, if He feels great happiness in giving Me distress, that distress is the best of My happiness.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that a devotee does not care about his own happiness and distress; he is simply interested in seeing that Kṛṣṇa is happy, and for that purpose he engages in various activities. A pure devotee has no way of sensing happiness except by seeing that Kṛṣṇa is happy in every respect. If Kṛṣṇa becomes happy by giving him distress, such a devotee accepts that unhappiness as the greatest of all happiness. Those who are materialistic, however, who are very proud of material wealth and have no spiritual knowledge, like the prākṛta-sahajiyās, regard their own happiness as the aim of life. Some of them aspire to enjoy themselves by sharing the happiness of Kṛṣṇa. This is the mentality of fruitive workers who want to enjoy sense gratification by making a show of service to Kṛṣṇa.

SYNONYMS

ye nārīre—the woman whom; vāñche kṛṣṇa—Kṛṣṇa desires to have in His company; tāra rūpe satṛṣṇa—attracted to her beauty; tāre—her; nā pāñā—not getting; haya duḥkhī—becomes unhappy; mui—I; tāra pāya paḍi'-falling down at her feet; lañā yāñā—taking, go; hāte dhari'-catching the hand; krīḍā—pastimes; karāñā—bringing about; tāñre—Lord Kṛṣṇa; karoñ sukhī—I make happy.

TRANSLATION

"If Kṛṣṇa, attracted by the beauty of some other woman, wants to enjoy with her but is unhappy because He cannot get her, I fall down at her feet, catch her hand and bring her to Kṛṣṇa to engage her for His happiness.

Antya TEXT 20.54

SYNONYMS

kāntā—the beloved; kṛṣṇe—unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; kare roṣa—shows anger; kṛṣṇa pāya santoṣa—Kṛṣṇa becomes very happy; sukha pāya—obtains happiness; tāḍana-bhartsane—by chastisement; yathā-yogya—as it is suitable; kare māna—shows pride; kṛṣṇa—Lord Kṛṣṇa; tāte—in such activities; sukha pāna—obtains happiness; chāḍe māna—gives up pride; alpa-sādhane—by a little endeavor.

TRANSLATION

"When a beloved gopī shows symptoms of anger toward Kṛṣṇa, Kṛṣṇa is very satisfied. Indeed, He is pleased when chastised by such a gopī. She shows her pride suitably, and Kṛṣṇa enjoys that attitude. Then she gives up her pride with a little endeavor.

SYNONYMS

sei nārī—that woman; jīye—lives; kene—why; kṛṣṇa-marma—Kṛṣṇa's heart; vyathā—unhappy; jāne—knows; tabu—still; kṛṣṇe—unto Kṛṣṇa; kare—does; gāḍha roṣa—deep anger; nija-sukhe—in her own happiness; māne—considers; kāja—the only business; paḍuka—let there fall; tāre—of her; śire—on the head; vāja—a thunderbolt; kṛṣṇera—of Kṛṣṇa; mātra—only; cāhiye—we want; santoṣa—the happiness.

TRANSLATION

"Why does a woman continue to live who knows that Kṛṣṇa's heart is unhappy but who still shows her deep anger toward Him? She is interested in her own happiness. I condemn such a woman to be struck on the head with a thunderbolt, for we simply want the happiness of Kṛṣṇa.

PURPORT

A devotee who is satisfied only with his own sense gratification certainly falls down from the service of Kṛṣṇa. Being attracted by material happiness, he later joins the prākṛta-sahajiyās, who are considered to be nondevotees.

SYNONYMS

ye gopī—any gopī who; mora—unto Me; kare dveṣe—shows envy; kṛṣṇera kare santoṣe—but satisfies Kṛṣṇa; kṛṣṇa—unto Lord Kṛṣṇa; yāre—unto whom; kare—does; abhilāṣa—desiring; mui—I; tāra—her; ghare yāñā—going to the house; tāre sevon—shall render service unto her; dāsī hañā—becoming a maidservant;

tabe—then; mora—My; sukhera ullāsa—awakening of happiness.

TRANSLATION

"If a gopī envious of Me satisfies Kṛṣṇa and Kṛṣṇa desires her, I shall not hesitate to go to her house and become her maidservant, for then My happiness will be awakened.

kuṣṭhī-viprera ramaṇī, pativratā-śiromaṇi, pati lāgi' kailā veśyāra sevā stambhila sūryera gati, jīyāila mṛta pati, tuṣṭa kaila mukhya tina-devā //CC Antya, 20.57//

SYNONYMS

kuṣṭhī-viprera—of the brāhmaṇa who suffered from leprosy; ramaṇī—the wife; pati-vratā-śiromaṇi—the topmost of chaste women; pati lāgi'-for the satisfaction of her husband; kailā—performed; veśyāra sevā—service to a prostitute; stambhila—stopped; sūryera gati—the movement of the sun; jīyāila—revived; mṛta pati—the dead husband; tuṣṭa kaila—satisfied; mukhya—the principal; tina-devā—three deities or demigods.

TRANSLATION

"The wife of a brāhmaṇa suffering from leprosy manifested herself as the topmost of all chaste women by serving a prostitute to satisfy her husband. She thus stopped the movement of the sun, brought her dead husband back to life and satisfied the three principal demigods [Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Maheśvara].

PURPORT

The Āditya purāṇa, Mārkeṇḍeya Purāṇa and Padma Purāṇa tell about a brāhmaṇa who was suffering from leprosy but had a very chaste and faithful wife. He desired to enjoy the company of a prostitute, and therefore his wife went to her and became her maidservant, just to draw her attention for his service. When the prostitute agreed to associate with him, the wife brought her the leprotic husband. When that leper, the sinful son of a brāhmaṇa, saw the chastity of his wife, he finally abandoned his sinful intentions. While coming home, however, he touched the body of Mārkeṇḍeya Ṛṣi, who thus cursed him to die at sunrise. Because of her chastity, the woman was very powerful. Therefore when she heard about the curse, she vowed to stop the sunrise. Because of her strong determination to serve her husband, the three deities—namely Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Maheśvara—were very happy, and they gave her the benediction that her husband would be cured and brought back to life. This example is given herein to emphasize that a devotee should engage himself exclusively for the satisfaction of Kṛṣṇa, without personal motives. That will make his life successful.

SYNONYMS

mora sukha—My happiness; sevane—in service; kṛṣṇera sukha—Kṛṣṇa's happiness; saṅgame—by union with Me; ataeva—therefore; deha—My body; deña—I offer; dāna—as charity; kṛṣṇa—Lord Kṛṣṇa; more—Me; kāntā kari'-accepting as beloved; kahe—says; more—to Me; prāṇa-īśvari—the most beloved; mora—My; haya—there is; dāsī-abhimāna—considering His maidservant.

TRANSLATION

"My happiness is in the service of Kṛṣṇa, and Kṛṣṇa's happiness is in union with Me. For this reason, I give My body in charity to the lotus feet of Kṛṣṇa, who accepts Me as His loved one and calls Me His most beloved. It is then that I consider Myself His maidservant.

SYNONYMS

kānta-sevā-sukha-pūra—the service of the Lord is the home of happiness; saṅgama haite su-madhura—sweeter than direct union; tāte—in that; sākṣī—evidence; lakṣmī ṭhākurāṇī—the goddess of fortune; nārāyaṇa-hṛdi—on the heart of Nārāyaṇa; sthiti—situation; tabu—still; pāda-sevāya mati—her desire is to serve the lotus feet; sevā kare—renders service; dāsī-abhimānī—considering herself a maidservant.

TRANSLATION

"Service to My lover is the home of happiness and is more sweet than direct union with Him. The goddess of fortune is evidence of this, for although she constantly lives on the heart of Nārāyaṇa, she wants to render service to His lotus feet. She therefore considers herself a maidservant and serves Him constantly."

SYNONYMS

ei—this; rādhāra vacana—the statement of Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī; viśuddha-prema-lakṣaṇa—the symptoms of pure love of Kṛṣṇa; āsvādaye—tastes; śrī-gaura-rāya—Lord Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; bhāve—because of this ecstasy; mana nahe sthira—the mind is not steady; sāttvike—the symptoms of transcendental love; vyāpe—spread over; śarīra—the body; mana-deha—mind and body; dharaṇa—sustaining; nā yāya—is not possible.

TRANSLATION

These statements by Śrīmatī Rādhārāṇī show the symptoms of pure love for Kṛṣṇa tasted by Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. In that ecstatic love, His mind was unsteady. Transformations of transcendental love spread throughout His entire body, and He could not sustain His body and mind.

SYNONYMS

vrajera—of Vṛndāvana; viśuddha-prema—the pure love of Kṛṣṇa; yena—like; jāmbū-nada hema—the golden particles found in the Jāmbū River; ātma-sukhera—of personal sense gratification; yāhān—where; nāhi gandha—there is not even a scent; se prema—that love of Godhead; jānā'te loke—to advertise among the people; prabhu—Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; kailā—has written; ei śloke—this verse; pade—in different steps; kailā arthera nirbandha—has clarified the real meaning.

TRANSLATION

The pure devotional service in Vṛndāvana is like the golden particles in the River Jāmbū. In Vṛndāvana there is not a trace of personal sense gratification. It is to advertise such pure love in this material world that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu has written the previous verse and explained its meaning.

Antya TEXT 20.63

ei-mata mahāprabhu bhāvāviṣṭa hañā

vṛndāvana-dāsa—Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura; prathama—at first; ye—whatever; līlā—pastimes; varṇila—described; sei-saba—all of those; līlāra—of the pastimes; āmi—I; sūtra-mātra kaila—prepared only the synopsis.

TRANSLATION

Whatever pastimes Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura has first described I have merely summarized.

Antya TEXT 20.74

tānra tyakta 'avaśeṣa' saṅkṣepe kahila

līlāra bāhulye grantha tathāpi bāḍila //CC Antya, 20.74//

SYNONYMS

tānra—his; tyakta—left out; aveśeṣa—remainders; saṅkṣepe kahila—I have described very briefly; līlāra bāhulye—because of the numerousness of the pastimes; grantha—this book; tathāpi—still; bāḍila—has increased.

TRANSLATION

I have only very briefly described the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu not described by Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura. Nevertheless, because those transcendental pastimes are so numerous, the size of this book has increased.

Antya TEXT 20.75

ataeva sei-saba līlā nā pāri varṇibāre

samāpti kariluṅ līlāke kari' namaskāre //CC Antya, 20.75//

SYNONYMS

ataeva—therefore; sei-saba—all those; līlā—pastimes; nā pāri—I am not able; varṇibāre—to narrate; samāpti kariluṅ—now I have finished; līlāke—to the pastimes; kari' namaskāre—offering my respectful obeisances.

TRANSLATION

It is impossible to describe all the pastimes elaborately. I shall therefore end this description and offer them my respectful obeisances.

Antya TEXT 20.76

ye kichu kahiluṅ ei dig-daraśana ei anusāre habe tāra āsvādana //CC Antya, 20.76//

SYNONYMS

ye kichu—whatever; kahiluṅ—I have said; ei—this; dik-daraśana—just to make an indication; ei anusāre—in this way; habe—there will be; tāra—of that; āsvādana—tasting.

TRANSLATION

What I have described gives merely an indication, but by following this indication one may obtain a taste of all the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Antya TEXT 20.77

prabhura gambhīra-līlā nā pāri bujhite

buddhi-praveśa nāhi tāte, nā pāri varṇite //CC Antya, 20.77//

SYNONYMS

prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; gambhīra—deep; līlā—the pastimes; nā pāri—I am not able; bujhite—to understand; buddhi-praveśa nāhi—my intelligence cannot penetrate; tāte—because of this; nā pāri—I am not able; varṇite—to describe properly.

TRANSLATION

I cannot understand the very deep, meaningful pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu. My intelligence cannot penetrate them, and therefore I could not properly describe them.

Antya TEXT 20.78

saba śrotā vaiṣṇavera vandiyā caraṇa

caitanya-caritra-varṇana kailuṇ samāpana //CC Antya, 20.78//

SYNONYMS

saba śrotā—all readers; vaiṣṇavera—of the Vaiṣṇavas; vandiyā caraṇa—offering respectful obeisances unto the lotus feet; caitanya-caritra—of the characteristics of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; varṇana—description; kailuṇ—I have done; samāpana—finishing.

TRANSLATION

After offering my respectful obeisances to the lotus feet of all my Vaiṣṇava readers, I shall therefore end this description of the characteristics of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Antya TEXT 20.79

ākāśa--ananta, tāte yaiche pakṣi-gaṇa

yāra yata śakti, tata kare ārohaṇa //CC Antya, 20.79//

SYNONYMS

ākāśa—the sky; ananta—unlimited; tāte—in that sky; yaiche—just as; pakṣi-gaṇa—all types of birds; yāra—of someone; yata śakti—whatever power; tata—that much; kare ārohaṇa—rises up and up.

TRANSLATION

The sky is unlimited, but many birds fly higher and higher according to their own abilities.

Antya TEXT 20.80

aiche mahāprabhura līlā--nāhi ora-pāra

'jīva' hañā kebā samyak pāre varṇibāra? //CC Antya, 20.80//

SYNONYMS

aiche—similarly; mahāprabhura līlā—the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; nāhi ora-pāra—there is no limit above or below; jīva hañā—being an ordinary living entity; kebā—who; samyak—fully; pāre—is able; varṇibāra—to describe.

TRANSLATION

The pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu are like the unlimited sky. How, then, can an ordinary living being describe them all?

Antya TEXT 20.81

yāvat buddhira gati, tateka varṇiluṅ samudrera madhye yena eka kaṇa chuṇiluṅ //CC Antya, 20.81//

SYNONYMS

yāvat—as far; buddhira gati—the limit of my intelligence; tateka—that far; varṇiluṅ—I have described; samudrera madhye—in the midst of the great ocean; yena—just like; eka kaṇa—one particle; chuṇiluṅ—I have touched.

TRANSLATION

I have tried to describe them as far as my intelligence allows, as if trying to touch a drop in the midst of a great ocean.

Antya TEXT 20.82

nityānanda-kṛpā-pātra--vṛndāvana-dāsa

caitanya-līlāya teṅho hayena 'ādi-vyāsa' //CC Antya, 20.82//

SYNONYMS

nityānanda—of Lord Nityānanda Prabhu; kṛpā-pātra—the favorite devotee; vṛndāvana-dāsa—Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura; caitanya-līlāya—in the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; teṅho—He; hayena—is; ādi-vyāsa—the original Vyāsadeva.

TRANSLATION

Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura is Lord Nityānanda's favorite devotee, and therefore he is the original Vyāsadeva in describing the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

PURPORT

Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that all writers after Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura who are pure devotees of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and who have tried to describe the Lord's activities are to be considered like Vyāsa. Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura is the original Vyāsadeva in describing caitanya-līlā, and all others who follow in his footsteps by describing Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastimes are also to be called Vyāsadeva. The bona fide spiritual master is called Vyāsa because he is a representative of Vyāsa. Worshiping the birthday of such a spiritual master is called Vyāsa-pūjā.

Antya TEXT 20.83

tānra āge yadyapi saba līlāra bhāṇḍāra

tathāpi alpa varṇiyā chāḍilena āra //CC Antya, 20.83//

SYNONYMS

tānra āge—before him; yadyapi—although; saba—all; līlāra—of the pastimes; bhāṇḍāra—full store; tathāpi—still; alpa—very little; varṇiyā—describing; chāḍilena—he left; āra—the others.

TRANSLATION

Although Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura has within his jurisdiction the full store of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastimes, he has left aside most of them and described but a small portion.

Antya TEXT 20.84

ye kichu varṇiluṇ, seha saṅkṣepa kariyā

likhite nā pārena, tabu rākhiyāchena likhiyā //CC Antya, 20.84//

SYNONYMS

ye kichu varṇiluṇ—whatever I have described; seha—they; saṅkṣepa—briefly; kariyā—doing; likhite nā pārena—Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura was not able to describe; tabu—still; rākhiyāchena—has kept; likhiyā—recording in writing.

TRANSLATION

What I have described was left aside by Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura, but although he could not describe these pastimes, he gave us a synopsis.

Antya TEXT 20.85

caitanya-maṅgale teṅho likhiyāche sthāne-sthāne sei vacana śuna, sei parama-pramāṇe //CC Antya, 20.85//

SYNONYMS

caitanya-maṅgale—in the book named Caitanya-maṅgala; teṅho—Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura; likhiyāche—has written; sthāne-sthāne—in several places; sei vacana śuna—please hear those statements; sei parama-pramāṇe—that is the foremost proof.

TRANSLATION

In his book named Caitanya-maṅgala [Caitanya-bhāgavata], he has described these pastimes in many places. I request my readers to hear that book, for that is the best evidence.

Antya TEXT 20.86

saṅkṣepe kahiluṅ, vistāra nā yāya kathane

vistāriyā veda-vyāsa kariba varṇane //CC Antya, 20.86//

SYNONYMS

saṅkṣepe kahiluṅ—I have described very briefly; vistāra nā yāya kathane—it is not possible to describe them in full; vistāriyā—elaborating; veda-vyāsa—a representative of Vyāsadeva; kariba—will do; varṇane—describing.

TRANSLATION

I have described the pastimes very briefly, for it is impossible for me to describe them in full. In the future, however, Vedavyāsa will describe them elaborately.

Antya TEXT 20.87

caitanya-maṅgale ihā likhiyāche sthāne-sthāne

satya kahena,--'āge vyāsa kariba varṇane' //CC Antya, 20.87//

SYNONYMS

caitanya-maṅgale—in the book named Caitanya-maṅgala; ihā—this statement; likhiyāche—has written; sthāne-sthāne—in many places; satya—the truth; kahena—he says; āge—in the future; vyāsa kariba varṇane—Vyāsadeva will describe them more elaborately.

TRANSLATION

In Caitanya-maṅgala, Śrīla Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura has stated in many places the factual truth that in the future Vyāsadeva will describe them elaborately.

PURPORT

The statement āge vyāsa kariba varṇane is similar to a text in the Caitanya-bhāgavata (First Chapter, text 180) in which Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura says:

śeṣa-khaṇḍe caitanyera ananta vilāsa

vistāriyā varṇite āchena veda-vyāsa

"The unlimited pastimes of Śrī Caitanya will be described by Vyāsadeva in the future." Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura says that these statements indicate that in the future, other representatives of Vyāsadeva will elaborately describe Lord Caitanya's pastimes. The purport is that any pure devotee in the disciplic succession who describes the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is confirmed to be a representative of Vyāsadeva.

Antya TEXT 20.88

caitanya-līlā-mṛta-sindhu--dugdhābdhi-samāna ṭṛṣṇānurūpa jhārī bhari' teṅho kailā pāna //CC Antya, 20.88//

SYNONYMS

caitanya-līlā-amṛta-sindhu—the ocean of nectarean pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; dugdha-abdhi-samāna—exactly like the ocean of milk; ṭṛṣṇā-anurūpa—according to one's thirst; jhārī—the pitcher; bhari'-filling; teṅho—he; kailā pāna—drank.

TRANSLATION

The ocean of nectarean pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu is like the ocean of milk. According to his thirst, Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura filled his pitcher and drank from that ocean.

Antya TEXT 20.89

tānra jhārī-śeṣāmṛta kichu more dilā

tateke bharila peṭa, tṛṣṇā mora gelā //CC Antya, 20.89//

SYNONYMS

tānra jhārī-śeṣa-amṛta—the remnants of the milk of Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura's pitcher; kichu—some; more dilā—has given to me; tateke—by those remnants; bharila peṭa—my abdomen is filled; tṛṣṇā mora gelā—now my thirst has gone.

TRANSLATION

Whatever remnants of milk Vṛndāvana dāsa Ṭhākura has given me are sufficient to fill my belly. Now my thirst is completely satiated.

Antya TEXTS 20.90-91

āmi--ati-kṣudra jīva, pakṣī rāṅgā-ṭuni

SYNONYMS

āmi—I; ati-kṣudra jīva—a very insignificant living being; pakṣī rāṅgā-ṭuni—just like a little bird with a red beak; se—he; yaiche—just as; tṛṣṇāya—in thirst; piye—drinks; samudrera pānī—the water of the sea; taiche—in the same way; āmi—I; eka kaṇa—one small particle; chuñiluṇ—touched; līlāra—of the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; ei dṛṣṭānte—by this example; jāniha—all of you know; prabhura—of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu; līlāra vistāra—expansion of the pastimes.

TRANSLATION

I am a very insignificant living being, like a small red-beaked bird. Just as such a bird drinks the water of the sea to quench its thirst, so I have touched only a drop of the ocean of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's pastimes. From this example, you may all understand how expansive are the pastimes of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu.

Antya TEXT 20.92

'āmi likhi',--eha mithyā kari anumāna

āmāra śarīra kāṣṭha-putalī-samāna //CC Antya, 20.92//

SYNONYMS

āmi likhi—I write; eha mithyā—this is false; kari anumāna—I can infer; āmāra śarīra—my body; kāṣṭha-putalī-samāna—is exactly like a wooden doll.

TRANSLATION

I infer that "I have written" is a false understanding, for my body is like a wooden doll.

Antya TEXT 20.93

SYNONYMS

vṛddha—an old man; jarā-ātura—troubled by invalidity; āmi—I; andha—blind; badhira—deaf; hasta hāle—my hands tremble; manaḥ-buddhi—mind and intelligence; nahe—not; mora—my; sthira—steady.

TRANSLATION

I am old and troubled by invalidity. I am almost blind and deaf, my hands tremble, and my mind and intelligence are unsteady.

Antya TEXT 20.94

nānā-roga-grasta,--calite vasite nā pāri pañca-roga-pīḍā-vyākula, rātri-dine mari //CC Antya, 20.94//

SYNONYMS

nānā-roga-grasta—affected by so many diseases; calite—to walk; vasite—to sit down; nā pāri—I am not properly able; pañca-roga-pīḍā-vyākula—always disturbed by five kinds of disease; rātri-dine—day or night; mari—I can die any time.

TRANSLATION

I am infected by so many diseases that I can neither properly walk nor properly sit. Indeed, I am always exhausted by five kinds of disease. I may die at any time of the day or night.

Antya TEXT 20.95

TRANSLATION

The mercy of their lotus feet is my spiritual master, and my words are my disciples that I have made dance in various ways.

PURPORT

Upādhyāyī, or upādhyāya, refers to one who teaches when approached (upetya adhīyate asmāt). In the Manu-saṁhitā it is said:

eka-deśam tu vedasya

vedāṅgāny api vā punaḥ yo 'dhyāpayati vṛtty-artham

upādhyāyaḥ sa ucyate

"One who teaches others a part of the Vedas or literatures supplementary to the Vedas may be called upādhyāya." Upādhyāya also refers to one who teaches art.

TRANSLATION

Caitanya-caritāmṛta is filled with the activities of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu, who is the Supreme Personality of Godhead Himself. It invokes all good fortune and destroys everything inauspicious. If one tastes the nectar of Caitanya-caritāmṛta with faith and love, I become like a bumblebee tasting the honey of transcendental love from his lotus feet.

TRANSLATION

In Vṛndāvana in the year 1537, Śakābda Era, in the month of Jyaiṣṭha [May-June], on Sunday, the fifth day of the waning moon, this Caitanya-caritāmṛta has been completed.

Thus end the Bhaktivedanta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, Antya-līlā, Twentieth Chapter, describing the meaning of Śikṣāṣṭaka and how the Lord tasted it Himself.

END OF THE ANTYA-LĪLĀ

Concluding Words

Today, Sunday, November 10, 1974-corresponding to the 10th of Kārtikka, Caitanya Era 488, the eleventh day of the dark fortnight, the Rāma-ekādaśī—we have now finished the English translation of Śrī Kṛṣṇadāsa Kavirāja Gosvāmī's Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta in accordance with the authorised order of His Divine Grace Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura Gosvāmī Mahārāja, my beloved eternal spiritual master, guide and friend. Although according to material vision His Divine Grace Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura Prabhupāda passed away from this material world on the last day of December, 1936, I still consider His Divine Grace to be always present with me by his vāṇī, his words. There are two ways of association-by vāṇī and by vapu. Vāṇī means words, and vapu means physical presence. Physical presence is sometimes appreciable and sometimes not, but vāṇī continues to exist eternally. Therefore we must take advantage of the vāṇī, not the physical presence. Bhagavad-gītā, for example, is the vāṇī of Lord Kṛṣṇa. Although Kṛṣṇa was personally present five thousand years ago and is no longer physically present from the materialistic point of view, Bhagavad-gītā continues.

In this connection we may call to memory the time when I was fortunate enough to meet His Divine Grace Śrīla Prabhupāda, sometime in the year 1922. Śrīla Prabhupāda had come from Calcutta to Śrīdhama Māyāpur to start the missionary activities of the Gauḍīya Maṭha. He was sitting in a house at Ulta Danga when through the inducement of an intimate friend, the late Śrīman Narendranātha Mallika, I had the opportunity to meet His Divine Grace for the first time. I do not remember the actual date of the meeting, but at that time I was one of the managers of Dr. Bose's laboratory in Calcutta. I was a newly married young man, addicted to Gandhi's movement and dressed in khadi. Fortunately, even at our first meeting, His Divine Grace advised me to preach the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu in English in the Western countries. Because at that time I was a complete nationalist, a follower of Mahātmā Gandhi's, I submitted to His Divine Grace that unless our country were freed from foreign subjugation, no one would hear the message of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu seriously. Of course, we had some argument on this subject, but at last I was defeated and convinced that Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu's message is the only panacea for suffering humanity. I was also convinced that the message of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu was then in the hands of a very expert devotee and that surely the message of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu would spread all over the world. I could not, however, immediately take up his instructions to preach, but I took his words very seriously and was always thinking of how to execute his order, although I was quite unfit to do so.

In this way I passed my life as a householder until 1950, when I retired from family life as a vānaprastha. With no companion, I loitered here and there until 1959, when I took sannyāsa. Then I was completely ready to discharge the order of my spiritual master. Previously, in 1936, just before His Divine Grace passed away at Jagannātha Purī, I wrote him a letter asking what I could do to serve him. In reply, he wrote me a letter, dated 13 December 1936, ordering me, in the same way, to preach in English the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu as I had heard it from him.

After he passed away, I started the fortnightly magazine Back to Godhead sometime in 1944 and tried to spread the cult of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu through this magazine. After I took sannyāsa, a well-wishing friend suggested that I write books instead of magazines. Magazines, he said, might be thrown away, but books remain perpetually. Then I attempted to write Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam. Before that, when I was a householder, I had written on Śrīmad Bhagavad-gītā and had completed about eleven hundred pages, but somehow or other the manuscript was stolen. In any case, when I had published Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, First Canto, in three volumes in India, I thought of going to the U.S.A. By the mercy of His Divine Grace, I was able to come to New York on September 17, 1965. Since then, I have translated many books, including Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam, Bhakti-rasāmṛta-sindhu, Teachings of Lord Caitanya (a summary) and many others.

In the meantime, I was induced to translate Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta and publish it in an elaborate version. In his leisure time in later life, His Divine Grace Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura would simply read Caitanya-caritāmṛta. It was his favorite book. He used to say that there would be a time when the foreigners would learn the Bengali language to read Caitanya-caritāmṛta. The work on this translation began about eighteen months ago. Now, by the grace of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and his Divine Grace Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura, it is finished. In this connection I have to thank my American disciples, especially Śrīman Pradyumna dāsa Adhikārī, Śrīman Nitāi dāsa Adhikārī, Śrīman Jayādvaita dāsa Brahmācārī and many other boys and girls who are sincerely helping me in writing, editing and publishing all these literatures.

I think that His Divine Grace Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura is always seeing my activities and guiding me within my heart by his words. As it is said in Śrīmad Bhāgavatam, tene brahma hṛdā ya ādi-kavaye. Spiritual inspiration comes from within the heart, wherein the Supreme Personality of Godhead, in His Paramātmā feature, is always sitting with all His devotees and associates. It is to be admitted that whatever translation work I have done is through the inspiration of my spiritual master because personally I am most insignificant and incompetent to do this materially impossible work. I do not think myself a very learned scholar, but I have full faith in the service of my spiritual master, His Divine Grace Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura. If there is any credit to my activities of translating, it is all due to His Divine Grace. Certainly if His Divine Grace were personally present at this time, it would have been a great occasion for jubilation, but even though he is not physically present, I am confident that he is very pleased by this work of translation. He was very fond of seeing many books published to spread the Kṛṣṇa consciousness movement. Therefore our society, the International Society for Kṛṣṇa Consciousness, has formed to execute the order of Śrī Caitanya Mahāprabhu and His Divine Grace Śrīla Bhaktisiddhānta Sarasvatī Ṭhākura.

It is my wish that devotees of Lord Caitanya all over the world enjoy this translation, and I am glad to express my gratitude to the learned men in the Western countries who are so pleased with my work that they are ordering in advance all my books that will be published in the future. On this occasion therefore, I request my disciples who are determined to help me in this work to continue their cooperation fully, so that philosophers, scholars, religionists and people in general all over the world will benefit by reading our transcendental literatures such as Śrīmad-Bhāgavatam and Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta.

Thus end the Bhaktivedānta purports to Śrī Caitanya-caritāmṛta, dated November 10, 1974, at the Bhaktivedānta Book Trust, Hare Kṛṣṇa Land, Juhu, Bombay.
